TARZAN OF THE APES No. 37 (Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.) By Edgar Rice Burroughs

When Clayton heard the shot, he became agonized with fear and apprehension. He knew Jane was threatened with some danger. Tarzan heard also and quickened his pace. Soon Clayton was left hopelessly behind. He called aloud to the ape-man. Tarzan dropped lightly to his side from the branches above.

Stooping down before Clayton, Tarzan motioned him to grasp him about the neck, and with the white man upon his back, took to the trees. The next few minutes were such as the Englishman never forgot. High into swaying branches he was borne with what to him was incredible swiftness.

From one lofty branch the agile creature swung with Clayton through a dizzy arc to a neighboring tree; then for a hundred yards maybe, the sure feet threaded a maze of interwoven limbs, balancing like a tight-rope walker high above the black depths. How Clayton admired those giant muscles!

Clayton fairly caught his breath at the sight of the horrid depths below them. Yet, with all his seeming speed, Tarzan was actually feeling his way with comparative slowness, searching constantly for limbs of adequate strength to hold this double weight. Presently they came to the clearing before the beach.

Tarzan's quick ears had heard the strange sounds of the lioness's efforts to force the cabin. They dropped a hundred feet—landing with scarcely a jar. The ape-man darted ahead, just in time to see the huge lioness's tawny body slowly disappearing through the window of the cabin!

OBITUARY

CLEMENT GORDON.

The death occurred at his residence, 120 Lock street, on Wednesday morning of one of the pioneers of Peterborough in the person of Clement Gordon, born at La Prairie, P.Q., 81 years ago. He was the son of the late Edward Gordon, coming to Peterborough at the age of 18 years. He was associated with the Trent Canal for a number of years. His wife, Leonice de Laplante predeceased him 18 years ago. He was highly esteemed by those who knew him in business and social life.

He leaves to mourn his loss five daughters and three sons, Mrs. M. Martyn, Mrs. J. Martyn, Albina, Josephine at home and Eva of Detroit, Alex. Gordon, Gananoque, George and Roland of Peterborough. Also two sisters, Mrs. S. Barrette and Mrs. de Laplante both of this city, 21 grandchildren and 3 great grandchildren.

The funeral will leave the family residence at 8.45 a.m. on Saturday to the Sacred Heart church and thence to St. Peter's cemetery.

waterway, I don't know" he remarked. He felt that the present marine railways might be a deterrent to some, but declared that if he returned next year he would proceed north only as far as Stoney Lake and spend his summer in its waters.

"Cruising is coming back—and coming back strong" he asserted, seeing a splendid future for power-boating in this country. The congested condition of the roads were sending many to the cool ease and leisurely comfort of the great North American waterway systems, in the Commodore's opinion. Recent improvements on the harbors of Lake Ontario between the Bay of Quinte and Toronto would attract many yachtsmen to that route, he said, and the completion of the canal and lock system on the Trent would make this an integral part of a great circular summer water highway for pleasure boats from all over the continent.

The "Carmina" has a beam of 9½ feet and a draught of 3½. She is an exceptionally seaworthy craft, was built at Lachine five years ago, and is of British register—having been duly registered at Lloyd's by Mr. Smith. Although registration of private pleasure craft is not compulsory in Canada as it is in the United States, there are many advantages to be gained by a Lloyd registration, according to Mr. Smith.

Cruising for Month

Every possible refinement of comfort and the greatest economy of space have been combined aboard the "Carmina." With Mr. Smith on the present cruise are his wife and party of four. The cruise has so far extended a full month. Leaving Lachine, the party cruised through the Thousand Islands, through Lake Ontario to the Bay of Quinte, up the Trent from Trenton to Orillia, and thence back to Peterborough, through which city the "Carmina" had already passed on her way north. The party left here for the continuation of their southward journey last night, full of praise for the City of Peterborough, its industries, and the wide-awake characteristics of its citizens.

The cruser "Aloha" owned by L. J. L'Esperance of Montreal is another craft from the basin of Mr. Smith's Club which has passed through this city during the course of the present season. The "Nomad" Colonel Birkes's big cruiser, is a third of the Iroquois vessels which have visited Peterborough.

A magnificent new boat, the 50-foot cruiser 'Vadme II'" of Chicago, tied up at the George street wharf this morning. Bearing a small party which expressed itself as "enjoying the trip immensely" the "Vadme II" is on her way from New York City to her home port of Chicago via the Trent Waterway and Georgian Bay.

WEDDING BELLS

SCHWERIE—HICKEY

A pretty wedding took place at the Church of the Immaculate Conception yesterday (Thursday) morning at 7:30 when Alta Marie daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. C. Hickey of Kinmount, was united in holy bonds of matrimony to James Beverley Schwerie, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Schwerie of this city.

The bride entered the church in a charming ankle-length gown of mauve georgette with shoes and hose to match. Her hat was of mauve mohair and angora. She carried gladioli and carnations.

The bridesmaid, Miss Cecile Mahoney of Clydesdale, wore a gown of new blue with shoes and hose to match and carried a bouquet of gladioli and carnations.

The groom was supported by Stafford Hickey of Oakville, the brother of the bride. The Rev. Dean O'Sullivan performed the ceremony.

After mass was sung, the happy couple motored to the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. E. Woodcock, 284 Rogers street, where a very dainty breakfast was served to about twenty-five guests. The house was beautifully decorated in pink and white. A bride's cake centered the table. The afternoon was spent in dancing and refreshment.

The young couple will reside in the city.

Jabs and Jottings as Picked Up by an Examiner Reporter

"THE BUNK"

"Tree-sitting is the bunk!" exclaimed one of Chemong's recent endurance tree-sitters yesterday. No further attempts on the record will be made by him or his two friends, he declared. He characterized the whole matter as "silly".

Whether or not the publicity accorded the stunt by The Examiner is responsible for the present change of front on the part of the Chemong youths, is not known. At any rate, it would appear that this particular form of insanity may be confined to its home in the States for the future, as fas as Chemong tree-sitters are concerned.

NEW TREE SITTING RECORD.

Perched in the branches of a tree on Lewis Fowler's farm in Bridgenorth yesterday, two boys, Donald, twelve-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Sheland Huffman of Long Point, and James, eleven-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Nicholls, of Bridgenorth, set out to beat the previous tree-sitting record of four-and-a-half hours set up by the "Gemmell-Pulkinghorn-Thornburn combination" at Chemong recently. The two boys outdid the original "record-holders" by one-and-a-half hours by staying on their perches for a stretch of six hours. They maintained their vigil without food or water and stated they had a real good time.

CARS IN COLLISION.

An automobile driven by Anthony Taylor, aged resident of 345 George Street South, was badly damaged when in collision with Fire Chief George Gimblett's car at George and Townsend Streets this morning. The right front wheel was wrenched off at the axle, while the fender was also crumpled up. No personal injuries were sustained, although a cyclist had a narrow escape from being jammed between the two vehicles.

HAMILTON TURNS INTO SPORT FIELD OF THE EMPIRE

Athletes from Eleven Countries Present for Great Event

DOMINION HEARS ADDRESS

Thousands Throng Field, While Contestants Take Final Warm-ups

HAMILTON, Ont., August 16 (By W. R. Wheatley, C.P. Staff Writer). — Hamilton to-day became the playground of the Empire. Attended by ideal weather conditions, the British Empire Games, conceived in this Lake Ontario city, opened in all its colorful setting with the formalities of an inaugural, a flourish of pageantry, and the good wishes of the sport-loving world.

11 Countries Represented.

Eleven countries of the Empire, whose representatives have come from every quarter of the globe, played their part in the gigantic undertaking. The class of the Empire's athletes in every line of sport endeavor are here. They are the new intra-Empire ambassadors whose presence not only assures the friendliest of competitions among all of the same blood, but is acknowledged as one more mighty boon that unites all British peoples.

His Majesty the King was personally represented by Viscount Willingdon, Governor-General of Canada, and honorary president of the Games, who formally opened the week's program. Premier R. B. Bennett and Prime Minister G. Howard Ferguson of Ontario were also in attendance. Government officials, men high in public life, and countless officials who have taken the lead in the development of sport throughout the Empire participated.

A cloudless sky greeted Hamilton this morning with an early atmosphere that was cool and pleasant. A bright sun rose and streamed down upon the civic stadium, but was not too hot to prove uncomfortable for the thousands who filled the great bowl.

At the Prince of Wales School, where the athletes are housed during their stay here, there was an early bustle of preparation. Trainers and CANADA'S CUP REMAINS IN U.S.

Canadian Boat Oversteps Buoy And Loses Advantage To Rochester Boat

FIFTH OF SERIES

ROCHESTER, N.Y., Aug. 16.—The fifth and last race of the series was won yesterday by the United States eight-metre yacht Thisbe. The United States will therefore retain the Canada's Cup which they have held for upward of 23 years. Barrows had his Thisbe over the finishing line 1 minute ahead of Quest after being headed for the greater part of the race. Gooderham clearly outsailed Barrows in all points of sailing, but the costly mistake in overstepping the first weather mark by about three-quarters of a mile proved disastrous.

The race was held over what is called course No. 1, a triangular course, which is the one used in Rochester for the greater number of their club races. Barrows for this reason was better acquainted with it than was Gooderham. The day was rather misty, making it impossible to distinguish a buoy when farther than ½ mile away. The boats were working to weather when it happened, and a change in wind threw them out in their direction. When they started it was 3½ miles away and hidden in the mist. As the boats did their bucking they resorted to long tacks of unequal length. If they had taken short tacks of equal length they would have come fairly close to it. But these long tacks took them far off their course.

Payne Will Compete In Thursday Grind

HAMILTON, Ont., Aug. 16 (C.P.)—H. W. Payne, crack marathon runner and member of the English team, was struck by an Ohio auto on the Niagara highway yesterday while jogging with two teammates, and was painfully hurt when thrown into a ditch.

Mr. Payne expects to be able to compete in the long distance grind Thursday afternoon, but the accident will prove a serious handicap. Ferris and Bignall, teammates who were within a few feet of him, had a narrow escape.

BUTTER FOR CARS TO BE DEMANDED BY NEW ZEALAND

Dominion Will Retaliate If Canada Does Not Buy Her Butter

ISSUES UNFORTUNATE

Would Withdraw Preference Given Canadian Motor Industry

WELLINGTON, N.Z., August 16 (C.P. Cable). — Premier Forbes stated to-day that unless Canada was prepared to purchase New Zealand butter, the New Zealand Government may be compelled to consider withdrawal of the application of the British preferential tariff to motor cars imported from Canada.

It was fortunate, the Prime Minister said, that the importation of New Zealand butter had been made an issue in the recent Canadian general election, but he hoped better counsels" would eventually prevail as he did not want to adopt retaliatory measures.

Canada, he said, had the advantage of being able to get her manufatured goods into New Zealand as British goods, this being of "tremendous advantage, particularly to Canada's motor industry, which is closely allied with the American motor car industry."

ENGLISH STARS ARE EARLY OUTS IN TEST MATCH

Mighty Struggle for 'Ashes' Gets Under Way In England To-Day

ENGLISH WINS TOSS

Hobbs and Whysall Great Opening Pair Are Out With Only 97 Runs

LONDON, Eng., Aug. 16 (C.P. Cable).—The mighty struggle for the "ashes," symbolic of the International cricket championship, got under way here to-day at the Kennington Oval between England and Australia. The match must be played to a finish even if it lasts a week or longer. The game is the fifth of a series this season, and the two countries each have a win to their credit, while the balance of the matches have been drawn. The weather was beautiful and the pitch in perfect condition. England had all the luck at the beginning, her captain winning the toss and being able to give his side the benefit of the good wicket. After a fair start, when 71 runs were added for the first wicket, England lost Jack Hobbs, one of her great opening pair, and W. W. Whysall, a newcomer to International cricket, for only 97 runs. Herbert Sutcliffe, who started the innings with Hobbs, played a stonewall game in the face of vicious bowling and the keenest kind of fielding.

Jack Hobbs, who got a fine round of applause as he came out to play probably his last test match on his home ground, and Sutcliffe opened the English innings, it was soon seen that what is known as clockless cricket would be staged. With the match being played to a finish the two batsmen took plenty of time. Sutcliffe was at the wicket seventeen minutes before he scored. Hobbs got a two to left off his first ball, but was wary after that. Wall bowled three maidens out of his first five overs. Twenty-two runs were made in the first hour, but the crowd which generally likes activity, did not show any signs of dissent. Hobbs got the first boundary on a drive past cover point.

Bowling Deadly

The bowling was deadly and the fielding up to the usual high Australian standard. Sutcliffe was content to let Hobbs get the runs, but a perfect three was the only noteworthy shot in a long period. Hobbs put up a ball only inches from the reach of McCabe. This bowler in the next over twice beat Hobbs.

Hobbs settled down after these escapes. Runs mounted and Hobbs sent up the fifty with a splendid square cut off Grimmett to the boundary. He then turned Hornibrook to the pavilion rails, and followed this up with a magnificent hook to the boundary off a long hop from Wall. However, on the next ball, which was not so short, Hobbs mistimed and Kippac made a goggly catch at forward short leg. Hobbs was plainly disgusted and the crowd also showed its regret by its rather

MINISTER OF LABOR MAY ORDER PROBE INTO PRICES OF BREAD

Many Cities Protest That Bread Has Not Followed Wheat Drop

MAY BE COMBINE

OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 16. (C.P.)—Bread prices in Canada may be made the subject of an investigation under the Combines Investigation Act if the survey of the situation now being made by F. A. McGregor, registrar, is considered by the Minister of Labor, Hon. Gideon Robertson, to warrant such action. A number of city councils in Ontario and Western Canada have made requests to department for an enquiry into the continuation of high bread prices when the price of wheat has tumbled to below the dollar mark. It is pointed out that bread is selling at the same price now, with wheat around a dollar a bushel, as it was when the price of wheat was at $1.50 a bushel.

No Application Received

No formal application has yet been received by the Minister for an investigation under the act, and the question is whether such a probe could be conducted without a definite charge of the existence of a combine having been formulated. On this the Minister is understood not to have reached a decision, but he has instructed the Registrar to gather data on the situation in order to assist him in reaching a conclusion. Should the Minister decide that circumstances warrant it he will order a preliminary enquiry to ascertain if a combine exists.

Senator Robertson is to-day in Toronto and could not be reached.

FOUR MEN SEEN BY TWEED LADY

Mrs. Grace Baldwin Overheard Conversation On Street On Monday

NEW ANGLE TO CASE

(By Examiner Staff Reporter)

TWEED, Aug. 16.—An entirely new angle in the mystery surrounding the death of George White, young Scottish farm hand whose body was found in Stocco Lake here on Wednesday morning, was uncovered by The Examiner reporter today in an interview with Mrs. Grace Baldwin, Arthur street, Tweed.

Mrs. Baldwin, whose home is on the outskirts of the village, declares that on Monday night last between 9 and 10 she heard sounds of men quarrelling on the street. Looking out, she saw four men coming down the road. One of them was garbed in a light grey suit, the others in dark clothes.

In the midst of altercation, Mrs. Baldwin declares that she overheard one of the men say: 'I would walk 40 miles to get around it."

At this juncture, according to Mrs. Baldwin, one of the other men ripped out "an awful oath."

The men were walking from the direction of the railway track toward the bridge spanning the Moira River at the entrance to Tweed on the Madoc Road, according to Mrs. Baldwin.

"The story is news to me," commented Chief Moon on being informed of Mrs. Baldwin's experience by The Examiner.

Chief Moon declared that he had received a message this morning from the Immigration Home in Montreal, stating that it was believed there that the three suspects who had disappeared from Tweed were in Montreal.

Chief Moon further intimated that he did not believe the men were implicated in the affair and that

BIG ENTRY LIST AT FLOWER SHOW IN LEGION HALL

322 ENTRIES MADE

Peterborough Horticultural Society is Co-operating with Exhibits

When Dame Nature, realizing the need, placed a sheltering petal hood on the wild gladioli that grow beneath the Zambesi Falls in Africa, to protect the delicate blooms from the heavy spray, she evolved a new variety in these gorgeous flowers. The primulini came into being, that demure 'glad' with its overhanging petals that gives it such a truly 'prim' appearance.

It has been said that a flower without a perfume is like a woman without a soul, but gladioli have no perfume at least a very faint odor is the only fragrance that ever emanates from their colorful chalices, yet they are beautiful and dominating blooms. They take the stellar role wherever they appear.

The gladioli that spread their pastel-tinted skirts on the tiered stands at the Legion Hall, this week, are wonderfully fine specimens. The backward season that florists deplore with shakes of the head has affected them very little, apparently.

These glad flowers and phlox seem to be the major items in the show, which is a very satisfying and interesting one. The big hall, with its brightly-colored pennants adorning the walls and streaming diagonally in two lines across the ceiling, its side tables arranged with fronts of red, white and blue and its central platform where the flowers, placed "en banc" show to the best advantage, is filled with lovely and colorful blossoms, in vases and bowls, in wicker baskets and wooden pots.

The Horticultural section of the Canadian General Electric Company's Social and Athletic Association is staging the show, and the Peterborough Horticultural Society is co-operating with a section devoted to the exhibits by its members. In the C.G.E. section, there are 446 entries by about two hundred people, while the Horticultural section has seventy-six entries by twenty-three people.

A distinguishing element in the exhibits is their remarkable freshness and the clear, bright colors that animate the floral showing. The arrangement, too, is very artistic and is calculated to show to the very best advantage these darlings of the garden and the greenhouse.

The gladioli stand up straight and

INQUIRY IS HELD INTO THE DEATH OF OMEMEE GIRL

Coroner's Jury Finds Miss Helen Johnson's Death Was Accidental

DRIVER TESTIFIES

Howard Wilson Is Unable To Explain How Fatal Accident Occurred

OMEMEE, August 16 (By a Staff Reporter). — A non-committal verdict of accidental death was brought in by the jury at an inquest into the automobile accident on the Omemee-Bobcaygeon Road early on the morning of July 26, in which Helen Johnson, 21-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Johnson of Omemee, lost her life. The inquiry was held in Coronation Hall, which was packed to the doors with people from Omemee and district.

The verdict read as follows: "We, the jury empanelled to inquire into the death of Helen Johnson, of the Village of Omemee, find that she came to her death in the early morning of July 26, 1930, by being thrown from a car which was driven by Howard Wilson, on the highway north of Fox's Corners. The said car came into collision with a car driven by Hugh Elliott."

The jury consisted of H. Lamb, foreman, W. J. Douglas, L. Brooks, T. Newman. Crown Attorney J. E. Anderson, of Lindsay, conducted the inquest before Coroner F. G. Earle of Omemee.

Wilson Testifies.

Howard Wilson of Omemee, driver of the car in which Miss Johnson met her death, who now faces a charge of manslaughter, was one of eight witnesses examined during the inquiry. He testified that the car was an open-model McLaughlin which he had secured in order that the party of four, which was made up of himself, Helen Johnson, Violet Duffy, and Harry McGinnis, might go to the Greenhurst Dance Pavilion at Sturgeon Lake. The brakes of the car were in "ordinary" condition so that they were effective when applied, and the lights were "average." The speedometer was not working, he testified. He said that they left Greenhurst about 12 o'clock and went to Thurstonia. After a few minutes there they headed south to the scene of the accident.

"When were you first aware that a car was on the road approaching you?" asked the Crown Attorney.

"Immediately after I went round

RESCUE WORKERS FORCED TO QUIT HOPE GIVEN UP FOR 42 MINERS

Smoke and Flames Drive Rescuers from Blakeburn Coal Mine

EXPLOSION IS FEARED

PITHEAD, Blackburn Mine, Coalmount, B.C., Aug. 16. (By The Canadian Press).—Flames and smoke threw a new barrier to-day across the entry to the underground tomb of 42 miners. Fire in the depths of the Blackburn mine, where the 46-man afternoon shift was trapped by a gas-blast and cave-in Wednesday has halted all efforts to recover the bodies of the ill-fated crew. Three corpses have been taken from the shaft; one man escaped alive.

Relief-workers, who defied poisonous mine gas, gave up when rolling smoke broke into the shaft last night. It was believed that a fire had started somewhere in one of the lower slopes. Officials ordered that digging gangs leave the mine immediately lest another explosion cause further fatalities.

When the gas-masked rescue-men came out of the tunnel it was disclosed that only three bodies had been recovered from the mine, that Josiah Bradbury 40, and Albert Cole 19, both of Blackburn which were taken from the tunnel soon after the blast two days and one-half ago.

The sole survivor is J. Porchella, found pinned under the debris near the pit-head.

Sleeping Sickness Hits Sports Fan

MONTREAL, Que., Aug. 16. — (C.P.).—An attack of sleeping sickness has confined Percy Fisher, vice-president of the British Amateur Athletic Association to the Montreal General Hospital. Mr. Fisher was on his way to attend the British Empire Games at Hamilton, and became ill on the voyage across the Atlantic. An ambulance met the boat here and took him to the hospital.

OSHAWA BIDS STRONGLY FOR LEGION CONVENTION

OSHAWA, Ont., Aug. 16 (C.P.). — The Oshawa branch of the Canadian Legion is making a strong bid to secure the 1931 Provincial convention of that body for the Motor City. At St. Thomas last year, Hamilton nosed out Oshawa for the honor of entertaining the convention for 1930, but Oshawa is coming back this year stronger than ever with an invitation supported by the Chamber of Commerce, City Council, service clubs and other organizations, in the hope of persuading the delegates at next week's convention in Hamilton to accept the invitation.

Atlantic Crossed By Giant Airliner In 56 Hrs. 21 Min.

Giant British Dirigible Makes Trip from Montreal to Cardington At An Average Speed of 58 Miles Per Hour, Fails To Set a New Record

ONLY THREE ENGINES WERE USED BY AIRLINER IN GREATER PART OF ITS JOURNEY TO ENGLAND

Takes Liner 48 Minutes Longer To Make Crossing Than It Took The Graf Zeppelin to Travel from Lakehurst to Friedrichshafen, Germany

CARDINGTON, England, August 16 (C.P.). — Great Britain's giant dirigible, the R-100, came back home to-day after an eighteen-day trip across the Atlantic and back to Montreal and other Canadian cities.

With her landfall near Fastnet, Ireland, long before daylight, the dirigible passed in the beautiful sunny weather up the Bristol Channel and across England to arrive over its mooring mast here at 10.40 a.m.

Departure from St. Hubert Airport, Montreal, was made at 9.26 p.m. (E.S.T.) Wednesday night, the trans-Atlantic crossing of 3,287 miles being completed in 56 hours 12 minutes, at an average rate of speed of 58 miles per hour.

The fastest crossing on the Atlantic by lighter than air craft was made in August, 1929, by the Graf Zeppelin, which needed only 55 hours 24 minutes to travel 4,200 miles — nearly 1,000 miles more than the R-100 travelled—between Lakehurst, N.J., and Fredrichshafen, Germany. The Graf's average speed was 75 miles per hour.

Crowds Gathered Before Dawn

Crowds which had gathered from before dawn witnessed the arrival of the dirigible, which is the largest craft of its kind in the world. Lord Thomson, British Air Minister, headed the official welcoming committee. He himself was at the field since 7.30 a.m.

The dirigible in making the crossing travelled almost without deviation along the Great Circle route between the two places. At times with favorable winds it made as great a speed as 100 miles per hour, and other times was slowed down by adverse winds to as little as twelve or fifteen miles per hour.

Weather Rough Yesterday

Save for a rainstorm which made for rough going yesterday morning and caused some small tears in the fabric of the envelope the return trip was made without incident. One of the ship's six engines, damaged on the trip over Ontario, was not in use at all, but through a large part of the return trip only three engines were used anyway so its lack was not felt.

Throughout the trip messages from aboard told constantly of an enjoyable trip. Passengers were represented as wishing only that they might smoke. An accident to the ship's stove Friday, which necessitated cold meals during the latter stages of the trip, was accepted with good humor.

PRIVATE PARTIES IN POWER GRAB STATES CHURCH

Charges Toronto Tory Machine With Aiding Them By "Getting Rid of Him"

ISSUES CALL TO "ARMS"

Powerful Interests Would Destroy All Sir Adam Beck Accomplished

HAMILTON, Ont., Aug. 15 (C.P.)—Powerful private interests are seeking to destroy all that Sir Adam Beck accomplished, T. L. Church, former Member of Parliament, warned a large gathering at a service to commemorate the fifth aninversary of Sir Adam's death, here, yesterday. The private interests were after the St. Lawrence development, he said, and he charged the "Conservative machine" in Toronto with aiding them by "getting rid" of him in the last election.

C. Alfred Maguire, member of the Ontario Hydro Commission, and a number of other Hydro officials, recalled the work of the man "who gave his life in the interest of the Hydro development."

Opposed Beauharnois

It was those behind the Beauharnois project that Mr. Church charged with responsibility for his defeat in Toronto. "I opposed the Beauharnois group for four years because I believed they were against the best interests of the people of Ontario," said Mr. Church. "They brought the Toronto Tory machine under their power and together 'got rid of me'," he repeated, "but only temporarily."

In stating what he called a note of warning, Mr. Church said if the private interests had their way, the people of Ontario would, instead of getting power at cost, be paying an inflated price for it. Every Hydro consumer would just be a mere purchaser of power from private interests, he said. Every single horsepower in the St. Lawrence waterway should be protected for the people. Here he urged the municipalities of Ontario to "take stock and bestir themselves as to what is afoot."

CHICAGO DROUGHT PROBLEM SOLVED

Increase In Flow of Water from Lake Michigan Being Allowed

ADJUSTED LATER

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—With the approval of President Hoover, Secretary Hurley has solved the drought problem, which has been most important to the city of Chicago.

Acting upon an appeal by Governor Emmersom of Illinois, the Secretary has permitted an increase in the flow of water from Lake Michigan through the Chicago River, which has reached a lower level it is claimed, than is essential to dispose of the sewage of the city.

Under the secretary's ruling, the increase above the 6,500 cubic feet per second, established as a maximum by a Supreme Court decree, may be had by decreasing proportionately after the drought the amount of flow from the Lake.

The relief was necessary in order to benefit livestock and remove the danger of epidemic disease, a statement by Hurley said.

British Troops Rushed To Indian Frontier

GRAVE SITUATION RISES AS AFGHAN TRIBES THREATEN

Brigadier General Robertson Leads Heavy Reinforcements to Peshawar

DECLARES MARTIAL LAW

Brigades Hurried to Outlying Points of Nowshera and Kohat

SIMLA, India, August 16.—The powerful garrisons on the North-west Frontier to-day were reinforced with formidable contingents of British and Indian infantry, fully equipped to meet an attack threatened by fierce Afghanistan tribsemen from beyond the Khyber Pass.

With the arrival of heavy reinforcements under the command of Brigadier-General Robertson, martial law was proclaimed throughout the entire Peshawar district, where the situation was described officially as "one of considerable gravity and danger."

Full Brigade Moves

How dangerous the border status was could only be told by military and political authorities on the spot. The average layman, however, felt that he had only too clear a view of the situation in the news that one British and three Indian battalions were moved up from Jhansi to Rawal Pindi, and that a full infantry brigade was being sent to Nowshera, 25 miles east of Peshawar, with a considerable force of other units going to Kohat.

Among the troops sent into the zone of action were the Second Seaforth Highlanders.

Young Leaders Appear

Peshawar advices indicated that new and dangerous forces were gathering around that centre. Many young men began to appear among the Afridi tribesmen, concentrating in the rocky fastness near the border, replacing older heads, who had stood the brunt of Royal Air Force bombing raids during the past fortnight.

Yesterday's official statement came as a shock to those who had believed that, so far as the Peshawar area was concerned, the Indian situation was appreciably easier and the tribesmen almost dispersed.

So far as could be judged from the guarded language of the official communique, the problem of expelling the gangs of raiders from the district remained as formidable as ever.

REBELS SUFFER SEVERE DEFEAT AT TSINAN CITY

Great Gov't. Victories in Shantung and Honan Provinces Reported

TURNING POINT IN WAR

Lull in Yangtse Valley Where Reds Are Menacing Hankow

NANKING, Aug. 16.—Victory for Nationalist arms in Shantung and Honan Provinces, including the recapture of Tsinan, Capital of Shantung Province, was claimed by the Government yesterday, in what some observers say may prove the turning point in the civil war.

Rebel forces, which had occupied Tsinan for nearly two months, were driven out and hurled northward. At other points in the two war-ridden Provinces the insurgent forces were overwhelmed and flung back toward the Yellow River.

Doubts Suggested

Aged Resident Found After 26 Hour Absence

MARMORA, Aug. 16 (Examiner Correspondence). — After being missing for 26 hours Edward Tapp a 93-year-old resident of Tudor township turned up at the home of T. B. Airhart in Glenmire at 4 p.m. on Thursday. This is about four miles from his home by road, but wandering around in the woods Tapp has covered 8 or 9 miles.

Provincial Constable Morris of Bancroft led a large search party in the hunt on Thursday and upon finding Mr. Tapp inquired from him how he felt, to which he replied: "I could walk another five miles if I had to."

ALL EUROPEAN IMMIGRANTS ARE PUT UNDER BAN

Only Experienced Farmers with Ample Means Allowed in Canada

UNEMPLOYMENT REASON

New British or U. S. Settlers Encouraged Under Gordon's Policy

OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 16 (C.P.) — Discontinuance of immigration from the Continent of Europe was announced yesterday as the policy of the Government by Hon. W. A. Gordon, Minister of Immigration and Colonization, with the exception of experienced farmers of suitable type who are in possession of ample means to immediately establish and maintain themselves on farms, and the wives and children of persons already established in Canada.

"This policy," said Mr. Gordon "is rendered necessary by reason of the unemployment in Canada. The purpose is to prevent persons coming to this country who will not be able to find work on arrival and to protect the people of Canada from the burden of such unemployment. We regard the present situation as temporary, but we propose to apply an effective remedy until unemployment conditions have improved and to control any immigration movement in the future so that immigration will not again be a contributing factor to unemployment conditions.

No Changes With Britain

No change has been made with respect to immigration from Great Britain or the United States, but the Department will not solicit or encourage any movement at the present time. Mr. Gordon made it very clear the new regulations will not interfere in any way with the free movement from Great Britain or the United States of tourists and those engaged in business or commerce.

The transportation companies and all other interests will be notified at once so that immediate effect can be given to the new policy.

Reasonable consideration will be given to the entry of immigrants now on the way under commitments already made, but such immigrants will be rigidly inspected at ports of entry.

The halt which the Government has called upon immigration, according to the statement of Mr. Gordon, will not, it is believed, abrogate the various schemes in force for the encouragement of immigrants, but will temporarily suspend them. Assisted passages were granted in cases of domestic servants and the statement to the effect that the Department will not solicit or encourage any movement from Great Britain or the United States is interpreted here to mean that there will be a suspension of such assistance in these cases.

With regard to the movement of boy immigrants, this has been controlled for the most part by the Provinces concerned, and will be affected only to the extent to which those provinces adjust their schemes to meet the wishes of the Dominion.

Family Scheme Off.

The 3,000-family settlement scheme expired a year ago last June. Another family settlement scheme is in operation in New Brunswick, but the Dominion merely administers the plan for the New Brunswick and British Governments.

In this case New Brunswick supplies the land, and the British Government advances the money to the intending settlers for the purpose of purchasing this land and equipment.

The movement of trainees from the United Kingdom has been negligible for several months past, and is not considered to be a factor in immigration activities. The trainee system was not a success, and has to all intents and purposes been allowed to exhaust itself.

$60,000 IN BEER CAPTURED ON OLD MINE SWEEPER

Steamer Vedas Seized In Lake Erie By Customs Squad

CREW NOT HELD

Large Fleet Of U.S. Coast Guards Lie In Wait Vainly

WINDSOR, Ont., Aug. 16.—The steamer Vedas, a British minesweeper that was used in the Great War, and 15,000 cases of beer, valued at $60,000, are under seizure, authorities say, at the dock of the Canadian Pacific Railway in Windsor. The The seizure was made yesterday off Colchester Light, in Lake Erie, by a squad of preventive officers in charge of Charles Kress ,head of the service in Essex County.

The boat was bound from Montreal to Port Arthur, according to the clearance papers. The preventive men were reticent about the seizure, but they said enough to indicate they believed the boat and its cargo were "destined" to the United States, although the clearance papers stated 'Port Arthur."

Referred to "Head Office"

Kress and his officers boarded the boat while a large fleet of Coast Guard cutters from United States ports on Lake Erie lay to, a few hundred yards away. Kress refused to disclose the name of the captain. He said he had been instructed by Ottawa to say nothing about the seizure. He referred newspaper reporters to "the head office."

While radio stations in Detroit were asking ship captains on Lake Erie to notify the United States Customs station at Trenton, Mich., if the Vedas was seen, Kress and his crew of Preventive men were mooring the seized boat at the Windsor Dock. Though their names and addresses were taken, the captain and crew of the Vedas were not detained. Kress said he had not been instructed to make arrests, but to detain the boat, pending further instructions.

The Ontario Provincial Police were informed four days ago that the boat had left Montreal with a large cargo of beer. The informant, who, the police said, was a former liquor exporter, stated that the beer, although consigned to Port Arthur, was really intended for export to United States points.

NEW C.P.R. LINER SEEKING RECORD

Empress of Japan Making First Run From Yokohama to Vancouver

TRIP OF 4,814 MILES.

Seeking to lower the seven-year-old record for steamship crossing of the Pacific, the Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Japan sailed yesterday for Vancouver, B.C., on her first voyage between these ports. The Empress of Japan must arrive before 11.53 a.m. (Pacific Standard Time) Aug. 22 to shatter the mark made by the Empress of Canada also of the Canadian Pacific Line. In June 1923, the Empress of Canada sailed from Yokohama to Vancouver in 8 days 10 hours and 53 minutes, averaging 20.6 knots for the 4,814 land miles comprising the great circle route.

Endurance Flyer Lengthening Mark

ST. LOUIS, Mo., August 16N (C.P.). — Dale Jackson and Forest O'Brine showed no sign of weakening to-night, as they unfalteringly circled Lambert-St. Louis Field, and hourly made the world refuelling flight record less and less inviting as a target for rival endurance fliers.

The "Greater St. Louis," now in its twenty-seventh day aloft, had at 4.11 p.m. last night 55 hours longer than the Hunter brothers from whom the St. Louis airmen regained the record on Wednesday morning.

ONTARIO BUSH FIRES SLACKEN

Kenora District Presents Worst Picture With 16 Blazes

FOREST VERY DRY

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 16. (C.P.) —Ontario's bush-fire hazard—a hazard which at the beginning of this week had again attained serious proportions—has, according to the forestry branch at the Ontario Parliamentary Buildings, now let down considerably, and officialdom, with the June outbreaks still fresh in mind, is breathing a lot easier.

According to latest advices, the Kenora district right now presents the worst picture, with sixteen fires burning. At Williams Lake, northeast of Parlane, there is a bad blaze and another at Turtle Lake is completely out of control. All fires in the Red Lake district have been put out, with the exception of one at Sabourin Lake, which is still showing smudges. From Kapuskasing the report is that the Albert Lake fire in the Wakina district is under control and that other districts are clear of fire, with the hazard again normal. In the Sault district there have been nine fires since Aug. 9, due chiefly to berry pickers and construction gangs. These, however, have been brought under control. Weather for the past week in the Sudbury area has been warm and dry, and 16 fires have occurred, one of them, in township 145, having a last information, 207 men engaged on it. Ten fires which broke out in the North Bay district are either out or under control, with loss slight.

WELL PLEASED WITH PETERBOROUGH

To the Editor of The Examiner:

BELLEVILLE, Ont., August 15.—

Dear Sir.—While on a holiday trip last week-end to your city and on a visit to my cousin there, as per copy of our local paper being sent you, I became acquainted with your city for the first time and with your issue which in my estimation is very creditable and has not deteriorated as some certain one-city papers have, or suffer in not being progressive or abreast of the situation.

I was charmed too with Peterborough—"the half has never been told about it." Picturesqueness is the word by which to describe it. Really, one is enamored by the rustic, natural beauty of hill and valley, the enterprise displayed in developing of parks, bridges, and water advantages. Hence, you have sort of a setting like unto old European centres, only excelling.

Then, again, allow me to congratulate your keen, live citizens and you for the service permitted over visit of the grand British dirigible R-100. I returned here in time to see her, but was disappointed like many as you will note by our local sheet.

One thing more: I wish that you could have me informed as to the water trips that are to be depended upon about your district. To-day's Toronto paper tells of accident and damage to the steamer Stoney Lake, Lindsay way. That creates further interest in the hugeness and dexterity of the lift lock with canal features.

VERY RARE IN U. S.

LONDON, Aug 16—Although England has no prohibition to make even five-year-old whisky a rarity, a bottle was found in the Sunderland police station which caused a great deal of excitement. It is a relic of the days when prisoners were allowed to solace themselves with a drink of the liquid that cheers. It was with the date October 8, 1867.

IS IT WORTH IT?

SAN BERNARDINO, Cal., Aug 16—It's hard to say whether $1.000 is worth it — and harder still to say whether or not Jean Murray, 22, will abide by her grandfather's will. He provided that she should never bob her hair, use cosmetics, wear jewelry or short clothes. In return for this, he willed her $1,000.

"THE BIBLE, A BIBLE"

(A Passage from a Great Religious Classic)

It is commonly acknowledged by religious persons that the Bible is remarkably unsystematic. Sometimes this admission is made thankfully and even triumphantly; it is urged as a proof that the Bible is mainly intended to supply the daily wants, and to meet the ever-changing circumstances of the spiritual man. Sometimes it furnishes the ground of an argument for the necessity of that being done by others which is not done here; by those who lived nearest the age of the apostles or at the Reformation or in a more advanced period of civilization. Sometimes it is alleged as a reason for denying that there is any book possessing the character which Christians have attributed to this one; for asserting that it is a collection of documents belonging to a particular nation, accidentally strung together, and invested by the superstition of after-times with a fictitious entireness. All these notions, it seems to me, assume that the words system and method are synonymous, and that if the first is wanting in the Scriptures the last must be wanting also. Now to me these words seem not only not synonymous, but the greatest contraries imaginable; the one indicating that which is most opposed to life, freedom, variety; and the other that without which they cannot exist. If I wished to explain my meaning I should not resort to a definition; I should take an illustration, and, of all illustrations, I think the most striking is that which is afforded by the Bible itself. While the systematizer is tormented every page he reads with a sense of the refractory and hopeless materials he has to deal with, I am convinced that the person who is determined to read only for his own comfort and profit is haunted with the sense of harmony, not in the words, but in the history which he ought not to overlook and without reference to which the meaning of that in which he most delights is not very certain. And while this sense of method exists, the fact that these works were written at different periods in different styles and by men of totally different characters increases the impression that there is something most marvelous in the volume they compose. The most skilful and laborious analyst cannot persuade his disciples to abandon the use of the word Bible, he cannot divest himself of the feelings which it is associated.—F. D. Maurice's The Kingdom of Christ.

SAUL (A Man of Great Possibilities)

Devotional Study of Sunday School Lesson for Aug. 17. Scripture: 1 Sam. 9: 15-17, 25-27; 10: 1; 19:9-11; 31:1-4. Golden Text: 1 Cor. 10:12.

(By Arthur W. Brown.

The great possibilities drawn attention to in the character of Saul had their promise in his early self, the disposition he showed and the way he so commendably behaved. The development of those possibilities was in the fine opportunities that national service and leadership gave to him. If not in such a pronounced measure, we all have some graces and virtues by means of which with care and culture we can make a fair name and a blessed life for ourselves. And gates are opening here and there by the providence of God that are in themselves an invitation to win for ourselves and others the peace and plenty of a God-ordered and God-endowed life.

It is an interesting story how he came in touch with Samuel, and well told in the Scriptures. The straying of his father's asses and his search for them led him to a kingdom. A servant's counsel caused him not to miss an interview with the man of God. By what devious, yet simple ways we are led to face God and the great obligations and opportunities of life. And like Saul, son of Kish, we may till they are pressed upon us be all unconscious of whither our lot is tending.

He is honored at a feast by this prophet Samuel as if he were chief guest. He is secretly annointed to a kingship and kissed affectionately as the announcement was made that he was to become leader and deliverer of Israel. Relieved at what he had been told of the lost asses being found, he goes on his way home wondering, and the people whom he meets by the way impress him as the prophet said they would with the choice that God had made of him. He joins frenzied religious zealots of his day to the surprise of his friends. Perhaps the stirring of his soul had so magnetized his spirit that it struck fire and acted under any particular religious stimulus, and especially this fervent crude type would flame his unsophisticated mind and heart.

The call of Israel for a king, the choice of Saul by Samuel and the annointing, the evident hand of God in all these incidents mentioned were in totality the call of Saul together with clamant demand of the people when he had delivered them from the cruel Ammonites to be king. His personal qualifications were noticeably fitting for the office. He had magnificent physique and bearing. There is nothing to be said for physique dissipated by injurious habits or spoilt by slovenliness, carelessness. He had a fine thoughtfulness. How he began to think of his father's growing anxiety when he stayed away so long seeking the asses! Thoughtfulness for others is a fine quality and necessary for a successful leader. Obedience, reverence, modesty, all belonged to him in a gracious and generous degree. Was ever such a promising youth for high office sketched on the pages of Scripture? If he did not measure up to the expectations reposed in him we know that those early qualifications are the sort of material to build up with wise guidance and trust in God the temple of a noble character, a people's cathedral of praise unto God.

His career is not all tragedy. He served nobly again and again as a military leader. Perhaps we underrate Saul too much. We forget to measure him by his times. But it is certain that certain weaknesses of character were allowed to negate the full promise of his early manhood and cause sight to be lost of those excellences that once distinguished him. Humility and modesty go out when pride comes in. God and His promphet have to reject him who is disobedient. Two things are illuminating in the study of Saul's life that help us to account for the fair promises being so incompletely unrealized, and for the splendid character becoming of the rejected and fallen type.

One was the indulgence of the sins of the spirit: pride, greed, falsehood, cowardice, hypocrisy, which were so clearly shown at the time of defeat of the Amalekites. A splendid victory was that day marred by the King's own undoing as he allowed these vices to disrobe him of true royalty. Kingliness in the final analysis is power of personality under godly control, untrammelled by ostentation, unspoilt by anything that is false, guiding and sheltering others under the shadow of his wise, strong and unselfish soul. A recent popular novel by Hutchinson has set forth the hell and the malignancy of these sins of the spirit. Read in "The Uncertain Trumpet" of the savage nature of Miss Pasture, the brood of evil desires and the cunning way she has to promote unhappiness for others, and see even if she does play the parish church organ if these sins of the spirit that enslave her are not infinitely more damaging than the sins of the flesh, abdominable as they can be.

We are quite sure these vices of the spirit cannot be practised and held, and the name of God's good man or God's good woman be retained. Envy, hatred, malice, pride and all uncharitableness have accounted for a multitude's undoing as well as Saul's.

The second thing noticeable in Saul's downfall that is full of significance to the student of character are his preferences. He prefers his way to the prophet's. He preferred not to wait for Samuel to perform the holy offices, but presumptiously to take on this himself (chap. 13:8-13). When he grew sick in mind and soul he called for a musician instead of Samuel. He asked for a kind of soothing syrup for his life and moods rather than the heart-searching and surgical action for the elination of the evil spirit. On the eve of his death we find him indulging in necromancy, seeking the aid of a witch instead of throwing his cause and himself on the mercy of God. His was a sad end, but not sadder than unwise preferences can bring to a life. Our choice is a moral affair. We should be using life for the cultivation and strengthening of good preferences. Our character and life's victories are the sum totals of our mental and moral preferences. The man who will not deal thoroughly with himself and will whine for the fiddler instead of calling for the man of God, who will seek the jazz and ragtime level of things instead of obeying the many summons to the honorable and noble way of life, is going to write as decidedly, and perhaps more so, the word FAILURE in capital letters over his name and days.

What is believed to be a genuine Stradivarius violin was discovered recently in the Cabra district of Spain.

The Question ? ? Box ? ?

In this corner the enquiries of readers on Biblical and religious problems are answered. Address "The Q. B. Editor c-o The Examiner.

Q.—If, as it is said, Communism is becoming a religion, how can it be a religion when the Communists preach Atheism?—L. C.

A.—A religion does not have to possess a God to be a religion. One of the most widely distributed religions in the world—Buddhism—is atheistic in its present degraded form. So is Confucianism, the religion of many Chinese.

In some respects the history if Communism displays similarities with the early development of Christianity. Christianity was the religion of the oppressed. So was Communism.

The early Christians believed that there was a principle of justice ruling the world, and anything that they suffered unjustly in this life they would be compensated for in the next one.

The early Communists believed that they should revolt against those whom they know as their oppressors. In this respect they resemble the old Hebrews and the followers of Mahomet. They believed in the sword.

The early Christians believed in the coming of the judgment day. The Communists in the world revolution which will be a sort of judgment day for the world.

The Communists have begun to make of Lenin a god. They worship him as a hero. They visit his tomb in thousands. Here we have a similarity to the devotion paid to Mahomet.

But while Communism may be described as "a" religion, because it is an organized belief, and even ceremonies have begun to be conducted in connection with it, it must be sharply distinguished from religion.

Religion is spiritual. It is a communion with the God within man. Communism is based upon materialism, and it is this materialistic element in it which is opposed to true Christianity.

Q.—What did Jesus mean by saying He was the bread of life, and that He who came to Him should never hunger?—W. M. M.

A.—Evidently He did not mean that He was to be taken literally. In the fact in the sixth chapter of John where these words are found, He is quoted as saying that He spoke metaphorically, "My words are spirit and life." He told the materially-minded Jews.

Christ is here not speaking as a man but as God, not as a finite being, but as a spiritual being who is in some mysterious way within all men.

He says, "He that cometh to Me shall never hunger., He that believeth in Me shall never thirst." We hunger and thirst for true happiness, being unable to find only its shadow among worldly things.

But he who makes an effort by serious prayer and meditation and the performance of his duty according to the dictates of his conscience will reach true happiness, which is spiritual.

Christ is within him, but he must, by taking thought, rend the veil of selfishness which obscures Him from his sight.

BIG ENTRY LIST AT FLOWER SHOW

tall on their elevated stand in the center of the hall. Here are the clear, pure hues of the rainbow and the odd colorings that come from crossing the pollen in different specimens: Clear, brilliant yellow in the Souvenir; pale orchid in the large open cups of the Captain Boynton variety; light, glowing purple in the Veilchenblaw; rosy, warm pink in the Trudlegrotz; pale, cerulean tints in a well-named Heavenly Blue; exquisite creamy white in the Mary Pickford; burnished salmon in Thomas Edison; deep, gorgeous crimson in Groff's Majestic, and the color of old mahogany in Hutt's Smoky, that bleaches out in the sun.

In the primulini variety are two outstanding beauties: Review, a glorious pale lemon-yellow with a pink smooth edging, and Orange Queen, the color of clear sherry.

Al Spencely has a very fine section of gladioli grown from seedlings at Al's Pastime Gardens on Monaghan Road, while another very tall and broad-leafed glad is grown from a seedling in George Clarke's garden on Alfred street.

Phlox Drummondi

In the varied exhibit of other flowers Phlox Drummondi, the short-stemmed annual phlox, has a large and fine showing, as has the longer-stemmed brother of the same family, the perennial phlox. In the former section, the Peterborough Horticultural Society offered five prizes for a special exhibit open to every member.

There are waxy pink begonias; golden nasturtiums in glass vases; roses, red, white and pink; fushias, profusely flowering; wicker baskets containing lovely blossoms, with one especially beautiful example in tall, graduated spikes of Jenny Lind gladioli, an exquisite thing of four blush-pink petals with a fifth streaked in pale yellow, and mixed with the soft Fronds of the asparagus plumosa, or "Old-Man" fern, as it was formerly named. Another lovely basket contains purple and white phlox, spotted lilium auratum and gypsophila.

Purple and white asters; bronze gaillardia, scabiosa or "Old maids' pincushion" in mauve and white and dull red; larkspur in lovely shades of blue, white and pink; big yellow African ball marigolds and their smaller bronze and yellow cousins; little bowls of pansies, the "thought" flowers; Dorothy Perkins pink climbing roses trailing over the edge of a vase; yellow coreopsis and petunias, single and double.

There are zinnias, those peculiar, off-color things with their artificial, stiff look, in bronze and henna and rust, dull chrome yellow, and terra cotta.

Salpiglossis, those blossoms with an ugly name and a lovely five-petalled cup that shows the delicate brush markings of a butterfly's wing; faintly colored stock or Mattholia, spicy pinks, yellow, cheerful sunflowers, sweet peas with sweet alyssum; dainty mauve cosmos with wide-open countenances; stiff, ornamental straw flowers or everlastings; interesting dahlias in plain odd cactus varieties; asters, velvet snapdragon or antirrhinium, and tiny annual yellow 'mums, all have a place in the show.

Lilium Auratum

There are several novelties not included in the list of exhibits, like the lovely tall lilium auratum in one of the baskets and in a vase holding blooms from Mrs. P. Malsch's garden on Edison avenue. These are glorious flowers, with their wonderful, penetrating fragrance, their white and yellow petals stippled with dark dots, their long stamens tipped with bronze dust.

And there is a vase filled with lovely dahlias, including several cacti specimens with long, fringed edges, from F. D. Kerr's garden on Rubidge street; a pot of delicate green 'Baby's tears' from Mrs. Garner's home; an exhibit of fascinating cacti by J. H. Callendar; a large fuschia plant, towering upward and heavily laden with blossoms, brought by F. C. Roberts, and a curious leopard plant, its large green leaves speckled with yellow, the property of F. C. Christmas.

In opening the show last evening, the official words being spoken by chairman W. H. Young, president of the Peterborough Horticultural Society, three speakers were Mayor Denne, C. A. Salmonsen, representing the manufacturers and the Canadian General Electric Company, and James Abraham, president of the Canadian Legion.

All reiterated expressions of congratulation to the C.G.E. Horticultural Society and the Peterborough Horticultural Society.

Mayor Denne alluded to the spirit of co-operation which had resulted in such a successful undertaking and to the evidences of fine homes within that were to be gathered from fine gardens and well-kept grounds without, in any community. Mr. Salmonsen spoke of the enterprise as not in a competitive spirit, but as a "voluntary civic responsibility" which carried out in fact the label of Peterborough as the 'Flower City". Mr. Abraham extended the welcome of the Legion and spoke of the objects of the show as being the beautifying of the city and the assisting of the Legion in raising funds for its winter relief work.

The Tired Junior

There was a very enthusiastic gathering of people last night in the big hall and expressions of interest were heard on all sides. Several tiny mites were among those present. One small man of very junior years liked the flowers for awhile, and then told his sire, who bore him about in his arms, that he "wanted his nightie." It was long past his bedtime and he knew it.

In the Open Class of the C.G.E. section, open to anyone in the province, with special awards, Al Spenceley was the only contestant, with gladioli.

In looking after the wants of the exhibitors and welcoming the crowds, W. H. Young, president, and N. E. Crowe, secretary, were prominent, with S. T. Harris, secretary of the Peterborough Horticultural Society, and A. E. Prest, chairman of the Display committeee.

A display of the fine prizes to be given to holders of lucky ticket-numbers was a feature of the exhibit, these being placed on an elevated stand and drawing flattering comments from the audience.

The drawing for the door prizes will be a feature of the program this evening. The carnival aspect of the show, brightening it considerably for the crowd, is carried out by the Canadian Legion, with C. L. Armstrong in charge of several entertaining games, and soft drinks sold by T. O'Brien.

The Sweepstake prize of a silver vase which was offered by the Peterborough Horticultural Society in connection with the show, and their annual competition in gladioli, and awarded the winner of the largest number of points in the open gladiolus class, was won by Fred Hall of 521 Romaine street.

Judging was done yesterday by George Baldwin, F.H.R.S., of Toronto, a prominent horticulturist, member of the Ontario oHrticultural Society and flower judge for several years past at the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition.

The following is the list of prize-winners in the section devoted to exhibits by members of the Peterborough Horticultural Society. The prize-list of winners in the C.G.E. Social and Athletic Flower Show will be printed on Monday evening, as it is not available yet for the present issue:

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, August 16. — Extensive "short" covering, both here and at Chicago, caused a sharp rally in wheat prices yesterday and brought the market back more than 4c from the low points touched in the early trading, to close with net gains of 1½c to 2c for the day.

Weakness at the start was the result of quite heavy selling and the failure of export buying to materialize, but later it was confirmed that the Wheat Pool had sold a cargo of wheat to Russia and this started the upward rally. Buying orders poured in from Chicago and local "short" interests, while New York buyers placed orders here against sales in Chicago. Weather reports from th United States and Canada also created bullish enthusiasm.

The demand for cash wheat and coarse grains was indifferent and trade light, though values reacted to the wheat advance.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, August 16. — Authoritative reports of big damage suffered by the corn crop since the Government's latest estimate gave corn values a lively whirl upward yesterday. A leading unofficial expert announced the eleven principal corn-growing states showed a loss of 174,000,000 bushels over and above the August 1 Government forecast. Trade both in corn and wheat developed greatly increased activity and strength as a result, with corn future deliveries jumping almost 5c a bushel from an early low level today, and No. 2 cash corn, the ordinary contract grade, soaring 3c above $1.00.

Wheat and Corn Rise.

Closing quotations on corn were nervous, 2⅝c to 3½c higher than Thursday's finish. Wheat, unsettled, 1⅝c to 1⅝c up; oats, 1c to 1¼c advance, and provisions showing 15c to 25c gain.

According to the unofficial report which started corn and wheat values leaping upward yesterday, the present outlook was for a corn crop of but 1,418,166,000 bushels, compared with the Government estimate of 1,592,000,000 bushels.

Wheat prices received part of their upward momentum from less favorable Canadian wheat crop advices, yesterday's reports indicating a lowering of previous estimates of yields. The North American wheat export situation was regarded also as healthier. Oats offerings were light

SATURDAY, AUGUST 16, 1930

THE FALL FAIR SEASON OPENS.

The fall fair season opened this week at Picton, reminding us of the sequence which brings us our own Exhibition during the second week in September.

Ottawa next week, then Toronto for two weeks until Saturday, September 6, and then Peterborough. The summer with its political distraction may seem to have eluded some of us so swiftly has it carried us to within a week of the Toronto "Ex." But, the calendar does not mislead us, and neither do the signs of approaching fall, golden rod along the fences, corn on the cob, swallows and blackbirds mustering their flocks, young wild ducks strengthening their wings by daily flights, and stubble fields from which the grain has been cut.

Peterborough is the big agricultural exhibition of Central Ontario; its thousands of supporters in the city and district have been steadily building it in usefulness and importance, and this year their patronage is needed as much as ever. Their patronage is also deserved, for the fair directors have not spared themselves in their preparations.

The list of fairs this year finds Bowmanville Agricultural Society missing, a loss to that section of Durham County which will be widely regretted. Some of the smaller rural fairs have been barely escaping the bailiff or possibly some friendly banker carrying an overdraft for years. In this district we have a string of smaller fairs that seem to be thriving in spite of occasional setbacks by wet weather.

THE PROGRESSIVE PARTY.

The decline of the Progressive party in the recent elections has been the subject of many editorial references which observe in the final results the return of Canada to the two-party system.

In 1921 the agrarian insurgence rolled up a force of 64 members, 37 of whom were from the Prairie Provinces. The Progressives carried 15 of the 16 seats in Saskatchewan, ten of Alberta's 12 seats and 12 in Manitoba. They were also victorious in 24 Ontario ridings, and British Columbia contributed two seats, while New Brunswick gave them one.

Recalling this irruption into the preserves of the old parties, the Border Cities Star recalls that this new group, especially its 37 Western members, intended to make sure that the demands of the West be recognized. In the East they called it the "Sectionalism of the West." In the West they simply changed the idea around and said it was a movement to combat the "Sectionalism of the East."

"The two big things were accomplished mainly because of the presence of the Progressives," says the (Windsor) Star. "The Hudson Bay Railway was pushed to completion. It was a Western demand, and both parties have given heed. In 1922 they tried to scrap the Hudson Bay route, but the independent Progressives barred the way.

"The Crows Nest Pass rates governing the sums charged for the shipping of grain by rail to the East have been established definitely because of the Progressives. Eastern Liberals and Conservatives would have altered the rates. But the Progressives said no. And their word was heeded.

"The policies of both parties have been shaped by the Progressives. Conservative promises on the prairies last month included Mr. Bennett's assurance of support for the Hudson Bay Railway being pushed to completion. Liberal policies have become more and more Progressive in many ways since 1921.

"The members of the old parties now recognize there is a West as well as an East in Canada. Grits and Tories look to the Dominion of Canada as their field of endeavor. That is where the Progressive party has done its great missionary work in Canada. Considered at first as an evil element to divide Canada into two sectional camps, the Progressives have served to crystalize the thought of the Canadian people into a unity of purpose to help all Provinces at all times."

LUMBER CURIOSITIES.

One of the triumphs scored by the insatiate protectionists in the tariff bill was the duty on lumber, says the New York Times. It was strongly opposed both because it threatened to add greatly to the cost of the building materials of farmers and small house owners, and also because it was a blow at a Canadian industry, sure to be resented by the Dominion Government. But after many ups and downs, defeats and recoveries, the duty was at last engrafted on the bill. However, early this week a decision was rendered by the Commissioner of Customs taking out a part of its sting. By a heroic act of interpretation, or legerdemain, he held that the words "boards, planks and deals" have no fixed commercial meaning, so that Congress did not tax Canadian exports of those articles in the way that it thought it was doing. Hereafter if they are merely planed or dressed on one side they may be brought in free. This decision gave obvious relief to the Washington administration, which has properly been anxious about the threat of a tariff war with Canada.

Note what followed. In yesterday's Times a dispatch from Seattle brought the news that the lumbermen of the Pacific Northwest had decided at once to appeal to President Hoover to increase the duty on certain classes of Canadian lumber. They would like the rate in some cases to be pushed up as much as 50 per cent. This would be an experiment with the flexible tariff not too noble in purpose. Of course, Mr. Hoover cannot do anything about it directly. He will have to refer the appeal to the Tariff Commission, whenever it is appointed. But it is inconceivable that he could favor such a jacking up of a tariff rate which in itself was an innovation and gave great offense on both sides of the border.

The lumbermen asking the favor, without which they declare that they cannot operate their mills, gravely deny that they have any idea of raising the price of lumber to the American consumer. This is another example of the old protectionist puzzle. Foreign competition makes prices too low, but if foreign competition is got rid of by a tariff exclusion, prices will not be made higher, but probably still lower. If anybody, whether in the Northwest or in Washington, believes this, he will believe anything.

MAINTAINING WAGES.

Labor's worries during the current business recession have not been aggravated by a general onslaught on wages. In the United States there have been a few notable examples of a reduction from the peak of the last eight years of prosperity.

On the other hand, some chief executives of industries contend that a cut in wages and salaries at present would be a mistake because it would lessen the purchasing power of a large volume of consumers, and thereby delay the return of good times.

Is business about to enter upon a period of devolution from the high plane upon which wages and prices seemed to be firmly established? Shall it have to retrace its progress through the circle of high wages and larger purchasing power to the position of lowered wages and diminished purchasing power?

So far, the man with a job has actually benefitted by the declining prices of commodities. One American writer says that this decline, amounting to 10 per cent., has stretched the buying power of the pay envelope. The injury to labor as a class this year has been in total or partial unemployment.

Another suggests that "the best place to start necessary reductions of income is from the over-paid and over-privileged, not the under-paid and under-privileged."

To what extent is United States opinion on this practical question of economics based on the assumption of a self-contained nation and protected industry? But even in that country a large farming community has felt the effect of the slump in prices more keenly than urban workers. The prices for farm products behind the agricultural tariff wall have shrunk to the extent that the farmer's dollar is now about twenty per cent. of its pre-war buying power. There may be a substantial recovery as a result of the drought, although the same cause is probably threatening many individual farmers with ruin.

In Canada there has been a promise of an increased tariff to safeguard the manufacturing industries and their employees, but how will our farmers fare with a heavy harvest of wheat that cannot be protected, but must be sold in the world markets? And if the farmer's wheat cannot be sold in a protected market, neither can his income be maintained with the same security as that which a tariff increase would favor the city workers as a class. In that situation the total wealth of the country would be affected by uncontrollable foreign conditions. If the business axiom that increased wages mean increased buying power cannot be applied to such a large group as that of Canada's grain growers, can wages be maintained in spite of a possible shrinkage in the price of a bushel of wheat, the unit of the farmer's reward?

Up to the present Canadian wage scales for the most part have escaped readjustment downward, and because the Henry Ford doctrine is true it is hoped that no conditions will arise to cause the wage reductions which in other periods of depression have usually been the first reaction.

THE RETURN TO EVENINGS AT HOME.

James Truslow Adams contributes to the New York Times magazine an entertaining article on the evening at home in the nineties; and he adds a prediction that before very long the restless population of to-day will turn again toward home in the evening. Specifically he says: "When we have eaten to repletion of all the new things of our own age, when we have run to nowhere until we are exhausted, when we have found satisfaction in none of these things, then we shall crave again, with an irresistible craving, for the things that last—peace, love, sacrifice, the building of something out of our lives, the making of something strong and permanent, fine and stable—and we shall then inevitably come home again to supper with the family as in days of old, when twilight falls at evening—and not before."

Mr. Adams does not expect "to see the old home and the old porch and the old songs in the old evenings come back as they were." But he does believe that when we have learned to use "our new toys—the car, the stock market and all the rest—sanely and not madly," then the new evenings will come "because of our fundamental need of abiding and satisfying human relationships." He charges that "throughout all the family group the old means of normal and healthy self-expression have largely given place to mechanical means of excitation that are welcomed because they give that thrill which has come to be felt as much of a need for jangled nerves as was the rest of the home in the old days for healthy ones."

Admitting the truth of Mr. Adams' statements, admitting that radios and phonographs have taken away old methods of self-expression and that the automobile has given the old neighborhood a radius of 60 miles or more, we may look about for signs of a return to the home as a social centre. There is a growing tendency to use the automobile only for business and such social purposes as transportation to picnics which take the whole family out into the country. For a year or two anagrams, jig-saw puzzles and "parlor games" requiring comparative quiet and concentration have been experiencing a revival of popularity. Houses are still being built, and in those of well-to-do citizens "games rooms" are now included, where members of the family are encouraged to entertain their friends.

Quite possibly the present economic deflation will be accompanied by a social deflation which will throw us back upon the resources of our homes and families. Then will come a realization that the "jazz age" has simply been a reaction of a prolonged post-war period and that its foundations are as those of a house built upon the sand.—Detroit Free Press.

TEMPLE TOWER

By CAPTAIN DRUMMOND

"Thanks most awfully," said the girl gratefully, "though I'm quite certain it won't be necessary. Oh! my goodness, what an awful looking man!"

The peephole in the gate had opened suddenly, and staring through it was the man who I placed at once as the pugilistic servant. He was certainly not a prepossessing sight as his narrow eyes took us in in turn, and the girl's exclamation was very natural. Suspicion was in every line of his face, and it was not until he saw Hugh that his expression cleared.

"This lady," said Hugh, "has come to do Secretarial work for Mr. Granger. Presumably you are expecting her."

The man made no reply, but stared up and down the road. Then at last we heard an iron bar clang and the gate opened just sufficiently to let him through.

"Come quickly," he said in a harsh voice. "Mr. Granger expects you, but we had forgotten your coming."

"My trunk is in the car," said the girl. "Get it, please. Don't touch the typewriter: I will carry that myself."

"Pat: I don't like it." Freckles made one final, despairing attempt. "Can't yoou possibly get out of it?"

"I can't say that I like it very much myself, Tom," she said quietly, "but I'm going through with it for all that."

The man, with the trunk on his shoulder, stood in the open gateway beckoning to her urgently.

"So long, old son," she said with a smile.

And then turning to Hugh she held out her hand. "Between two and three: I'll remember."

She took her machine out of the car, and the iron bar clanged to inside.

"Damn it," began Freckles, "she oughtn't to have gone. She——"

He paused suddenly, and at the same time I felt the flesh at the back of my scalp begin to tingle. For from inside the wall there came the deep-noted baying of a hound. It rose and fell, in a snarling roar of incredible ferocity: then as suddenly as it had begun it ceased, and only the faint noise of rattling bars could be heard.

I looked at the boy- he was as white as a sheet. And the next moment he had sprung forward and was pounding with his fists on the gate.

"Pat," he shouted, "Pat. Are you all right?"

"It's all right, Tom. It's locked up."

For a while we stood there looking at one another, whilst the colour slowly came back to his cheeks.

"By jove! that gave me a shock," he said at length. "I ought never to have let her take this filthy job," he added savagely.

"My dear fellow," he cried, "from the little I know of the adorable sex, the question, as they say in Parliament, did not arise. Miss Verney had determined to take the job, and that was that. Don't you worry: we'll look after her."

"I suppose you're right," said Freckles gloomily. "Anyway, I'm going to put up at the pub here till I'm certain she's all right."

For a moment Hugh hesitated, and I could see he was summing the boy up.

"Look here," he said after a while, "don't bother about a pub. Come and put up with me."

"Do you really mean it?" He stared at Hugh doubtfully. "I mean—dash it—you hardly know me. You don't even know my name."

"I'll trust you not to steal the spoons," laughed Hugh. "But it would be an advantage to know your name."

"Scott," said Freckles. "Tom Scott. And it's really most awfully good of you. I'd love to stay with you if you don't mind."

"Shouldn't have asked you if I did," said Hugh. "Let's get into that bus of yours and push me back to the house."

"It may take a bit of time to start her," said the proud owner. "I picked her up cheap."

At the end of five minutes his prophecy had proved correct. Acting under instructions, I had pulled out a wire and received a severe electric shock: Hugh had stamped on a button, causing a loud explosion and a discharge of grey smoke through the radiator. But finally she commenced to fire on at least two of the four cylinders and we started the drive face wreathed in a complacent smile.

"The steering is a bit dicky," he exclaimed as we missed a milestone by an inch. "Want knowing. Nearly took a tramcar coming over Vauxhill Bridge this morning."

"Do you mean to say," gasped Hugh, who was precariously clutching at the sides of the dickey, "that you drove this abom—this affair out of London?"

"Rather," said Freckles. "Why not?"

"To the left here," muttered Hugh feebly. "And for God's sake don't kill the cat. She has maternal duties to perform at the moment."

A frightful crash occurred in the bowels of the machine, and we came to a halt.

"When the brakes don't act, I put her into reverse," explained Ferckles, and Hugh nodded weakly.

"I no longer have any fears for Miss Verney," he remarked. "Her perils at present are as nothing to driving out of London in this machine. However, young fellow, we'll have it pushed round to the garage and then we must have a little talk. Because there are one or two things you've got to get into your head."

He led the way into the house, and we followed him.

"I'll show you your room afterwards," he said to Scott. "But after that motor drive I want a nerve tonic. Help yourselves, you fellows: it's all on the sideboard."

We took our drinks outside and sat down.

"Now I suppose I'm right," began Hugh, "in assuming that you are responsible for the ring on Miss Verney's finger?"

"That's so," said Freckles with a grin. "We fixed it a month ago, but since neither of us has a bean, the outlook is a bit grim."

"You've got plenty of time before you," laughed Hugh. "However, just at the moment we'll leave your matrimonial prospects. You heard what I said to your fiancee about those lights on the Marsh, didn't you?"

"Rather," cried the boy. "What's the game do you think?"

"That," said Hugh, "is exactly what Darrell and I had decided to find out. We still propose to find out, but now you and Miss Verney have come into the picture."

"I wish to heaven she hadn't," said Scott gloomily.

"If she hadn't you wouldn't have either," remarked Hugh. "And we shouldn't be sitting here drinking a whiskey and soda and having this talk. But she did and there's no more to be said about it. Now let me say at once that I do not believe she is in any danger, so you can get your mind at rest over that. But I do believe that she's in a house where some pretty funny doings are going to happen in the near future. It's obvious that her boss is terrified to death of something, though what that something is we know no more than you. But we propose to have a dip at finding out to-night."

"How?" cried Scott eagerly.

"I don't know whether you heard me mention Spragge's Farm. If you look through that telescope you'll find that it is focussed on it. And that is the house from which the lights have come. It therefore looks as if there was a connection between it and Mr. Granger's terror, which has only arisen since the signal was given. This afternoon Peter and I, by a little subterfuge, got as far as the front door, but we couldn't get any farther. However, it was enough to prove that there is someone else in the house beside Spragge and his wife, because we heard the blighter snoring. To-night we propose to investigate again, and you can come too if you like."

"If I like," cried Freckles joyfully. "Lead me to it."

"But on one condition," said Hugh quietly. "There seems to me to be every prospect of a bit of fun, and fun is too hard to come by to run any risk of having it spoiled. If you come in with us, Scott, you have got to do as you are told. No fancy tricks of your own or anything of that sort—do you get me?"

"Absolutely," answered the other. "I'll do just what you say."

"Good," said Hugh. "Now come here, and let me feel your muscle. Not too bad. Got it cranking that infernal contrivance of yours, I suppose. Anyway, don't forget the golden rule—if you've got to hit, hit first."

"I say you really are a priceless pair," said Freckles ecstatically.

"We may get a bit of sport," said Hugh casually, and then his eyes narrowed suddenly. "Isn't that a car, at the turn-off to Spragge's Farm?"

He went to the telescope and foccussed it.

EMBARRASSING MOMENTS

News of Our Own Village

The village Grits is going to hold a picnic soon, which is more than they've had in the last 4-5 elections, some say.

The R a hundred, a big balloon from England to the east of us, passed over this fair village early Mon. a.m., and many of the villagers has stiff necks as a result of the same.

The Fall Fair begins three weeks from Mon. Keep the date open say we, for Rolly Denne, our worthy Mayor, expects a rip snorter of a program.—(Advt).

Art Costello had his picture printed in this great family journal lately, and we're sorry to announce to them writing for papers of that date that the supply of copies run out long ago.

HAM BURNHAM, who is recovering from his recent political tour, and the results of the same was at the last writing still patiently waiting to see the BRITISH EMPIRE fall to pieces.

Getting appointed Judge just when another baby golf course started in this fair village is regarded by some as a tough brake for Joe Wearing.

Ed. Peck, our well known member expects a call to go to Ottawa east of here early next month to help Dick Bennett run the affairs of this fair Dominion. Ed. has been commuting to Ottawa for some time now and can find his way round without a map.

The village council has decided to ask the new TORY government at Ottawa to the east to put up a new public building here. Why not ask Dick Bennett to pay part of the paving costs too, lads?

A cold wave hit these parts at the beginning of the week and a strong smell of moth balls was caused by the digging up of over coats etc.

Ross Dobbin and Al Killaly was down to Montreal east of here a few days ago and give the R A HUNDRED the once over. According to the boys the balloon is a real smart job of work and Ross has decided to charter it for his honeymoon if any.

This berg ain't got no representatives at the Empire games at Hamilton west of here. They's plenty of hammer throwers in the village but none of them entered.

The Trent Waterway

Copy of letter sent to S. R. Armstrong, City Clerk, Peterborough.

Dear Sir:

It is believed that the time is again ripe to petition the Federal Government to complete the Trent Canal. As the Government has intimated a willingness to provide employment through the undertaking of and completing of public works, it is suggested that your municipality immediately forward a resolution to the Hon. R. J. Manion, Minister Department of Railways and Canals, Ottawa, and also to the Hon. R. B. Bennett, Premier.

Such a resolution might read as follows:

WHEREAS: the Government of Canada has expressed a willingness to provide employment at this time through the undertaking and completing of public works, and

WHEREAS: the Severn Division of the Trent Canal representing a large national investment which cannot yield its full return until the final link is built, is in an uncompleted state;

AND WHEREAS: the completion of the Severn Division at this time would relieve the unemployment to some considerable extent in Central Ontario and particularly the municipalities bordering on the System and Georgian Bay.

THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED: this Council petition the Federal Government to undertake this necessary work without further delay and to make a survey of bridges, locks and wharves with a view to making necessary improvements, particularly where one-way bridges are concerned, and wharves along the System, many of which are in a very poor state of repair.

As you know, and the members of your Council doubtless know, Canada has spent about $22,000,000 on the Trent Canal and but $3,000,00 more would be required to complete it. The Hon. Mr. Manion has seen certain sections of the canal during his visits in this district and we feel that he will be sympathetic, especially in view of the fact that in its present incomplete stage the canal does not offer the facilities and other inducements to cruising tourists that it would if the lockage arrangements were built on the first plans. These features need renewed emphasis in the light of business and tourist conditions that have developed during recent years.

The co-operation of your municipality in forwarding this resolution to Ottawa is earnestly sought at this time.

Yours very truly,
FRANK G. STINSON, Mgr.

A Thought

A GOOD HEART.

Would you like to hear what sort of questions the school-boys had to answer eighteen centuries ago? Very well; you shall. A rabbi, who lived nearly twenty years before Christ was born, set his pupils thinking by asking them, "What is the best thing for a man to possess?" One of them replied, "A kind nature"; another, "A good companion"; another, "A good neighbor." But one of them named Eleazer, said, "A good heart." "I like your answer best, Eleazer," said the master, "for it includes all the rest."

CHEMONG JUNIOR REGATTA

Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir:

I think your paper should ask about the Junior regatta at Chemong. This was advertized, a special notice was read at the Juniper children's regatta about it, asking everyone who could to go, but when some boys from Stoney went around to it, they were informed it was a private affair. Nothing was said about it being a closed regatta, and I think it showed very poor sportsmanship on some one's part barring boys who, being invited, went thirty miles by water to enter.

The boys who went, and then were barred, feel very keenly about it.

Yours very truly,

CUTTING OF WEEDS

Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir:

We find people in the country deeply interested in destroying weeds even to cutting them on the highway.

I was wondering if we couldn't have a similar weed by-law passed in our fair city that will apply to all. Or better still try and interest the Kiwanians, Rotarians or Gilmour Street Association to take a look a Charlotte street and Gilmour street, west.

FINANCIAL and MINING REVIEWS

DRASTIC DECLINE IN C. P. R STOCK BIG HIT OF WEEK

Canadian Stock Markets Pursued Downward Course During Week

WHEAT BIG TALK

Breaks of 5, 10 and 15 Points Occurred in Many Leading Issues

(Special to Examiner, Copyright 1930).

TORONTO, Aug. 16.—Unsettled by news that was hard to digest without an attack of indigestion, the Canadian stock markets pursued a downwar course again this week with many issues driven to new low levels for the year and beyond and practically all securities meeting with depreciation of some kind or another. It was not that the marketd was subjected to heavy selling pressure or liquidation. It was merely that the course of least resistance was on the downward side favored by reacting in Wall Street, unfavorable developments elsewhere and disturbing reports, official and otherwise, having to do with earnings. Breaks of five, ten and fifteen points occurred in selected issues and behind it all could be traced gossip that was not reassuring to stockholders and certainly did not encourage buying from other sources.

The most regrettable feature of the period was the drastic decline in Canadian Pacific Railway old, to the lowest since 1927. Considered the peer of Canadian investment stocks and always looked upon as the barometer of conditions in the Dominion the sharp depreciation in market value of the shares was depressing. However, the weakness should not be taken with too much significance as the price level was influenced by the reaction in Wall Street and gossip spread about that the dividend rate may have to be reduced in view of the present rate of earnings. Like all other carriers, C.P.R. was affected by the slow movement of grain and decreased car loadings in recent months but this situation can change very rapidly with a resumption of the grain movement. Directors have already declared the third quarterly payment of $2.50 a share on the common stock and there only remain the declaration of the dividend for final three months of 1930. A reduction in the months to come is not anticipated as C.P.R. has a substantial surplus built up and any deficit between profit and earnings can be taken care of from this source.

As the time draws near for the harvesting of the 1930 western wheat crop, close attention is being paid to the amount of grain in storage and the possibilities of marketing the carry over and export surplus of the new crop, as having a decided bearing on business for the balance of the year. Total stocks of grain in storage in Canada as of July 31, 1930, the end of the crop year, established a new high record at 111,692,519 bushels compared with 104,383,221 bushels at the end of the 1929 period, but if stocks of Canadian wheat in storage in the United are included the figures are more favorable at 127,757,761 bushels against 127,297,146 bushels in 1929. The new Canadian crop is expected to yield about 325 million bushels. In the United States the drought has made inroads into the corn crop and, although the yield of wheat is estimated at some 14 million bushels higher, wheat will have to be substituted for other eeds, leaving this country with little or no surplus. On the other hand the International Institute of Agriculture estimates a world crop of approximately one billion bushels greater than the five year average.

During the week a conference of pool officials, the prime minister and the ministers from the prairie province and executives of the Canadian banks was held at Ottawa. It was subsequently learned that the western provinces saw no reason for renewing their guarantees and with no guarantee forthcoming from the federal government the amount to be advanced by the banks to finance the new crop becomes a business matter between the banks and pool officials. It is said the banks are willing to advance sufficient to make an initial payment of 60 cents while the pool is hoping to pay 70 cents a bushel. The amount of the initial payment concerns the stock markets as an indication of the purchasing power of the west this fall.

Gyrations in the wheat pits are detracting speculative interest from the Canadian stock markets. The stock exchanges for weeks have presented very little opportunity for speculative profits and those looking for action have turned to the commodity markets. Canadians favor the long side rather than the short, relying on appreciation rather than depreciation of security value for the making of money. In a declining market selling is from tired and pressed holders and buying by investors who take the opportunity of picking up good stocks at enhanced dividend yields. This does not make for activity but does go a long way in improving the technical position by removing stocks from weak to strong hands and by depleting the excess supply of securities thrown on the market by speculative holders. This phase of the market situation is pretty well over, with but there is nothing at the moment to create fresh interest that would bring a large following. News developments of late have been a hinderance rather than an aid to the markets and the public has long been standing on the sidelines waiting further developments in the business situation and the clearing of the atmosphere that would indicate the present recession has been brought to a

POTATOES SELL AT 25c PER PECK

Vegetables Are Plentiful On Farmer's Market—Butter 32 Cents

EGGS BRING 28 TO 32

The local market was fairly brisk this morning, with corn featured at 20 and 25 cents a dozen. Farmers were not particularly anxious to get rid of their potatoes at 25 cents a peck here, in view of the fact that they can get $1.50 a bag for them in Port Hope. Indications for the late crop are poor.

A few early pumpkins were seen at 10 and 15 cents each, while vegetable marrow and squash were going for 10 cents apiece before the morning was over.

Duchess and Yellow Transparent apples were prominent—the former ranging from 25 to 40 cents, and the latter going at 25c. Blueberries were selling at 20 cents the quart.

Onions were commanding 10 cents in 3-pound lots, with picking onions at 15c the quart basket. Carrots were going at 3 bunches for 10c, beans at 5 cents a quart, and large slicing cucumbers at 5 cents each. Beets were plentiful at 5 cents a bunch, and pickling beets at 40 cents the large basket. Cabbages were not too plantiful at 5 and 10 cents a head. Hot peppers were 3 for 10c; sweet peppers, 5 cents each. Tomatoes were 60 cents for a large basket.

Fowls ranged from 30 to 35 cents a pound. Eggs were getting from 28 to 32c a dozen, while butter remained at 32c the pound. Honey was seen at 65 cents the 5-pound pail.

RIFLEMEN MEET IN FINAL STAGES

One Hundred and Fifty Marksmen Battle for Governor General's Prize

SCORES VERY HIGH

CONNAUGHT RIFLE RANGES, OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 16. (CP)—Conditions were decidedly favorable early today for the 150 marksmen who faced the targets at the Dominion Rifle Association meeting in the final stage of the Governor General's match, outstanding marksmanship event of the year. While the sky was overcast and the sun hidden occasionally, the subdued light was highly welcomed for it made the targets appear more clearly than a bright sun, with its consequent mirages, might have done.

Start at 10:45 A.M.

Sharp at 10:45 o'clock this morning a crackling burst of fire rose from 200 yard firing point and the match had begun.

Firing at this distance continued until noon, when a short recess was taken for lunch and a rest from the nerve-racking strain. At 2.45 p.m., shooting again commenced and will continue until four o'clock or shortly after, when the winner of the event will be chaired in traditional fashion and carried to the Administration Building, to receive the prize of prizes. The final range of the match is at 900 yards.

Scores have been unusually high in every match this week, and to-day some record-breaking performances are expected. The outstanding favorites, as usual, have been placed on the centre butts, but the possibility exists that an outsider, placed far down from the charmed centre, may again win the trophy. This happened last year, when Sgt. J. V. Austman, Kenaston, Sask., who is again in the running, won the gold medal and $200 in cash.

CANADA'S GOLD RESERVES EQUAL $6.50 PER CAPITA

Total Gold in Central Reserves of 40 Nations Amounts to Over $10,000,000,000

FLURRIES ON MARTS

By E. F. Brayham.

TORONTO, Aug. 16 (Special to The Examiner).—Canada is vitally interested in the world's gold position because she is, next to the Rand, not only the largest producer of this metal but also due to the fact that with the expansions imminent in her position as a world trader, it is about time that consideration was given for reinforcing her gold reserves.

It is generally known that for internal purposes gold has already been largely abandoned by the world's nations; nevertheless, this fact has not affected the hoarding of the yellow metal internationally. Total gold in the central reserves of 40 world nations amounts to over $10,000,000,000, having almost doubled since 1914 and increased by 60 per cent. since 1919. Out of this total 6 nations control nearly 75 per cent. of this metal. The current production of gold is placed at slightly over $400,000,000, of which over 50 per cent. is produced by South Africa, 10 per cent. each by Canada and United States and the remainder by the rest of the world. Consumption during 1929 was placed at $80,000,000 by India for non-monetary uses; $280,000,000 by the world's central banks as reserves and the balance for industrial arts. During 1929 a net increase of $280,000,000 was shown in the gold holdings of the world's central bank reserves.

While the world's central banks are making efforts to repair and increase their gold reserves, flurries are again visible in the foreign exchange marts. It is satisfying at this juncture to note that the Canadian dollar is quoted at a premium in these trying times. Although, the Dominion's gold reserves are lower at present than they have been during the past quinquennial, yet the percentage held in reserve against the circulation has not declined appreciably from the level legally required. During the past few weeks considerable gold has been shipped by the United States to Canada owing to the general contraction in call loans of Canadian banks in the New York money market.

Comparison between the gold held against circulation proves interesting because although France is the second largest holder of gold -today, yet she has the lowest percentage of cover among the following gold standard countries.

Spain has since the Great War, zealously accumulated gold and her cover for note circulation is 55%, while it is but 40% in Great Britain, 28% in Canada and 12% in France. Figuring the gold stocks in relation to population France leads the world with $41.00 per capita, the United States $37.00, United Kingdom $16.00, Germany $8.75, Canada, $6.50 and Italy $5.00. When compared to national revenue, Canada (whose consolidated revenue is evaluated at $365,000,000) has gold in stock which represents about 17½% of its revenue, France (whose national revenue is evaluated at 250,000,000,000 francs) has gold in stock which represents 16½% of it revenue, the United States (whose national revenue is evaluated at $89,000,000,000) has gold in stock which represents about 5% of its revenue, and the United Kingdom (whose national revenue is evaluated at £3,700,000,000) has stock representing 3½% of its revenue.

The United States leads the world with over $3,000,000,000 worth of gold of which 2-3 are used as a currency reserve and it is estimated that "a dollar of paper currency ties up about thirty times as much gold as a dollar or bank deposits." Frane is second with more than $1,900,000,000; England third with about $700,000,000, Germany fourth with $650,000,000, Argentine fifth with $500,000,000 and Italy sixth with $225,000,000. Hitherto France, Germany and Italy forbade the export of gold and only recently this restriction was removed in order to stabilize their exchanges and with the view to encourage freer commercial intercourse. Since the termination of the War, London has experienced a severe drain on its gold resources so as to maintain its market as the world's premier financial centre. On the aggregate, during 1929 England lost nearly $40,000,000 worth of gold while United States and France added $154,000,000 and $380,000,000 respectively.

Accumulation of vast gold reserve is no panacea for the financial ills of a country. It will be observed that while the United States is the largest holder of gold yet it has numerous difficult problems indirectly arising out of this vast accumulation because of the fact that her customers have been impoverished and therefore their buying power has decreased substantially. United States bankers now consider it imperative to release gold not only because their exchange is now depreciated, but also as an effective measure to correct the condition patent among the lesser nations of the world whose capacity to buy has been limited and circulation restricted owing to inadequate gold reserves. It is more than probably that during the next three months substantial sums of money will be transferred abroad from New York via the Gold route.

CELEBRATES ANNIVERSARY.

KITCHENER, Ont., Aug. 15. —(C.P.)—Mother Evangelista, Mother Superior of St. Agatha Orphanage for the past 10 years, has just celebrated 50 years of service in holy orders. Appropriate ceremonies were held in the church. The mother entered the church wearing a wreath of thorns entwined with myrtle and gold leaves representing 50 years of devotion to holy work. She was born in Rochester, N. Y., as Barbara Kinsky. She spent one year in Milwaukee, Wis., after taking her holy vows and then came to New Germany Parish, near the city, where she had labored 39 years.

ATLANTIC CROSSED BY GIANT AIRLINER

It took an hour and 22 minutes to bring in the airship from the time it was sighted over the field.

Lord Thompson, Minister for Air, greeted the homecomers at the top of the landing tower, after they had been examined by the Customs officers. In enterprising fashion Lord Thompson broadcast a speech, and regular British Broadcasting Company announcers were on the air with a continuous description of the arrival and mooring of the airship.

Dies Watching Ship Land.

One tragic incident marred the return of the voyagers. Edward Lill, a prominent member of the Subury District Council, fell dead while watching the R-100 as the crew tied her to the mast.

Most of the spectators dispensed with all formality and lay flat on their backs on the ground, the better to see what was going on above them, and many brought with them portable radio sets with which they listened rapidly to the running description of what was going on at the top of the tall mast.

Passengers and crew were unanimous in their expression of belief that the trip of the R-100 had proved beyond question the feasibility of trans-Atlantic commercial airship communication.

That the giant ship rode smoothly through a 75-mile an hour gale with no discomfort to those on board was cited by passengers as the best evidence of her stability. A brimming glass of water, placed on a table in the cabin of the R-100 before the departure from Montreal did not spill a drop all the way across the Atlantic.

The R-100 passengers acquired a sense of absolute security within a few hours after the start of the voyage. The ship averaged a speed approximately three times greater than that of the fastest of ocean liners, once aided by a south-west gale.

Scotch Immigrants Seek Montreal Aid

MONTREAL, Que., Aug. 16 (C.P.). —Charitable organizations in the city to-day interested themselves in the case of James, Jr., and James McInch, Sr., two Scotsmen of Hamilton, Ont., who are stranded in Montreal without money or friends.

R. B. Sim, general secretary of St. Andrew's Society of Montreal, said an effort would be made to have the man and his son sent back to Scotland, and if this were impossible to ask the city to share with the society the expense of their railway fare to Hamilton.

The ill-luck of the father and son started when the younger of the two became homesick and lonesome for his mother in Scotland. He ran away from his father in Hamilton, and, following his arrest in Montreal, his father having no money to bring him back, and with no friends to loan him some, hiked to Montreal, a distance of nearly 400 miles.

MURDERED GANG LEADER'S BOOKS ARE DISCOVERED

Ledger Shows Expenditures to Judges, Politicians and Police

FOUND IN LINGLE PROBE

Zuta-Moran-Aiello Racketeers' Net Profit In Week Is $75,135.37

CHICAGO, Ills., August 16 (C.P.). —Carefully preserved records of a slain gang leader were made public by the State's Attorney's Office last night, showing enormous receipts from liquor, gambling, and vice interests on one side of the ledger and substantial disbursements to judges, politicians, and police on the other.

The cancelled cheques, notes and ledger sheets of Jack Zuta, vice overlord, who was shot down in a Wisconsin dance hall recently, were found in a secret safety deposit box yesterday by investigators for the State's Attorney's Office, assigned to solve the slaying of Jake Lingle, the Tribune reporter.

Copies Given Press.

During the day, prosecutors refused to divulge the secrets they had found, saying only that they were of a sensational nature. Late last night they relented and handed newspapermen photostatic copies of what they said were only a small part of the Zuta records.

The published records included the following items:

A cancelled cheque for $250 made out to a former Judge of Municipal, Superior, and Criminal Courts.

An unpaid note for $600 on which appeared the named of a former police sergeant who at one time was assigned to investigation of vote frauds and who later worked under the Civic Safety Commission.

Checks totalling $600, either made payable to or endorsed in the name of a former State Senator and Westside political leader.

A cancelled cheque for $500 made payable to a large Cook County Political Club.

Cancelled cheques of $500 and $100 endorsed in the name of an attorney who is the brother of a Circuit Court Judge.

A ledger sheet which in headed, "Period end, No. 12 inclusive," shows receipts of $429,046.78, and net profits of $75,135.37. Investigators believe this was the record for one week of the gambling and bootlegging enterprises of the Zuta-Moran-Aiello gang.

DICKENS' LONDON STANDS REVEALED

New "London of Dickens" Searches Out Every Spot Venerated by Writer.

LONDON, Aug. 16 (By Thos. T. Champion, Canadian Press Staff Correspondent)—Any ardent member of a Dickens Fellowship who comes to London makes an itinerary all his own. He may be eager to behold Westminster Abbey, but he will be at least as eager to see "Little Dorrit's Church." He may look forward to exploring the Tower of London, but he will be as anxious to wander in Temple Gardens, where Ruth Pinch used to meet John Westlock. The late F. C. Wade, Agent-General for British Columbia, spent many an hour in taking Canadian members of the Dickens Fellowship round odd nooks and corners of London rendered memorable by the great writer. Fred Wade was a Dickensian of independent ideas, and his conclusions on Dickens lore and topography did not always coincide with what may be called the Authorized Version. This is not saying, though, that Wade must necessarily have been wrong.

One need not be a veritable Dickens "fan" to appreciate the new edition of "The London of Dickens," by Walter Dexter, published by Cecil Palmer. In fifteen chapters, each covering a tour which it would occupy two hours to walk, the author includes every street and every house mentioned in Dickens' works. He also includes references to every house in London in which Dickens ever resided.

London has altered immeasurably of course since the days of Dickens, and even if some of the buildings which he described are still in existence their surroundings are nearly all entirely different. Take St. Martin's Church, Trafalgar Square, for instance, on the steps of which David Copperfield encountered Mr. Peggotty, after the long search for Little Em'ly. As one stands nowadays on these steps and surveys the broad space before them it is a little hard to realise that in Mr. Peggotty's time there was neither a Trafalgar Square nor a Nelson Monument. Just round the corner of the Square in the Strand one finds today the Golden Cross Hotel. "Ah, that's the place from which Pickwickians set out with Jingle," declares the ardent but uncertain lover of Dickens. The Golden Cross of the Pickwick Papers, where also David Copperfield laid his head when Betsy Trotwood sent him on holiday, stood on the spot where the Nelson Monument now is.

Readers will recall no doubt an allusion by David Copperfield to his taking an early morning swim in an old Roman bath, which existed just off the Strand. "It may be there yet," remarked David parenthetically. Yes, and it is still there,—a century or more after Copperfield's time—and is still being used largely as Copperfield used it, and as it was used by young Romans when the Crucifixion was a comparatively recent event.

FAVORS BUSINESS FOR YOUNG GIRLS

Woman Stock Broker Says Commercial World Holds Many Opportunities For Women.

LONDON, Aug. 15 (C.P.).—Safety first in the choice of career for girls was strongly condemned by Miss Gordon Holmes, the woman stock-broker, at the first luncheon of the Industry and Commerce Board section of the Lyceum Club, Piccadilly.

"Safety and enterprise are opposite terms," she declared. "I wish parents would put their girls in business careers, rather than in jobs so dear to parents' hearts like banks and the civil service, because they think they are so safe. Safe for what? I should say the lunatic asylum, for these jobs, which are bad enough for men with their infinitely better pay and chances of promotion, hold few prospects for women. They have no hope for the future except a small pension years hence. Of course, business is hard work, with often very long hours, but it is great fun, and there are many degrees of success to be achieved—and there is no champagne like success."

Mrs. Fox Pitt, of Peter Jones, Ltd., said that their business was now an entirely profit-sharing one, which was a great incentive to work among the employees. Miss Edith Beesley, the first woman manager of an insurance company, said that there was much scope for women insurance brokers—"a pleasant and interesting business, with excellent prospects. Women," she urged, "should put their insurance in the hands of women."

BITS OF CLOTH CLUE TO DEATH

Searchers Still Seek Body of New Jersey Man on Mount Robson

MISSING 10 DAYS

MOUNT ROBSON, B.C., Aug. 16.—(C.P.)—Tattered bits of cloth found on the western clope of Mount Robson apparently seal the fate of Newman D. Waffl, New Jersey school master, who essayed to climb the mighty peak ten days ago. . .

Swiss guides tracking the Jersey tutor along the difficult western ascent, discovered the clues Friday. Headmaster of Carteret Academy in Orange N.J., Waffl had departed from Berg Lake camp at the base of the 13,000-foot peak, carrying only two days' provisions. Robson had never been surmounted by the western path which Waffl tried.

Search for Waffl's remains will be continued, under the direction of F. N. Waterman of the Canadian Alpine Club. Waterman, a resident of Summit, N.J., is a friend of Waffl, who came to Mount Robson immediately on the report of the schoolmaster's failure to return from his attempted climb.

FOUR MEN SEEN

he could not bring them back from Montreal on a charge of damaging the boat. However, he was keeping in touch with the Immigration Home and if the Montreal police came across the three men, they would be subjected to questioning there.

Both Police Chief Moon and Dr. Mather, the coroner, still hold to the foul play theory, a belief which is held generally here.

It was suggested by Percy Bowlby, the postmaster's son, that White might have slipped into the river, striking his head on the rocks, when going down to bathe on Sunday. The strong wind which was then blowing, he claims, would have caused the body to drift down the river, whence it would return in the direction of the lake when the wind abated in the middle of the week.

It is the Coroner's contention that the face would have been more severely damaged if the youth had fallen.

coaches gave last minute attention to those of their charges who were competing this afternoon; some went to the field in the cool morning for limbering-up exercises.

Spectators Come Early

Spectators made an early appearance, many plainly curious, but when the Governor General formally opened the games at 2.30 o'clock with a speech that was broadcast throughout the Dominion, the seating accommodation of 15,000 was taxed.

The city dressed in its finest colors. Flags and bunting were everywhere and a holiday air had taken possession of Hamilton. The usualy early Saturday crowds in the street were augmented by scores of visitors for the games. Automobiles had taken up an early trek over the highways and by mid-morning the downtown streets had presented a traffic problem.

The heats and finals of the 440 yards hurdles and the 220 yards, the heats of the 880 yards runs were held this afternoon. The six-mile races were also contested and the throwing the discus and running hop, step and jump events were concluded.

Swimming Championships

To-night the Empire swimming championships get underway at the municipal bathing pool, with contests in the 440 yards, free style, fancy springboard diving for men, 100 yards back stroke for women and 200 yards breast stroke for women.

DRESSES INSURED

Merchants Tire of "Gyp" Game in Hollywood.

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 16.—Local merchants dealing in ladies' wear have for a number of years been the victims of grifting press agents and picture names who connived them out of dresses, hats and shoes under the general heading of publicity.

Press agents sold the stores the idea of furnishings a wardrobe for their clients in which to be photographed and build up the store on any resulting publicity. In most cases the store furnished the outfit and got copies of the stills, but when it came to getting the clothes returned it was usually given up as a bad job after several tries.

Recently one of the merchants, known as a sap for the grifters, decided he had enough of the bite. The publicity he was getting was okay but it wasn't worth $100 worth of clothes every time a film femme got mugged.

He purchased a blanket insurance policy against theft on all clothes going out of the store for publicity purposes.

Now when a dress has been in the hands of a p. a. or actress for 10 days after the picture is taken, the insurance company sends out an adjuster who picks up the dress or threatens to place a theft charge.

When the squawk goes into the store about the insult, the manager claims he knows nothing about it. He explains that all clothing in the store is covered by insurance and that his hands are tied and advises that the dress be returned. Which it is.

ONE JOLSON FILM

Mammy Singer to Make One a Year.

Al Jolson's arrangements with United Artists are reported in process of re-negotiation. It is understood that, instead of making two pictures in one year, the mammy yodeler will make two films in the same number of years.

United Artists desired the time change to permit a greater clearance because of the high overhead on the first Jolson picture, "Sons o' Guns." With Jolson's end personally $500,000 the screen rights $110,000, and Lily Damita at $50,000, it will run into big figures on production.

Not to have two United Artists' Jolson pictures overlapping in distribution, and also to allow the Warner series to age, behind the new plan.

COLLEEN MOORE GOES THEATRE

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 16.—Colleen Moore, at one time rated by an actual exhibitors' poll as the most popular girl on the screen, leaves for New York the last of August to begin rehearsals for a play.

Colleen's little plan to stage her comeback via the footlights makes one wonder if there isn't a plan on foot on the part of certain stage producers to try and compete with the screen.

In the last few days Vilma Banky and Rod La Roque, through the offices of Maurice Revnes, signed an agreement to make their appearance on Broadway. Both their contracts, as well as Miss Moore's, are with Arch Selwyn, who will produce their plays in conjunction with George Tyler and Charles Dillingham.

McCORMACK IN LONDON.

LONDON, Aug. 16.—Following its run of six weeks at the Prince Edward as a pre-release high scale attraction "Song of My Heart" (Fox-McCormack) has caught on at the Polytechnic cinema.

Londoners are now spending on social services $50,000,000 a year more than in 1920.

'GRUMPY' SHOWN NOW AS TALKIE

Cyril Maude Pleases Critics In Old Stage Hit.

Cyril Maude in "Grumpy" is now showing at the Paramount, New York. As a talker it is high grade in ever respect.

In this, as with every one of the old plays and pictures which have been and are being re-made in dialog, the same observation holds true. It's either that the moral standard or the general dramatics of the original piece have not kept pace with the present day and age, or, rather, the 1930, highly-sophisticated (some might call it hard-boiled) fan finds that what were crucial battles for one's honor aren't today worth talking about, what with nite clubs, stalling flivvers and post-prohibition beverages. Or in the matter of situation, the same conclusion holds—the contemporaneous standard of dramatics, suspense, technique, situation and denouement are far ahead of what held the public interest a decade or two ago. As a matter of fact, four and five years ago a lot of difference these days.

Maude's performance certainly makes the 1930 "Grumpy" what it is, not that it has been remodeled, altered or modernized, but the mellowness and seasoning of a star's experience in having played the stage role over 1,400 times (regulation titular preface) evidences itself in the expert performance.

Maude plays the same old senile, testy, cross and insolent, yet loveable, old "Grumpy" in the same manner, and the melodramatic situations obtain as heretofore; and for the sake of something which the old-timers hold sentimentally dear it is satisfying to note that even under the 1930 standard of things "Grumpy" is satisfactory film fare.

QUEBEC A MARKET.

PARIS, Aug. 16.—Canadian film market is the next goal of French producers with a view to better amortize their own talkers. French speaking element in Canada regarded as a sure prospect.

Robert Hurel, former head of Franco-Film, who was eased out of the Gaumont-Franco-Film-Aubert reorganization, is heading a group of indie French producers and sails soon for Canada to open there a distribution agency and handle French talker product.

Helen Kane Denies $40,000 N.Y. Deposit

CHICAGO, Aug. 16.—"No, sir. I won't draw out a penny of that $40,000 in the Plaza Trust Company in New York, and the reason is I haven't $40,000 there or in any other New York bank."

Helen Kane, appearing this week in a Chicago theatre, thus commented to-day on the report from New York a court order there had restrained her from drawing on an account placed to her credit in the Plaza Trust Company by Murray J. Posner, a New York dress manufacturer.

CLARA BOW SLIPPING

Mitzi Green Billed Above Recent Star.

MINNEAPOLIS, Aug. 16.—Clara Bow took second place to little Mitzi Green in the billing for "Love Among the Millionaires", last week's Minnesota theatre attraction.

Minnesota ads carried Miss Green on top in type about four times the size of that of Miss Bow's.

It's all principally because Miss Bow has been hurt with the public here by too much unfavorable newspaper notoriety, with the result that she has been slipping alarmingly as a local box office attraction. Her last picture, "True to the Navy," was a distinct disappointment as a gross-getter.

SCREEN AND STAGE NOTES

Who wouldn't tear up a contract when by doing so one gets a better one? Bebe Daniels was invited to tear up her contract by R-K-O, and then handed a new piece of paper. Bebe did as she was told and on Saturday morning signed a new contract whereby she makes three pictures a year and all of them specials. The plan is to make productions on the order of "Rio Rita" and "Dixiana."

Fine as Miss Daniel's work is in these two musical comedies, there are those who say her best performance is in "Lawful Larceny."

Maurice Chevalier's farewell night at the Roosevelt will go down in film history. The popular Frenchman was given a farewell party the like of which has never been seen even in social Hollywood. Chevalier talked and sang and did marvelous imitations of well-known French actors for more than an hour and he kept that crowded room so well entertained that there were cries of "bravo—more, more!"

In his own inimitable fashion, he paid tribute to Jesse Lasky, B. P. Schulberg, Al Coffman, Adolph Zukor, Walter Wanger and Ernst Lubitsch. He sang a song in Hebrew and he knelt in the crowded assemblage to pay homage to Mary Pickford. He kissed Douglas Fairbanks on both cheeks. Mr. Fairbanks was visibly embarrassed, but the gay, charming Frenchman passed off the little incident by singing another French song.

Hollywood loves Chevalier—no actor in years has had his popularity—and Chevalier loves Hollywood.

When Billie Rose and Fanny Brice (Mrs. Rose) were on the coast they took a house with a swimming pool. Vacant houses with attached pools which have been forgotten and stand unemptied become a free-for-all when word gets around.

The first morning the Roses awoke they found around 20 people in their pool. They both looked at each other and together asked, "Did you invite them?" When the family check-up revealed neither responsible, the Roses hopped in their car and went to the beach for a swim.

When Fox engaged Reginald Dandy two years ago his name was changed to John Garrick. Actor liked the new monicker so well he's had it legalized.

Radio is preparing to shoot "Beau Ideal" sequel to "Beau Geste". Herbert Brennon will direct.

When First National engaged twoweek old twins for a picture they were informed by the Board of Education that the infants couldn't be used more than 20 minutes a day, musn't be exposed to lights more than 30 seconds at a time and must be in darkness for one minute following each shot. This is better treatment than a star can get.

Harold Lloyd was offered a guarantee to endorse a brand of cigarets. Believing that his chief boosters are kids, he refused to endorse rather than be painted by reformers as a "horrible example" to the youngsters.

DANCER TO SUE RICH EX-FIANCE

Brooklyn Perfume Maker Sought By Belle Olska Proves He is Not "Ted Harris."

WANTS $50,000.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—Miss Belle Olska, nineteen, one of the pretties who danced and spoke a few lines with a French accent in "Fifty Million Frenchmen," wants $50,000 for a broken marriage promise.

She is going to sue for that amount her former fiance, "Ted Harris," just as soon as she can locate Mr. Harris and find out his real name. All she has for identification is a snapshot of her wooer in a sheiky bathrobe, and a couple of postcards in shaky handwriting.

Miss Olska sat in the office of her attorney yesterday. From Ellis's desk the sheiky snapshot of "Mr. Harris" looked back at her. She drew the white fox over her left shoulder where Mr. Harris' gardenias used to be.

Promised Her Ring.

For Harris met her at the stage door last January 7, with a corsage of gardenias in his hand. Gardenias suited her Oriental beauty. He manoeuvred an introduction through a girl friend, she said, and thereafter kept up the gardenias and promised a "ten karat" marquise diamond ring.

They set the wedding date for June 7—Belle remembers all the dates—and the place was to be the Park Manor on Eastern Parkway. She introduced him to her girl friends, and they envied her rich suitor, for wasn't he the owner of a perfume company in Brooklyn? He said he was.

Belle's perfume baron left her—for Southampton ostensibly, then Europe. Late in April she received a postal card from Plymouth saying he was on his way, steaming along on the Berengaria.

But the long arm of coincidence reached out and she bumped into him two days later in New York. Miss Olska said her suitor's cousin, "Syd Harris," then called her up to make an appointment for her to see "Ted." The "cousin" broke the news that "Ted" had a wife and child and the June wedding was off. He had asked a friend to mail the postcard.

"Ted" admitted all, but promised to get a divorce and marry Belle. Then he drove off in the Chrysler sedan.

Belle looked up a license number she had noted. This license number belonged to a car owned by Hyman Heubshman, and Hyman Heubshman was found to be the owner of the Ritz Perfume Company in Brooklyn. Attorney Ellis summoned Mr. Heubshman, who promptly appeared with his own attorney, Henry S. Dresner, to find out what the summons was all about.

Then the Shock!

Miss Olska and Ellis could see at a glance that Heubshman was not "Ted Harris." There was the bathrobe picture of "Mr. Harris" to prove it. Ellis discontinued the action against Heubshman in writing.

Was Mr. Heubshman disturbed over the action of "Mr. Harris"? Heubshman said he refused to answer questions.

That is how matters now stand. It remains for Ellis to get out an order for examination of Heubshman before trial to ascertain if he can identify Harris. Then Miss Olska can slop that breach of promise suit for $50,000 upon the bathrobed shoulders.

TRAGIC PREDICAMENT OF ATHLETE WITH FILM BEARD

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 16.—Wade Bond, U.S.C. student and football player, who was given a bit in "The Big Trail" at Fox, has a chance to continue his screen career and complete his college education at the same time. Only fly in the ointment is that he grew a full beard for the part in "Trail" and the beard is his biggest asset for a new assignment.

Howard Jones, football coach of the university, says that if Bond wears the bear he's off the team, as the muff would be too big an advantage for the opponents.

Bond must now decide to give up the beard and career, or education days.

VILMA BANKY SAILS.

Vilma Banky sailed for Europe recently. She will spend three weeks with her parents in Hungary and then return here.

Both Miss Banky and Rod La Rocque, her husband, are negotiating to appear together in a New York show this fall.

Ronald Colman, who avoids newspaper reporters and sob sisters like poison, was cornered some weeks ago by the representative of a fan magazine.

Proceeding to pump the English star to ascertain his preference in femininity, the reporter insisted upon knowing if Colman didn't admire the eyes of Mary Pickford, the lips of Constance Bennett, the hair of Vilma Banky, etc. Not wishing to deny such charms, Colman admitted these opints.

Some time later he was horrified to read an elaborate interview about his "Dream Girl" with Pickford eyes, Bennett lips, Banky hair, etc.

HORSE CAB TOUR OF PARIS LANDS U. S. MAN IN JAIL

PARIS, Aug. 16. — Nocturnal horse cab tour of Paris cost Logan Bailey, scion of a wealthy Louisville, Ky., horse-breeder, two nights and a day in a Parisian police station.

Police said tonight Bailey, a sculptor, will be released to-morrow without trial.

Police were told Bailey, with two companions, took the cab when the driver was absent. In the suburb of Argeuil, the cab went into a ditch and fell apart.

MEDICINE MAN

By A. J. DALRYMPLE

Indian babies in moss bags.

Josiah Young is a Redskin in the literal sense of the word. His skin is a rich copper in the shadows. The highlights are a bright red.

IN the solitude of the forests of northern Manitoba an aged Indian "walks with his eyes on the ground." Beyond the farthest reaches of the mighty Saskatchewan he penetrates the wilderness "where white man and cattle never trod." He is Josiah Young, one of the few remaining medicine men of the old north-west. He is searching for herbs which he will use to cure disease in the scattered camps of the Swampy Crees.

I met him at the door of a cabin near a clump of poplar by the Pasquia river, just before he started on his spring quest for herbs, roots and leaves which will go into the pot to stew and steam, and make "good medicine."

"Doctor" Josiah Young is a stocky, broad-shouldered man of medium height. His head is large and crowned with a heavy shock of iron-gray hair. His face invites interest. The skin is clear, the flesh firm, almost without trace of the wrinkles. Although his mother was French, and his father Cree, his face shows none of the finer temperings of feature or color that might have come as the gift of European forebears. His features are those of the native. He has the brown eyes, the firm lips, thin and almost a perfect arc dropping at the corners. The eyes are wide apart; the cheek bones high.

Josiah Young is a Redskin in the literal sense of the word. His skin is a rich copper color in the shadows. The high lights are a bright red and as polished as the old briar he smokes.

Josiah Young does not know where or exactly when he was born. But he does know "it was long ago and far away." This with a sweeping gesture to the south. It is probable that his forefathers were meat-eating Crees of the prairies. A branch of the plains Indians, harried by a sturdier fighting stock, were driven north into the marshes stretching for hundreds of miles on either side of the Saskatchewan river. They became known as Swampy Crees, or fish-eating Crees, and are considered less hardy than those roaming the grasslands to the south.

Josiah's mother was the former Isabel Constant, one of the loveliest daughters of Constants, who were, according to old-timers, among the wirst whites to penetrate north of 53. Constant spells aristocracy among members of The Pas band. One of their number, Patrick Constant, is at present chief of the tribe. Josiah's father was Edward Young, a full-blooded Cree.

Josiah Young is about eighty years of age. His eyes are not as clear as of yore, and he coughs frequently. But colds are to be expected among the natives. The majority are suffering from tuberculosis. He is strong though and thinks nothing of making a trip of nearly 200 miles to find a certain patch of herbs so far in the wilderness that no other human foot has trod that way, to his knowledge.

White Plague is Baffling

HE lives with his wife on the "point" about five miles south of The Pas. He walks to town, careless of December blizzards, the slush ice of May or the hot winds of August; buys his flour and tobacco and trudges home with his pack on his back.

The fact that the "doctor" speaks practically no English, and guards his formulas jealously, proves a problem in securing data on therapeutics and ministrations to the remnants of a vanishing race. To elicit information on elixirs it was necessary to pave the way over a period of months, and then find a middleman, friend of whites and Indians, to arrange a series of discussions on cures. J. R. Kerr, veteran fur buyer of the Hudson bay regions, undertook the task, together with his interpreter, Louison Marcellais, of the Marcellais stock associated with the historical Franklin expedition.

The "doctor" agreed to talk of his work among the Indians and whites before the coming of accredited practitioners. He would not go the length of giving his recipes, drachm for drachm, and rightly so. They are his. He has spent a lifetime in research, and his reward is his findings and his reputation. He runs a trap line, however, when not practicing the arts of healing. As muskrat prices were low this spring and the catch small, owing to deep snow, he displayed a certain willingness to part with some information for a "present" in the form of a package of lard, a tin of raspberry jam, a bag of flour and three cartons of tobacco. And he accepted the groceries with the same professional grace as any professional man accepts your cheque.

His first contact with drugs came in the late '70's, when he met a soldier, or maybe it was a trader who had a medicine chest.

"I wanted to know how to cure the sick," says the healer. "I gave lots of things to the man from far away so he would show me how to use the medicines. I tried them, but they were not much good. Then I tried herbs. They were no better. Then I met a pure-blooded Indian, John Conapis. He came from the south. He spent four years teaching me how to make medicines out of roots.

"After studying four years the medicines would not work for me. Then I experimented four years. No good. I stopped four years. After that I started again and the medicine worked."

Here one catches a hint of all three sides of the healing art of the aborigine. There is the study, the application and the hocus-pocus, faith and charms.

"Before the coming of the white doctors I cured many people," says the medicine man. "I did not cure all. Many died. Some would have died anyway. They were beyond aid."

Josiah does not claim his remedies infallible. Likewise he does not claim to alleviate all ills. Nor does he practice surgery.

"I never use a knife," he adds. "I do pull teeth once in awhile."

Commonest among the diseases of the Indians is tuberculosis. The healer admits that he cannot cure the affliction, but does claim that he can make it easier for the patient to bear.

He describes symptoms, diagnosis, treatments and effects in a quiet, well modulated voice when speaking of sore throats, headaches, rashes and rheumatism. But when the subject of tuberculosis is mentioned, it is at once apparent that the white plague is to him a baffling malady. He is vastly interested in consumption. His face becomes animated when he speaks of it.

"I rub the chest with a liniment made from ten different roots. I also make broth to drink. Some white women have used it. It will not cure forever. But it will cure for a long time anyway."

Cuts Closed With Bark Pulp

ASKED if he knew the names of the ten roots he used in the cough medicine, he replied that he could not name them, but he did admit one ingredient was spruce gum.

Wilfred Gammage, former mail runner of the far north, says that he has seen the Indians use a simple expedient to stop a gush of blood when an accident occurs.

The Indians take a slice of red willow bark, masticate it thoroughly and plaster the pulp on the wound. This leaves a white searing mark. The red willow has the same tightening feeling on the mouth as choke cherries. It appears to draw the flesh together.

I asked Josiah how he would treat a severe cut.

"With the bark of a tree," he replied.

"Red willow?"

"Yes."

"What remedy do you prescribe for boils?"

Louison translated, "See-ekip!"

"Pimi cures boils," said the learned one.

Pimi is the Cree for grease, he explained.

"A boil is alive. There is life springing up there. It must be removed. The medicine man puts something on to draw that life out of the other life—the body. The medicine man puts grease on a piece of leaf and sticks it on the boil."

"What kind of grease?"

"Bear grease or beaver grease."

"Any other kind?"

I wanted to learn if lard was used.

"Sure. Skunk grease!"

Hearty laughter.

The healer agrees that the only way to cure a badly diseased tooth is to get rid of it. But if a man is determined to hang on to his teeth, the "doctor" can give him temporary relief with a salve made of beaver root and weekaskoo or reed root.

"The reeds out there," said the "doctor," pointing to the muskeg stretching beyond the Saskatchewan, "are no good. I go for my reed root to the Pasquia hills, where the feet of men and cattle have never trod."

He gazed beyond the sweep of the river to the blue dome of the hills rising to meet the sky seventy miles to the west.

"The roots must be strong and green and dry," he continued. "I will cure toothaches with the reed root and the beaver root. I will grind them to powder. I will mix the powder with a little salt and water. I will roll the paste into little balls about the size of the head of a match. One little ball put in the hole of the tooth will stop pain. But the effect will only last three hours."

Josiah Young has a novel way of putting a headache to flight.

"Sometimes people pretty sick on the head. I have a powder made of roots. I put a little in one end of a goose quill and push it up one side of the nose and then the other, and blow hardlike this!"

"It's all right," said Louison. "It cures. I've seen it.""

When a Man is Crazy

TO drive out a cold in the head, the healer uses a mixture of several herbs dissolved in water. The patient is then rolled in blankets or skins.

The cure for rheumatism starts with a hot bath. The patient is then rolled in blankets and is given powders. There is no small measure of mystery connected with this treatment. The medicine man declined to give any information on the subject. A score of questions brought only this:

"It cures. Soon all rheumatism gone. I know all roots. In summer I walk with my eyes on the ground in clean places. I search the far places for clean roots."

"What do you do when an Indian goes crazy?"

"At first it takes three men to hold the crazy man. Then I give him a drink of medicine. Then two men can hold him. I heat a stone the size of a potato until it is white hot. Then I drop it in a bowl of medicine. The crazy one's head is held over the rising vapor."

"What effect has that?"

"He jump pretty high at first. Men hold him down. Then he gets quiet. Give the treatment twice a day for three days and he is all right. Sometimes treat as many as three crazy men a year."

"Is it dope?"

"No, just 'crazy medicine'."

"Does it make him sleep?"

"No, just make him keep quiet."

Josiah declined to state what roots were used in the potion. He simply stated that they came from the Pasquia hills.

While most of the medicines are made from roots, green leaves hold a place in the prescriptions. They are used for burns. A certain leaf relieves the soreness and aids in growing new skin. Layers of green leaves are laid on the affected parts. The leaves are of a vine that grows close to the ground. Josiah says they have points resembling moose ears.

Miss Clara Isobel Stevenson, who has been in charge of the provincial nursing station on the reserve for the last year, told me that some of the Indians use charms to ward off illness. On one occasion she had found little cubes of wood tied over the bed of a patient. In another sick room she found a patient with markings of charcoal on her arms. The patient was suffering from rheumatism.

I asked the healer if he ever used any methods of preventing swelling from spreading, say from the wrist to the shoulder, by placing marks on the arm.

"I tie a string around the elbow," he admitted.

"Why tie a string?"

"To stop the pain going farther," he replied, marvelling that a person could not grasp the value of such a procedure.

In several instances Miss Stevenson has called where there was illness only to meet with rebuffs. The Indians preferred the medicine man. The nurse found that some families as far as one hundred miles away sent for him. At other times the Indians have called her after the patient has failed to show improvement or when the patient was sinking. Then if she failed to snatch the person from certain death, they cried her down as a charlatan.

Three Swallows of Perfume

MISS STEVENSON said that there was no doubt that the medicine man had a herbal potion that would bring down a fever. I asked the "doctor" what he would do in the case of a high fever. He replied that he would give the man "three swallows of perfume."

"Perfume?"

"Yes, sweet smelling medicine."

"What's it made of?"

"White poplar like that out there," pointing to a group of trees.

"Anything else?"

"Yes, some red root shavings. They are ground to powder and mixed with bits of the inside bark of white poplar. When mixed with water they bring down fever."

In spite of the fact that the federal government has a physician to care for the medical needs of the band, the medicine man is still the family doctor for a number of families. "Doctor" Young still brings babies into the world and is present at the passing of adults to realms of the Happy Hunting Ground.

For centuries the Indians of the north have considered the white moss possessed of curative values. For centuries before the brainy inventors of civilization conceived the idea of medicated absorbants of cotton gauze and paper, Indian women knew of a fine, downy white moss. They wrap babies in it, using a moss bag. Infants are placed in a bag and the moss is stuffed around them.

Greatest care is exercised in gathering the moss. It has to be carefully picked and culled so that no other leaves or parts of plants will be left among the moss. Indians try to camp near the moss areas. If they have to move out of the districts to follow fur or game, certain members of the band are sent back periodically to gather further supplies of moss.

Louison began his own days in a moss bag and so did his children. He would not consider adopting the white ways in this respect.

Josiah Young has no earthly use for baby clinics. He declares that Indian women love their babies and know what's best for them. He says you can tell that by the way the mothers play with dolls and make little "tekenagans," and decorate them. A tekenagan is a cradle. Tekenagan is the Cree verb to rock. A moss bag may be fitted into it so the mother can carry the babe on her back, or she may stand it against a tree while she busies herself about camp.

The younger Indians, however, are taking to baby clinics. The girls are studying home nursing and the boys are learning first aid.

Dr. P. C. Robertson, physician representing the Dominion government Indian department in The Pas, says: "Josiah Young is not a treaty Indian. He does mix some herbs for some of the older people. You will run across whites who buy herb medicines in the heart of the city. But the day of the medicine man is about done. He doesn't bother us or interfere with our work."

"Sister St. Alexandra of the Grey Nuns, who is in charge of St. Antoine's hospital in The Pas, states that from time to time Indian patients ask for the medicine man. The sisters explain that the government doctor will provide the medicine. On one or two occasions medicines have been smuggled in.

The medicine man avers that he has the highest respect for the white doctor, but he also has great faith in his own potions. If controversy arises, he points to nature.

"All my cures come from vegetation. Health comes from the ground; from nature."

CONSCIENCE AND THE TYEE

By ARTHUR MAYSE

THE moon hung low in the west when the green boat slipped out across the river mouth. It was one of those waiting dawns—you know the kind—pale gray, with a fitful breath of wind, and a bit of angry red in the east where the sun was still bedded down behind the ridge. A strange place, more than a little weird. Massive Tzouhalem on the left, the shallows stretching behind, steel gray in the half-light. Ahead, where the marker showed like a ghostly splash on the rocks, lay the salmon grounds.

A waiting dawn, mysterious, with somehow an unholy undercurrent of wildness, as though the quiet bay were a stage set by the red gods who grinned down from Tzouhalem expectantly.

But the occupants of the green boat were immune to the unholy influence. They were preachers. Padre was a fisherman, dyed in the wool and experienced. Pagan was just that—a pagan.

Naturally, since Padre was experienced and wily, Pagan was at the oars. Five minutes of steady rowing saw the marker well astern. With due deliberation Padre took up a line, inspected it critically (for the benefit of Pagan) then proceeded to let out the big silver spoon on its wire leader. When an approximate hundred feet had been unwound, he made fast. He could feel the wabbler humming along steadily, far down.

Luck was with them that morning for the third actor arrived. He came finning out from the river mouth in a lordly way, scornfully careless of the companion shadows around him. A huge fish, deep of body, wide of tail, mightier than an angler's wildest dreams. Fifty pounds—sixty—seventy—oh, what's the use! If you are a fisherman, and a salmon fisherman, you will understand. For even among big fish, he was a king. A true tyee.

UP above, Pagan dipped his oars just the least bit wearily. He looked at his companion sprawled in lazy ease, half asleep. Fishing was a dead sport.

There was a startling thump as Padre's heels hit the bottom of the boat. His wrist surged under water as the tyee struck. Jolted into wakefulness, he set the hook. He knew it was a big fish, could feel it shaking its head in puzzled, bulldog fashion. Yes, a big fish.

He looked at Pagan. So innocent; resting on his oars in mild curiosity. For a moment he battled with Apollyon, then his better self rose triumphant. Quickly he held out the bucking line.

"Here—take it!" he said.

Pagan grasped the line, and from that moment he was a changed man. You have seen one of those monkey-on-a-string toys? Yes? Then you have a faint, very faint idea of the way in which Pagan tackled his tyee. His glasses glowed; his back arched cat-like as he put all his weight into long, vicious heaves. Behind him Padre gripped his seat and squawked hopelessly. "Give him line! Line! Line! Let him run!"

But Pagan was terribly oblivious. For him the only thing in the whole wide world was that mighty fish, and his eyes saw only the hissing green cord as it strained this way and that through the water.

Padre glared. What in—thunder—ailed the man? He put the last of his breath into one despairing howl, then dropped back helplessly, awaiting the inevitable.

A phantom black dugout eased by. The Indian gazed long and hard. Then the barest shadow of a grin flickered across his wrinkled brown face, to be lost among his bristling whiskers. He rowed on.

And not for one moment did Pagan cease from his exertions. The fish was nearing the surface now, coming passively. A last yard-long heave and the broad back showed clear. What happened next Pagan will never rightly know. An unbelievably huge tail drenched him with spray; like a massive bronze and silver spear, the fish rushed. The line smoked through his fingers; the sinkers thudded against the gunwale. A fierce, arm-wrenching plunge and he was left alone, dazedly clinging to a strand of line that hung with sickening limpness between his hands.

Silently the boat put back into the river mouth.

FOR the rest of the day, Pagan gloomed around camp, absorbing reprimand and chaffing miserably. Why, oh why, had he not given line? He mourned and would not be comforted, for the depth of his despair was past the understanding of these brutes. But towards evening he roused himself from his apathy.

"Oh, well," he said, "to-morrow morning—"

Padre looked at him hard, a trifle doubtfully. "To-morrow morning?"

"Oh!" There was a world of disappointment in that exclamation. "I forgot—it's Sunday."

He fell once more into a moody silence. Not for a long time did he speak again. When he did, his voice was full of supplication. "Do you think it would be—er—really wrong?"

Padre fought another moral battle, and this time the victory lay in the camp of Apollyon. He grinned.

So early, very early the next morning, the little green boat stole out into the waiting dawn. When it came back a splendid, gleaming salmon lay in state on the bottom boards. Pagan, pagan no longer, bent to his oars with a will. There was a new snap to his stroke, a new light behind his glasses. What did he care if the stars in his crown were dim?

He had caught a tyee!

BUTTER REVEALS INCREASE IN JUNE CHEESE IS DOWN

Export of Cream and Milk to U. S. Has Practically Ceased.

STORAGE STOCK GROWS

Western Creamery Butter Showing Great Advance Over 1929.

The latest summary of conditions in the dairy industry by the Dairy and Cold Storage Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture affords some observations of interest:

Pasteurized butter graded during June this year amounted to 150,962 packages, an increase of 18,162 packages over the same period last year. For the year to date the 1930 figure at 288,511 is 8,024 packages ahead of last year.

Cheese graded during June this year totalled 206,178 boxes, or 17,384 boxes less than last year. The total for the year to date at 317,435 boxes is below last year, but there is an increase in the number of boxes grading "special" this year.

There was an increase of 245.66 per cent. in the volume of creamery butter in storage in Canada as at June 1, 1930, over the amount in store last year on the same date; and an increase of 439.87 per cent. in the volume of dairy butter in store. Creamery butter in store June 1, 1930, amounted to 10,798,828 pounds; dairy butter in store, 361,035 pounds.

Cheese in store the same date amounted to 6,471,835 pounds, or 38.43 per cent. less than last year.

The export of cream and milk to the United States has practically ceased since the tariff of 68 cents per imperial gallon on cream came into effect on June 18. Much of the cream formerly exported is now being made into butter.

Creamery butter production in the Prairie Provinces shows a steady increase over last year. Increases during May were: Manitoba, 20.5 per cent.; Saskatchewan, 7.7 per cent.; and Alberta, 15.1 per cent. over May of last year.

J. Lockie Wilson Lauds the Farmer

"It takes more brains to be a farmer than to be a high court judge," asserted J. Lockie Wilson, speaking at a gathering of provincial fairs judges at the Dominion Experimental Farm, Ottawa, recently. "There never was a greater need for co-operation between the scientist and the farmer than to-day," he also stated; adding, "the most scientific business to-day is farming."

NEW SEED CLASS OPENED AT FAIR

Confined to Competitors Whose Growing Crops Were Inspected in Field.

HAVE SEED FOR SALE

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 16.—(Canadian Press).—An important forward step to promote the commercial production and distribution of registered and certified seeds in Canada has been taken by the Royal Winter Fair to be held Nov. 19 to 27. A new class has been added to the Royal program for seed growers of wheat, oats and barley confined to competitors whose growing crops have been inspected in the field under the provision of the Dominion Seeds Act, and who have not less than 50 bushels of registered and certified seed grain for sale in a commercial way. The actual exhibit will consist of one-half bushel sample and may be taken from the current crop or that of the previous harvest.

By the new conditions the prize winning half bushels must come from a 50 bushels bulk of the same quality and must be entered in the unbroken package sealed by an accredited inspector at the time he inspects and seals the bags or other containers of the main commercial crop. Briefly this means it will be possible for farmers to buy seed grains by sample with official assurance that the bulk will equal sample. Prize winning in the past did not give this guarantee, because entrants could hand-pick the best half bushel from a large quantity of mixed grain. Over 80 prizes are offered. The spring wheat classes include the Marquis group, Garnet, Reward, Huron and Mindum. Those varieties of winter wheat, oats and barley approved for registration are eligible. Barley may be six-rowed or two-rowed. The 1930 dates for the Royal Winter Fair are Nov. 19 to 27.

EARLY AUTUMN PLOUGHING IS GOOD PRACTICE

Sowing in Early Spring Possible Only When Land Worked in Fall.

DISK SEVERAL TIMES

See That Proper Water Furrows Opened Before Freeze-up.

Fall ploughing is generally considered a good practice in most parts of the country, if best results are to be obtained. In a section such as Northern Ontario where the growing season is comparatively short it is not only advisable but it is imperative that the greater part of the ploughing be done in the summer or fall.

At the Dominion Experimental Station, Kapuskasing, Ontario, it has been found that midsummer or early fall ploughing has materially facilitated the completion of this work before the ground became too wet or was frozen.

Experiments have shown that practically all the common farm crops should be sown as early in the spring as the condition of the soil will permit, and this is only possible when the land has been ploughed the previous fall, and better still, if it has been ploughed sufficiently early to disk a couple of times, and also open up proper water furrows before the freeze-up.

Start Soon as Possible.

While it is true that all of the ploughing can not be done during the summer and early fall on account of certain crops occupying the land, nevertheless a start should be made as early as possible. Night pastures and old meadows lend themselves particularly well to early ploughing.

This not only assists materially in getting the ploughing completed, but it makes possible the cultivation of the land to some extent after ploughing and thereby partly takes the place of summer fallowing. This gives an opportunity of keeping weeds under control and storing up a supply of moisture and plant food for the next season's crop.

Canadian Tobacco Ranks With Best

Canadian farmers, almost entirely as a result of research work done by the Dominion Department of Agriculture, are now producing practically all the fine tobacco required by Canadian manufacturers, and it is of a better quality than the more expensive of the tobaccos hitherto imported from the United States, observes Dr. E. S. Archibald, director of Dominion Experimental Farms. In an ever widening field tobacco production is fast attaining a position of first importance in agriculture.

BARRED ROCKS LEAD CONTEST

IN 38TH WEEK

A 4 per cent. increase over the same period last year is reported for the 38th week of the 11th Canadian egg-laying contest at the Central Experimental Farm at Ottawa. There were fewer underweight eggs than last week and more hens were laying. The pen of Barred Rocks, owned by Mrs. W. J. Thompson, of Saskatchewan, which have led the contest from the outset, improved their position to a lead of 51.4 points ahead of the nearest competitor. The race for second place between three pens of White Leghorns is tightening up, while Rhode Island Red No. 336 takes the lead as the best layer of the contest to date with 237.4 points for 207 eggs laid.

In the Ontario contest egg yields showed a decline for the week with a number of the pens showing ½ or more of their birds off the working list. Barred Rocks entered by R. W. Kettles has the lead in this as well as the Canadian contest, being 19.4 points ahead of the nearest competitor. Barred Rock No. 100 holds the honor of first place among high scoring individuals to date with a record of 216.7 pens for 203 eggs.

a jog I saw two lights. They were not very good."

"What did you do then?"

"I proceeded to pull over to my own side of the road. I had been driving in the centre."

"How do you think the accident happened?"

"I have no idea," was the reply, after a pause.

"Was the other car on its side of the road?"

"Yes."

"Was the road wide enough for two cars to pass?"

"Yes, I think so."

"How fast would you say you were going?"

"From 25 to 30 miles an hour."

When pressed for details of the actual collision, Wilson said, "I must have been unconscious."

Applied Brake.

He testified further that he could remember stepping on the service brake. He had no idea how fast the north-bound car was travelling, and claimed that "it may have been slightly over on the wrong side of the road." Asked what knocked him unconscious he said he didn't know. He said that his injuries were mainly to his right hip and his chest.

"I must have lain unconscious in the ditch for a while. I was the first to come to and I found the car facing left lying on the left hand side."

He first looked to see how McGinnis was. He was lying nearest him. Then he located Miss Johnson several feet further south of McGinnis, and, trying to stir her, found her seriously injured. The other car, he said, was three-fourths of the way across the road on the west side facing north-west. It was not moved until the police came.

Harry McGinnis.

Harry McGinnis, of Omemee, who rode in the back seat with the deceased, said that he first saw the car ahead as it was coming around the curve, and that it was in view all the time until the accident occurred. It stuck to the right side of the road.

"How were its lights?"

"Not very bright."

"What happened?"

"I don't remember anything about the collision. I must have hit the side of the car."

"Was either car on the wrong side of the road?"

"Both were on the right side of the road as far as I know."

"Have you any idea how the accident happened?"

"No, unless a wheel came off."

When asked for details of the actual impact he insisted that he was knocked unconscious, and that he didn't know anything until "about half an hour later." He set the time as approximately 12.45 o'clock.

Did Not See Car.

Violet Duffy of Emily Township, who was riding in the front with Wilson, declared on the stand that she did not see the car approaching and didn't know any of the details of the crash as she had her head towards the rear of the car a few seconds before the accident. She estimated the speed of the car she was in as "medium." After the accident she was still conscious and not seriously injured, she said.

Dr. Hugh Logan of Lindsay was called to the accident and examined Miss Johnson about 3 o'clock Saturday morning. He testified that he found multiple compound fractures of the skull which resulted in lacerations of the brain, multiple fractures of the face, many fractured ribs, the right femur fractured and the left shoulder blade fractured. Dr. Logan attributed death to the skull injuries. He said that he was unable to state where the blow to the skull had been administered.

The testimony of William Patrick, Junior, an Emily Township farm boy, was to the effect that he was riding in the back seat of the car going north which figured in the collision, and that his father, W. J. Patrick, and Hugh Elliott were in the front. Elliott was driving the car, which was a Ford touring.

Slowed Down.

The boy said he saw the car come around a jog in the road. The car he was in was slowed down and swung off to the side of the road within one foot of the edge, he related, as he saw the other car coming down the centre of the road. He estimated the speed of the Ford at 10 miles an hour, but couldn't offer any estimate of the speed of the other car.

Continuing, he testified that his recollection of the accident was that the car in which he rode spun on the road and stopped almost on the spot it was hit. The three got out and went to see if anybody was hurt in the McLaughlin, which they found lying in the ditch facing north-west. He saw Miss Duffy just getting to her feet, and finding Miss Johnson lying in the ditch, tried to stir her. Shortly afterwards he hurried to Downeyville for a doctor.

Hugh Elliott of Emily, who was driving the car, offered evidence that closely paralleled that of the boy. He said that he slowed down and pulled over to his own side of the road, but when the approaching car got within 50 feet of him he was blinded by the lights. He claimed that he couldn't see what happened and that the next he was aware of was the crash. There was no reason to think that he was not on his own side of the road, he maintained.

Slow Speed.

"What speed were you travelling?"

"Ten to fifteen miles an hour—possibly a little slower."

"Have you any idea of the speed of the approaching car?"

"I would say that it was going very fast."

Provincial Constable Joseph Nelson attended the fatal accident with Provincial Constable Porter. He gave the positions in which he found the cars in detail. The lights of both vehicles were still on when he arrived, he said. The lights on the Ford were "dim" and the lights on the larger car were "bright."

He explained that the Ford stood almost on the exact spot of the impact but that the other car had travelled a total distance of 124 feet after the collision. Thirty-seven feet from the point of impact a wheel had dropped off the McLaughlin, and the car skidded the rest of the 124 feet on its axle, gouging a deep grove in the road and in the bank of the ditch, he stated. It ended its motion by turning a complete somersault and resting on its left side.

The road was 16½ feet wide at the scene, Constable Nelson testified.

WILBERT LUNN FRACTURES KNEE

Millbrook Resident Taken to Nicholls' Hospital this City as Result of Accident

L. H. MORTON INJURED

Has Hand Slashed

On Wednesday, while in charge of threshing operations at Allie Fallis', Fallis Line, L. H. Morton had his hand badly slashed while working with the saw which cuts the wood for the threshing engine. He was brought to Millbrooke, where Dr. Wright gave the necessary medical assistance; some stitches being required to close the wound.

DOWNEYVILLE CHOIR PRESENT CONCERT

Splendid Musical Program Is Given in the Parish Hall

(Examiner Correspondence)

DOWNEYVILLE, Aug. 16. — On Monday evening a very fine concert was given in the hall here by the members of St. Luke's Choir under the direction of Mrs. Patrick Perdue, organist. The hall was crowded by the many who were anxious to hear the choir in their fine program. Paul McGuire was chairman for the evening and won applause by his witty remarks during the different announcements, also on his splendid address which was enjoyed by all. The program was as follows:

Opening chorus, by the Choir; song, "Lay My Head Beneath a Rose by Earl Millvy; old time choruses by the choir with the male quartette composed of Messrs Martin Herlihy, Clare Harrington, William C. Herlihey and Albert Carroll, who sang a very fine quartette. This number was indeed interesting as those old choruses were rendered in splendid manner and the audience enjoyed them very much; song "Red River Valley" by Gerald O'Neill which won great applause; song "I Don't Work for a Living", by Clare Harrington which was also enjoyed and won applause; dances, the next was a number of dances given by H. Fox and Albert Carroll supplying the music; song, "The Chrisolm Trail" by Angus Twomey who is always heard to great numbers and whose costume was for the song; the final was a group of songs sung by the following, each in turn: Albert Carroll, "Sing Me the Songs"; Gerald O'Neill, "My Wild Irish Rose"; Earl Milloy, "I Wish Dat Gal"; Clare Harrington, "Old Black Joe"; Ray Morrissey, "The Side walks of New York"; Wm. C. Herlihey, "Mother Macree"; Martin Herlihey,, "Show me the way"; all-singing chorus, then "Good-night Ladies" and God Save the King, by all the members.

Those taking part were: Messrs. William C. Herlihy, Martin Herlihy, Paul McGuire, Clare Harrington, Albert Carroll, Angus Twomey, Gerald O'Neill, Ray Morrissey, Earl Milloy, Mrs. Joseph Guiry, Mrs. Joseph Morrissey, Mrs. Leo Harrington and Mary Winn.

It was a very enjoyable evening for all. After the concert, a few hours' dancing was indulged in by both old and young, Jakin's orchestra from Lindsay supplying the music.

MONTREAL PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Aug. 16.—The demand for all lines of cash grain here yesterday continued good, and values were well maintained.

A feature of the flour trade was the weakness that developed for spring wheat grades, and values were reduced 20 cents per barrel. Winter wheat flour was steady.

Further strength developed in butter, and prices were marked up another ½ cent per pound, receipts were 3,158 boxes.

The cheese market was quiet, with prices nominally unchanged. Receipts were 2,441 boxes.

A moderate amount of business was done in eggs, and values were unchanged. Receipts were 1,309 cases.

Potato prices were advanced 5 cents per 80-lb. bag. New locally-grown stock are now quoted at 70 cents to 75 cents.

Wrecked Canoeists Live Three Weeks On Sun-Dried Fish

THE PAS, Man., Aug. 16 (C.P.).—Stranded in the far north country after losing their canoe when it crashed into a rock while they were running Big Stone Rapids, two brothers, Claude and Carl Carnahan, with a companion, Art Mattson, found the sole worldly possession of the party to be 36 matches.

The brothers, after months of hardship, are back in The Pas again, bringing with them a tale of adventure of foodless days and many narrow escapes from death in the swirling waters of northland streams.

After their little supply of matches had been exhausted, the Carnahans carried a fire day and night in a small pail, until rain quenched the flames. Then for three weeks they subsisted on sun-dried fish.

REBELS SUFFER SEVERE DEFEAT

ernment troops had entered Tsinan or were near the walls.

So decisive was the Nationalist thrust along the Haichow-Tungkwan Railway in Honan Province that Chiang claimed his forces "shortly would be able to drive the rebels from Honan and capture Kaifeng and Chengchow."

The situation at Tsinan resulted in representations from foreign diplomats to the Nankin Government asking it to protect foreigners and their property in the city. Recently Nationalist air forces bombed the city and killed a score of Chinese residents. Many foreigners fled at the first rebel threat in June.

There was a lull in the Yangtse Valley, where formidable Communist forces have threatened Hankow, Nan-Chang and Kiukang.

MILLBROOK.

Girls' Household Science Judging Competitions have been the order of the day in recent weeks in the various counties of the province, and in many cases are still in progress, in preparation for the teams that will take part in the judging contests at the C.N.E. this month. Institute branches that have helped their county Agricultural Representative by enlisting the girls of their several communities in this very helpful course of training, or have contributed prizes to stimulate interest, may feel assured they have done a worthwhile piece of work along the line of home economics.

Some branches set apart a sum of money to help cover the expenses of the girls attending the C.N.E., for there are cases where perhaps one or two girls, or more, would like to attend and take part in the open competition, but without financial aid would be unable to do so. To 'mother' such is the Institutes' privilege, particularly if the girls in question have shown ability in the course of training.

Any girl who has been well started by a capable instructress from the Department in a study of nutrition, house furnishing, and kitchen planning, with correct wardrobe, has opened up for her an avenue of interest and instruction which she will in all likelihood follow for herself, to a more extended degree, for a long time after the local competition is over.

Featuring the years program of one active branch is a discussion on the subject: "How to combat the use of slang"; this is a most pertinent topic in view of the prevalence of slang in the convervation today, and it was with this in mind that the committee chose it, among many others, for a place calling for a paper and discussion. Other branches might be interested to include it among their topics when preparing the year's program.

"Teaching boys and girls the management of money" is another suggestion, and a mother who has had considerable experience in training her own boys and girls along this line, has been set down for the paper, and to lead the discussion, on this subject. "Preventive Medicine" and "Current Events" are other topics that will create interest and provoke thought and participation in the discussion to follow, if listed when the yearly program is prepared.

Calling the committee in each Institute that looks after visiting the sick and sending them flowers and fruit, not the 'sick committee' but the 'health committee', has been recommended by an authority on health matters, who declares the former, and most generally used name, a mistake, pointing out that the modern way is to put in the background everything that suggests to the mind the thought of illness, and laying all the emphasis on the opposite conception, that of good health.

"A health committee will give the district nurse a live body, already organized, through which to do her work more effectively in each community. A program for the health committee suggests four objectives, (a) sending flowers and fruit to sick folk of the community; (b) a 'loan cupboard' fully furnished with a complete outfit for mother and baby, that may be loaned in maternity cases should need arise; (b) seeing that the health literature supplied by the Department, both Federal and Provincial, is secured and distributed, preferably to every home in the community; (d) to make a list of the older girls of the community who would be willing to give time each day, say for a few hours, and do the work in a home where a baby has come, and where finances are limited, until the mother is again able to manage for herself and household. If necessary the Institute might pay the girls for this service, which is certainly a practical one, though voluntary service would, of course, not be rejected.

Where there is real need the maternity supplies, including a complete layette, would be given outright, and the branch be responsible for seeing that the committee is furnished with a new outfit for the next case claiming its attention.

WARSAW

In London, from April 30, until May 3, 1929, there was held the first conference of rural women's organizations. It was called by the International Council of Women. Lady Aberdeen was the president and there were delegates from Australia, Belgium, Canada, Czecho Slovakia, Denmark, England, Estonia, Finland, France, Germany, India, Ireland, the Netherlans, New Zealand, Norway, Scotland, South Africa Sweden, Switzerland and the United States of America. All these, while not under same name as our Institutes, are for the same purpose, and where there are differences it is generally because conditions in different countries vary and organization work is planned to suit the individual needs of the country.

Variations in climates demand variations in the regulations. Different National laws and habits require different working organizations.

These reports make intensely interesting reading and open our eyes to conditions in other countries and among other women. Mrs. Watt, who organized W.I.'s in England, was one of Canada's representatives.

The very reason of the gathering was to try to have the various countries' organizations come in touch, and sympathy with one another, to provide a means of communication between women's organizations in all countries, and to furnish apportunities for women to meet together from all parts of the world, to confer upon questions relating to the welfare of the commonwealth, the family and the individual and to band all together to further the application of the Golden rule to society, custom and law.

Some of the points given by an American farm woman in her address at the opening were that for generations the country-woman had been considered a universal voluntary slave. What she did was accepted carelessly without thought of gratitude. The world is beginning to recognize the value of the country-woman. Every organization that has for its goal the betterment of the whole human race, touches the life of every country-woman in some degree, whether she is cognizant of it or not.

It is through our international contacts that the very best thoughts and higher ideals are collected, and then given out to all.

We may not understand, or even ask how it is that we have rights and privileges our grandmothers did not; we may not even realize the difference, but generally it has come through some great movement.

Organizations against war are forming in many countries, the voice is a united voice, and the whole world listens. An international organization to study the cause and cure of war will save the country-mother's son, as well as any other mother's son.

She ended her address with a statement that scientists, including most doctors, nurses and teachers, realize to be true, that thought germs are more contagious than disease germs, may they be good or bad.

Industrial ideas, scientific inventions, education, democracy and Christianity, are spreading all over the earth, through international contacts. They left the standard of country-women in proportion as their lives are brought into contact with the meaning of great international movements. Just as the world realizes the value of its country women and its debt of gratitude to them so will the world go out to meet and help them realize their highest life and they in turn will help others to realize their highest life.

It would seem that her address embodied the idea "No man (or woman) liveth unto himself," which is another way of expressing our own first motto, for home and country, and if we do for home and country we must do for the world, and touch the lives of every one.

The committee which arranged for the gathering, consisted of only Lady Aberdeen, Mrs. Watt of Canada, a representative from Norway and one from Germany.

On account of Mrs. Watt's wide experience and her being in England, Lady Aberdeen and she met in conference very often. Most of the arrangements had to be made by correspondence. It meant work for them but the results justified the undertaking.

CAVAN.

Halton County Institutes report an active year. One Institute from that county reports a membership of seventy-six and says that every member is expected to contribute something of value to the programs and meetings during the year.

Hot lunches have been provided by this Institute for three local schools and they are specially interested in promoting the teaching of music in the schools. Prizes were given for an ear-test competition and also for writing. They held a girls conference in Milton and two juniors were sent to Guelph last year, also a representative to the Ontario Educational Association in Toronto, from both of which there came back most interesting and stimulating reports.

Their programs are planned to include something of special interest to each member. Some are very interested in sewing, others in music, and other subjects, so every subject is touched on at some time throughout the year. Money making is not the foremost consideration in this live Institute. Their collections at meetings are good and one euchre and dance is held in the town hall each year. This is properly conducted and particularly well attended so that the proceeds are considerable. Last year they made an autograph quilt, charging ten cents a name. When finished they presented the quilt to their first president.

Resolutions have been sent in from several Institutes requesting that the Minister of Agriculture give consideration to the entertainment of 500 rural girls at the Royal Winter Fair.

Other Institutes favor the plan of sending 500 rural girls to the Canadian National Exhibition.

Mrs. George Edwards of Komoka has been visiting the summer meetings and district annuals in Bruce and Grey counties, and brings back word that at almost all of these the matter was broached and approval expressed by the meeting. Such splendid Institute centres as Seaforth, Wiarton, Lion's Head, Colpoy's Bay and Tobermory are entered in the list of those who desire this privilege for the farm daughters of Ontario. And why not? Our farm girls should have equal consideration with the boys.

It is stated, and actual conditions show, that it is becoming hard to keep the young people on the farm. Perhaps if a greater number of girls stayed on the farms, it might not be such a problem to keep the boys on the farm.

In country communities where the girls are sent to urban centres to school as soon as the entrance has been passed, community clubs, ball teams and other sports die out. The natural result of educating the girls seems "to be that they go to the city to make use of their education, in earning a livelihood. If circumstances could be so arranged that country girls could have a small income of their own on the farms, it is very likely that a considerable number of them would remain on the farms, and what a difference it would make to community life, and life on the farm, not only for the young people, but also for the father and mother, who necessarily must remain on the farm.

When farming has attained the status of other occupations, where each one who labors, receives a wage, then the boys and girls, the majority of them, will gladly and willingly remain. For after all, aside from financial consideration, there is no healthier, happier life.

If our governments could find some way of making farming more remunerative, it would help solve the problem of unemployment because if country boys and girls were taken from the cities, it would have a vast and varied array of positions to be filled, many of them very important positions, because the boys and girls from the farm add both brawn and brains to the city life.

Perhaps in the future, Women's Institutes, other women's organizations, and the Department of Agriculture may work out a happy solution for this very important problem which is always before us.

These pills make rich, red blood which brings new strength and energy to weak, despondent sufferers. Concerning them, Mrs. Paul Rail, Coin du Banc, Que., says: "I was badly run-down, slept poorly, and awoke as tired as when I went to bed. My appetite was poor and I felt miserable. I took six boxes of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and they completely renewed my health."

What To-day Means To You.

If August 16th is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10 a.m. to 11 a.m., from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m. and 9 p.m. to 10:15 p.m. The danger periods are from 6 a.m. to 7:40 a.m. and 7 p.m. to 8:30 p.m.

Astrological influences on this date are widespread in their effect and generally good, both outside and in the home. Propitious for social advancement, sports and pleasures. Attend to all important business before twelve noon.

The child born on this August 16th will have an active and impressionable mind, and a restless nature. It will be a hard worker, but given to worry. It will be quaintly conceited, very proud, and personally fastidious.

You are not content unless you can be in a perfect maelstrom of activity. You do not understand the meaning of the word "rest," and although you enjoy and demand changes, you never desire real inactivity. "Thrillers," with murder, detectives, crooks, and vamps entering into their pages are the books which appeal to you. As a child you insisted upon exercising your own tastes and revolted against parental restrictions and discipline. As a man or woman, you revolt against prohibitive "don'ts" of the still sterner world, and the restricted horizons of tradition and custom. You want space and freedom, and you have a rash and almost ungovernable spirit.

You have considerable respect for self, and belief in your own abilities. You want to create your own destiny, although Fate will many times step in and sadly mix up your plans. As time goes on you will find it useless to plan far ahead and will learn to live more in the moment. You are not of a domesticated nature. As a woman you loathe the intricate duties of a home. As a man, you are a useless person about the house and demand considerable service. You are, however, a good provider. You are an ardent enthusiast for most sports, and a keen motorist. You are a lavish host or hostess, and a genial one. Over-activity and excitement will tend to produce nervous troubles, and rest will often be required to restore harmony to the system.

If August 17th is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 7 a.m. to 8:30 a.m., from noon to 1:30 p.m. and 8 p.m. to 9 p.m. The danger periods are from 10 a.m. to 11 a.m. and 11 p.m. to midnight.

It is well that this date is one of rest and business inactivity, as the astrological influences are very unsettling. A disappointment in friendship. None too good for the sickly, nerve fags and fevers.

The child born on this August 17th will have a very plastic and versatile nature. It will have tenacious desires, pluck and courage, and should make a name for itself. It will be eager to experiment, and experience will be a severe teacher.

You have a superiority complex, which is a curse when misplaced, whether in home, office or factory. You will probably always feel yourself above your job, and no one can be a great success in any calling unless he takes a pride in his work. You think you ought "by rights," to be in some one else's boots, and you will never find the pair which will not soon pinch. You allow yourself to become a stupid snob. You are probably a poor worker because you think your own particular job is beneath you. You may not deserve, through merit, more than you are getting in this world. The world recognizes ability and zeal, and you are at least lacking in the latter. Maximum efficiency is essential all along the scale, for those who seek to climb.

You are not democratic enough to be a general social favorite. You only kow tow to those whom you deem worthy of your esteem, and whom you consider in your class. You are too dictatorial to become a good overseer. You love power, but you do not know how to handle it without friction. You are inclined to make enemies for want of tact. You will suffer through your affections, and it is probable that you will be married more than once. If you become debilitated or run down you will suffer from both the heart and head.

A Truly Modern Car You Will be Proud to Own

Tour Canada this summer in a Chevrolet Six—it's all worth seeing. This village on the Isle d'Orleans typifies the romantic and historic countryside that awaits motorists touring the province of Quebec.

IT is wise to choose a Chevrolet Six—because this is definitely a better low-priced automobile. Priced as low as $635 at the factory, it is more modern—in design, performance, appearance and features—than any other car in its field. It is a car to be proud of, wherever you go.

Smoother—Faster—Smarter

More than two million owners have found that Chevrolet's modern six-cylinder design means more enjoyable motoring. That six-cylinder power is always smooth and flexible. That six-cylinder speeds are always quiet and comfortable. That "Body by Fisher" means infinitely smarter appearance and finer construction. And that six-cylinder performance, as Chevrolet provides it, is just as economical as any other kind!

Higher Resale Value

In selecting a low-priced car, you should consider how much more pride and pleasure you will enjoy in driving this modern Six. And do not overlook this fact! Because the Chevrolet Six is so far ahead of its field in providing modern performance and appearance today, it will be modern tomorrow—and command a better re-sale value when you come to trade it in.

Just Between Us Women

A daily chat with Examiner neighbors conducted by Anne Wilcox

IF there is any one room that can be said to be the centre of a home it is the kitchen.

• • • • • • •

This was appreciated in olden times, when, in thought and reality, it was the main room of a house. In the early settler days the kitchen was the work room of the household, and the one place of cheery warmth that could be relied upon day-in and day-out in wintry weather, and the place where cool and refreshing viands were to be found in summertime!

• • • • • • •

In those old kitchens the daily lives of the family were centred from babyhood to mature years, until they might be said to have something like a soul!

• • • • • • •

There are few such kitchens today which are not only centres of homes but the hearts of the house—rooms for which each member of the family has respect and actual fondness!

• • • • • • •

Today the kitchens are again the centres of homes but in a different way. Again the woman of the house has to spend more time in the kitchen if she is anything of a housekeeper than she did a few years ago when servants were the expected things in home of even those in moderate circumstances.

• • • • • • •

To-day the people with good purses have "servantless houses." They take pride in having every modern contrivance and device for labor-saving and convenience. Special interest centers in this room whose equipment may be the most costly of any in the dwelling.

• • • • • • •

There is a revival of the old-time way of eating in the kitchen—to be sure it is not spoken of in any such way—the family eats in breakfast nooks or dinlingettes, the latter being a room in which the dining element is stressed above that of the kitchen

• • • • • • •

These nooks are made so dainty and attractive that they have little resemblance to the old-fashioned kitchen-dining room.

• • • • • • •

While convenience plus lack of room, in many modern apartments is responsible for the present day emphasis put upon kitchens, there is no lack of decorative style. Sometimes the nooks are sections of the kitchen separated by high settees each side of a narrow table.

• • • • • • •

Sometimes too, the kitchen has a commodious alcove, making a dining room in miniature.

• • • • • • •

The modern housewife takes as much or perhaps more pride in her kitchen than did the housewife of by-gone days. At least she shows it in more spectacular ways. Comfort and coziness were the attributes of old kitchens, while multiplicity of ingenious devices for saving time and labor, and smart colorful decoration, are the striking elements of the new

ONE OF SEVEN BLIND.

MONTREAL, Que., Aug. 16.—(CP).—While most women have an inherent color taste, one out of every seven men are blind, declared Charles Conquergood, of Toronto, speaking on "Color" before the advertising club of this city. He believed, however, that in many cases a taste for color could be developed in much the same way as a taste for music.

That Body of Yours

By James W. Barton, M.D.

FOOD AND WORK.

As a youngster one of my chores was to tidy up the back yard. It was rather a large yard, and so I invited the boy next door to help me, in return for which I offered to help him saw his wood.

While there was a certain novelty to me in handling the saw I had to admit that sawing wood was a much harder job than tidying up the yard. Thus I found myself stopping very often to 'grease' the saw so that it would go through the wood more easily.

However, as we were good friends and wanted to get away to play or fish it was to our mutual advantage to help one another at our respective chores.

Why do I mention this?

Because as there is a difference between sawing wood and tidying up a yard, so likewise is there a difference in the amount of work between that of a hard-working mechanic and an office man. Now while a certain amount of food is necessary, irrespective of physical work done, nevertheless a hard outdoor worker requires twice the amount of the indoor worker.

And yet we find the office man often eating three large meals a day, with an extra meal at night at a party, bridge game, or even as a regular habit at home.

What does this mean?

That his system has to handle this extra quantity in the best way it can. The usual way, of course, is for his body to simply store this extra food away as fat, and so we find such a large number overweight. This puts extra and unnecessary work upon the heart.

With others it means a lot of extra work on stomach, intestine, liver, kidneys and skin, because the majority of these big eaters take little or no exercise.

Of course some of these big eaters boast that they belong to the no breakfast organization. It would be better for them physically if they resigned from the no breakfast and joined the no late supper or no late dinner class.

It is the extra food eaten at night, with no possible chance to have it used up by exercise, that causes overweight in some, and kidney, liver, and intestinig trouble in others.

Where the office man plays golf o engages in other vigorous exercise, he may safely eat as much food as an outdoor mechanic.

After all it is just a matter of how much work you do. A tailor or a shoemaker doesn't need any more food than an office man.

So, remember that in these days when you are reading about proteins, starches, fats and vitamins, that the quantity of food is just as important from a health standpoint.

Eat in proportion to the amount of work you do, or the exercise you take.

A BEDTIME STORY

by Howard R. Garis

UNCLE WIGGILY'S DISCOVERY.

"But, Uncle Wiggily, it's so impossible and silly! It never really could happen!"

"Excuse me, but I am telling you it did happen for I saw it with my own eyes," answered the rabbit gentleman.

He was speaking to the Lady Mouse Teacher of the Hollow Stump School and, all of a sudden, she began to laugh so hard that her tail tied itself in a knot and it looked so queer that Mr. Longears himself had to join in the merriment, or laughter.

That is the funny thing which happened and about which I promised to tell you in the story before this one. There was the Lady Mouse Teacher with a knot in her tail and if any of her animal children pupils from the Hollow Stump School had seen her they would have laughed also.

But none of the animal boys or girls was there then, for two reasons. One reason was that the second was closed for the long vacation, and the other reason was that the Lady Mouse was spending her vacation at a boarding house on the shore of the Duck Pond Ocean where Uncle Wiggily had hopped to find her to tell her a most wonderful thing. None of the animal boys or girls was there.

"You don't mean to tell me," went on Miss Mouse after Uncle Wiggily had helped her loosen the knot in her tail, "you don't mean to say, Mr. Longears, that you saw the windows of my school crying real, water tears? Did you?"

"That's what I did, Lady Mouse," answered the rabbit gentleman. "I hopped past the school to see how it looked during vacation and I saw the back windows shedding tears."

"Why would they be so silly as to do that?" asked Miss Mouse.

"Well," answered Uncle Wiggily, "the only reason I know is that the school is so lonesome for you and the children when you are away on the long vacation that it just couldn't help crying out of its windows which are the only eyes the school has."

"Oh, but it really couldn't happen!" chuckled Miss Mouse and she started to laugh again. Then, as she didn't want to tie another knot in her tail and stopped to say: "I know! It must have been rain you saw on the window panes, Uncle Wiggily. When rain water runs down a window it looks just as if the glass were crying. That's what you must have seen; rain on the windows and you thought the school was crying. Ha! Ha!"

"No, excuse me, if you please, Miss Mouse," spoke Mr. Longears, "but what I saw wasn't rain. The sun was shining as brightly on the school as it now shines on you and me. Yet the windows were weeping. You had better come and take a look at your school. I'm sure it is lonesome."

"I don't see how it can be," squeaked Miss Mouse. "But it is such a strange thing to hear you tell about crying windows that I'll come with you and look. I should like to discover what makes a school cry."

"So should I," said the bunny uncle. "That would be almost as wonderful as Columbus discovering America. Come along!"

Over the fields and through the woods hopped Uncle Wiggily and the Lady Mouse Teacher. Soon they reached the Hollow Stump School. All was still and quiet around it. There were no merry, laughing, shouting voices of animal boys and girls playing tag as in the days when school was in. For now the Hollow Stump was closed for the long vacation.

"Look there! See! What did I tell you?" whispered Uncle Wiggily to Miss Mouse as he pointed a paw at the back windows of the school. "Can't you see the big drops running down the glass?"

The Lady Mouse looked and looked again. She wiped her eyes with the end of her tail to which she had tied her handkerchief. Then she looked again and murmured:

"Well, the school certainly seems to be crying and the water that is running down the windows isn't from rain, either. I wonder what it is? This is most surprising!"

Then, all of a sudden, Uncle Wiggily gave a laugh and shouted:

"Ha! I have discovered it! I have found out!"

"What have you found out?" asked the Lady Mouse.

"I have discovered why I thought the school was crying," said the rabbit. "Look, Mr. Rat, the janitor, is washing the windows on the inside. He is tossing water on them to clean off the dirt and then he wipes the glass dry. Look!"

He pointed and the Lady Mouse looked. Mr. Rat, the janitor, tossed a cup of water on a back window and the drops ran down like rain, or tears. It looked as if the school might be crying for lonesomeness.

"Ha! Ha!" laughed Uncle Wiggily. "Ha! Ha!" laughed the Lady Mouse. "Ha! Ha!" laughed Mr. Rat, the janitor, when he heard what had happened. "I thought," said Mr. Rat, "that I would start washing the windows now to have them clean by September when school opens again."

"A very good idea!" squeaked Miss Mouse.

Then she laughed some more and so did Mr. Rat and the bunny uncle, for he had discovered the secret of the crying school.

KEEP CHILDREN WELL DURING HOT WEATHER

Every mother knows how fatal the hot summer months are to small children. Cholera, infantum, diarrhoea, dysentry, colic and stomach troubles are rife at this time and often a precious little life is lost after only a few hours illness. The mother who keeps Baby's Own Tablets in the house feels safe. The occasional use of the Tablets prevent stomach and bowel troubles, or if trouble comes suddenly—as it generally does—the Tablets will bring the baby safely through. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Alice Michaelis

TO FILL THE DAY.

To fill the day I ask
Some love, some mirth;
But, first of all, a task
To prove my worth.

A task to tax my powers
Of thought and strength,
A task to brim my hours
Through days' bright length.

Proud ships must know wind's stress,
And tempest's voice,
And not in idleness
Could I rejoice.

I need, to fill the day,
Laughter and son;
Glad moods and moments gay
To life belong.

These are to quicken earth;
But first I ask
Always, to prove my worth
Some well-loved task.

RUSSIANS FIND NEW LAND.

MOSCOW, U.S.S.R., August 16 (C.P.). — A Russian Arctic expedition on the ice-breaker Sedov yesterday radioed that it had discovered new land at 79.25 degrees latitude and 76 to longitude. The message added that the land extended for a great distance westward, and the expedition expects to plant the Soviet flag upon the new soil.

When you compare the Faultless Electric Washer with any other washing machine, make sure you compare the values and not the price only.

BUT COMPARE THE VALUE

You don't buy eggs just because they are cheap. You buy quality when you make a purchase of eggs. Use the same yardstick when measuring the value of an electric washer and remember this. You only buy one washing machine in a lifetime if you purchase quality instead of price.

Compare these values in the Faultless with any other washing machine:

—Double tub. Keeps water hot.
—Square tub. Washes cleaner.
—Steel frame, strong and durable.
—Bronze bearings, self-lubricating.
—Copper tub, rustproof.
—Heavy duty steel wringer.
—Balloon wringer rolls.
—¼ h.p. motor, strong, oversize.
—Only four gears, machine cut, worm hardened and ground all over.
—All gears run in oil, simple, quiet and efficient. Nothing to oil during life of machine, except motor.
—No exposed working parts. Quick acting safety release.
—Automatic belt take-up.

The Faultless sells for $159 on easy terms. No interest added, no extra charges.

Grant & Thorpe, the local dealers, will gladly send one to your home for a free trial. They will allow you a generous amount for your old washer.

Westclox And Harrison's To Meet In Third Game

CLOCKMAKERS EVEN SERIES WITH GROCERS

THIRD GAME NECESSARY

Work of Curry And Vinette In Outer Garden Highlight Of The Game

Staging a great finish Westclox shoved over a 9-5 win against Harrison's, to even up the series. Last night's Westclox win makes a third game necessary, which will be played Monday night.

The game, which was played at Central School grounds, was a fast and hard-fought struggle. It kept the big crowd on edge throughout.

Ray Darling twirled winning ball for the Clockmakers from the start. He restricted Harrison's to nine hits, scattered throughout the nine innings, and fanned 5. He walked only two batsmen.

Parsons worked on the rubber for the Northenders and also turned in a nice performance. He was touched for nine hits, fanned five and walked two.

A feature of the game was the few assists by the infield, Harrison's having only one and Westclox six. The outfields had nineteen putouts, Westclox getting ten of them.

The work of Curry and Vinette in the outer garden was highlight of the struggle.

Score Two in Opening Frame

Westclox opened their initial frame by counting twice. Dorrington started the proceedings with a single. White and Fowler struck out, but Foley doubled to centre scoring Dorrington. Russ Kitchen cut a single to right, Foley scoring. Bob Kitchen walked. Goodson forced Russ Kitchen at third, Willshaw making the out.

Harrison's evened it up in their half of the third. Crary started by flying out to Curry. Smith singled to left. Calladine doubled to centre and came all the way home on Goodson's wild heave to the plate.

Westclox got one in their half of the second. Curry got a life when Crary mussed up his roller. He stole second and went to third on a wild pitch. Dorrington filed out to Vinette in short left and Curry registered when Dobson dropped Vinette's throw to the plate. White fouled out to the catcher.

The Clockmakers went two up in the fifth when Dorrington tripled to centre and scored on White sacrifice fly to Vinette.

Harrison's took a one-run lead in the sixth. Calladine opened the inning by striking out. Parsons singled to left. Vinette tripled to centre to score Parsons. Darling took Willshaw's tap and got Vinette at the plate. Playford caught one on the nose and sent it far into centre field for a home run, scoring Willshaw ahead of him. Dobson lined to R. Kitchen, who tossed him out.

Westclox got three in their half of the sixth. R. Kitchen started the frame with a single to centre. B. Kitchen filed out to Lebarr. Goodson slashed a single to left. Curry hit to Crary who pegged wild to home, R. Kitchen and Goodson registering. Darling slashed a single to left centre, Curry pulling up at third. Curry scored on Dorrington's sacrifice fly to centre. Crary threw out White.

The Westclox made it safe in the eighth, getting two. Goodson walked to start the inning. Curry popped up to Crary. Darling hit to deep centre and Goodson scored, Dobson letting Playford's peg get away from him. Darling scored on Dorrington's hit to left.

EMPIRE'S ATHLETES IN ACTION TO-DAY

To-day the ambitious city of Hamilton, Ontario, is the sports centre of the British Empire, from the four corners of which athletes are gathered to vie for supremacy.

E. W. Beatty, great railway executive, has taken no little interest in the games. He himself was an athlete of note in his university days.

As individuals not as units of the Empire will the athletes compete on the track and field. It looks as if Canada will give a good account of herself. Percy Williams and Jimmy Ball appear to be in the pink of condition. At the recent Police Games held in Toronto, Williams clipped off 100 yards over grass in 9 4-5 seconds with ease. Bob Granger, trainer of Williams, said that after the way he ran at these games he was back in form and "No man living can beat him by any margin when he is right."

Today marks the opening of the games, from which, however, Jack Guest will be an absentee, having retired for the year.

WARNEKE HURLS NO-HIT GAME

Unfavorable Weather Plays Havoc With International League Schedule

KEYS BEAT HERD

TORONTO, Aug. 16 (C.P.)— Rain and schedule makers played havoc with games in the International League yesterday, the former washing out two after only three had been put on the program.

When the postponements were all in only Buffalo and Reading were left to play their night game, but they only got as far as the seventh inning, when rain forced cessation of play. As it was, Lonnie Warneke, 20-year-old Reading pitcher, got credit for a no-hit, no-run game, the Keys defeating the Bisons 1 to 0.

During the 6½ innings Warneke walked only one man and fanned nine. Only one man reached third while there was nothing that resembled a hit to mar the perfect performance. Reading's one-run came in the third on Kahn's single, an error, Warneke's sacrifice and Whitman's single.

Paris Hatter Wants To See Real Hockey

A hatter from Paris who is so fond of sport that he belongs to 280 clubs and societies and has given for the encouragement of sport in France no less than 500 cups and 6,000 medals, is visiting Canada as a member of the party of French tourists organized under the auspices of the Dubin agency and the Canadian National Railways. "I think I must come back to Canada in the winter" Charles Sools said in discussing sport on this side of the Atlantic. "I want to see some real Canadian hockey." The party of tourists is in Ottawa to-day.

Inside Sportin' Dope—By A. Wise Cracker

Stoney Lake, August 13.

Mister Sporting Editor:

Well, Mac, the state of the polls so far as the fishing situation up here is concerned shows no change. It figures out thusly:

No. of fish caught 1st week 0
No. of fish caught 2nd week 0
No. of fish caught altogether 0

In other words, old timer, the fishing is a wash-out. If it wasn't for the canning industry folks in these parts would of forgot what fish taste like. The tinned salmon and sardines is saving the situation, Mac, although it ain't likely many tourists come here for the same.

Things ain't so good in other ways either as they was last week. Along came a cold wave over the week-end and away went the sports and the beach pyjamas and the sun tan bathing suits and every body was muffled up like a sleighing party. In fact, all the stripe, comic and other wise disappeared and the scenery suffered a reverse. However, Mac, the sun is shining pretty warm to-day and I'll soon be singing "Happy Days Are Here Again."

I see by the papers as Mr. Dooley used tosay that the Rays is through for the season. That 2nd game in Oshawa must have been as loose as ashes on a windy collection day and the lads was more outlucked than outplayed. Reading over the acc. of the game the oddest thing to me, Mac, was the fact that the venerable Mister Heckman went hitless in a game in which his team mates collected 14 blows. When he was a much better pitcher than he is to-day Mister Dainty couldn't hardly help hitting Mister Heckman's bat every time he strode out to the plate and yet last Sat. the hard hitting Hock couldn't cop a safety. Just 1 of the brakes that makes baseball what it is.

The Examiner went astray somewhere in the mail yesterday, Mac. Last thing I heard the Primeau pets and Mister Brioux's lads had so I'm a mile behind on the dope on the C.G.E.-Crescents clash, took a game each making the serious look like a real battle for the E. P. tin ware. It may be all over long before this gets into print, so they ain't no profit in me trying to dope it out at the distance. Anyway the winner oughta make a good showing in the Ontario playoffs and give local fans a chance to see some lively baseball to wind up a season that ain't been none too rosy.

Hope you didn't strain your neck looking for the R a hundred, Mac. I don't know whether the big gas bag was visible in this neck of the woods Mon a.m., but it was so all-fired cold that all and sundry up here was tucked under the blankets, verandah mats, and so forth and wouldn't have crawled out for a dozen dirigibles.

Sportfully yours,

A. WISE CRACKER.

CHICAGO HOLDS TWO GAME LEAD

PIRATES BREAK EVEN

NEW YORK, Aug. 16 (C.P.)—If the Chicago Cubs are going to win the National League pennant again this season, the time is at hand for them to strike the deciding blows of the battle for the flag. The Cubs are in a fine position to-day to settle the matter for one and for all, having scored a thorough triumph over their closest rivals, the Brooklyn Robins, by winning three of the four games, of the series which ended yesterday.

By virtue of their 4 to 3 victory in yesterday's ten inning struggle which closed the series, the Cubs are out ahead by two full games. To-day they open a series with the comparatively easy Phillies with five games ahead before they tackle the New York Giants in a series which may become as important as the one just ended.

Brooklyn, meanwhile, moves on to tackle the somewhat tougher Pittsburgh Pirates with comparatively few hopes of regaining the lead in the near future.

The final struggle which put the Cubs in their commanding position two teams that were fighting for the lead. From start to finish it provided one thrill after another for the overflow crowd of 45,000, and it ended in a blaze of glory for Danny Taylor, substitute outfielder, who broke up the struggle in the tenth inning with a drive into the crowd standing in the outfield.

With the entire American League schedule washed out by the rain the East has been expecting for some time, it remained for the elder circuit to supply the day's entire supply of baseball news. Philadelphia and Pittsburg made a gallant attempt to do their shafe by dividing a hard-fought double header. The Phillies took the first clash 7 to 5, as Fred Brickell, a former Pirate, walloped two singles and a triple and scored three runs. Pittsburgh wen ten inning for a 3 to 2 triumph in the second. Adam Comorsky decided the fray with a triple which finally gave a victory to Steve Swetonic after he had worked as relief pitcher in both games.

The St. Louis Cardinals picked up their winning streak where Boston broke it Thursday, defeating the Braves 8 to 4. Home runs by Hafey and Watkins featured the game.

Softball Notes.

Westclox and Harrison's will play the deciding game of their series on Monday evening. Each team has won one game, Harrison's taking the first and Westclox the second. Both games were close and the third affair should prove the same.

The winner of this game will meet the Sugar Bowl for the championship of the league.

A bumper crowd should be out on Monday evening to see the teams go. The game starts at 6.30, and will be played at Central School grounds.

Oshawa has headed the group all through the schedule, with Campbellford in second place, and according to the arrangement, the first two teams enter for the play-offs. Oshawa has sustained only one loss, when Campbellford beat them last Wednesday with a 5-2 score. Campbellford has a count of four losses.

The game on the 20th will be staged at Campbellford in the afternoon, and on the 30th at Oshawa.

GOLF NOTES FROM ALL CORNERS OF THE GREEN

By RALPH H. REVILLE

TORONTO, Aug. 16—As a result of the unprecedented drought this summer in many parts of Ontario, several of the larger clubs including Toronto and Hamilton are making plans to pipe the fairways so as to obviate another year such an unpleasant situation. The outlay will be large but unquestionably it will be money well spent. In the aggregate, thousands of dollars damage have been sustained by courses in Ontario, the result of the lack of rain.

In Quebec and the Maritimes this summer, generally speaking, there has been ample moisture and the courses were never in better condition. Ontario seems to be the chief sufferer of all the Provinces this season. Many links are literally burned almost to a crisp. Several clubs in the West and British Columbia pipe water to the fairways with excellent results.

Miniature Courses

The 'Tom Thumb' golf courses which had their birth in the States have literally swept across Canada this summer and have been installed by the score, every city and town boasting one or more of these fascinating little lay-outs. Whether the vogue will continue is a matter of conjecture but there is no question about the popularity of the device to-day. Thousands are busily swinging putters for the first time and to that extent the love of golf is being inculated amongst old and young alike. Everyone loves to 'putter around' anyway.

The pioneers in the installation of these courses are literally coining money. Even the picture houses are seriously feeling the competition as the 'Tom Thumb' enthusiasts are especially in evidence in the evening, and for that matter well onto midnight and even after that hour. Not since the days of pingpong has any game so caught the popular fancy. And ping-pong, it will be remembered, had a short but merry life.

British Team Personnel

C. A. Bogert, Toronto, President of the Canadian Seniors Golf Association has received from London the names and handicaps of the British Seniors' team visiting Canada. They are: J. Beaumont Pease, (Captain) Royal and Ancient Scratch, E. B. Blackwell, Royal and Ancient scratch Major F. A. Stephens, D.S.O. Osey Golf Club, handicap, 1, Douglas Clayton, Headingley Golf Club, handicap 2, J. C. Boys, Cinque Ports, Deal, Handicap 4, Halford Hewitt, Cinques Ports, handicap 5, George Brann, Home Park and Deal Golf Clubs, handicap 6, James Todd, Worplesdon Golf Club, handicap 9, Rt. Hon. Lord Morison, Muirfield Golf Club, handicap 10, Stanley Welgall, St. George's Golf Club, handicap 11, Sir Herbert Walker, K.C.B., Sunningdale Golf Popham, D.S.O., Royal and Ancient (Hon. Secretary of the Association) handicap 20.

It will be noticed that the first seven men all have low handicaps and the team is much stronger than the one which visited Canada and the States two years ago. J. B. Pease is chairman of Lloyds Bank and like E. B. Blackwell is a player of note. George Grann was the former Sussex cricketer. Lord Morison is a Privy Councillor and Judge of the High Court of Scotland. Major Stephens is Secretary of the Oxhey Club and a particularly fine golfer. Sir Herbert Walker is Chairman of the Southern Railway, one of the great railway combines. All the team are men of prominence like in golfing and financial circles. The team expects to arrive at Montreal on Friday, the 22nd of August, and will stay there until the following Monday or Tuesday, when they will leave for Ottawa, remaining there until Thursday evening, the 28th. They then travel to Toronto, arriving there on Friday morning, the 29th of August. A. H. Eckford, of the Royal and Ancient, and his wife, are accompanying the team, although Mr. Eckford will not take part in any of the Triangular matches. Mrs. Eckford was formerly a Miss Hendrie of Hamilton.

In the death last week in London of F. P. Betts, K.C., Ontario not only loses an outstanding lawyer and Anglican, Mr. Betts was Chancellor of the Diocese of Huron. He was a member of the original small band of golfers who first played the game over thirty years ago on a little course near the Barracks in London. Subsequently he was a leading executive and player of the London Hunt Club, where the Amateur championship of Canada was played last week. Golf in Ontario owes much to Mr. Betts who was associated in the game with the late Sir George Gibbons, the late Dr. McDonald, the late Mr. George Brown and other outstanding Londoners. He always spent his summers at Murray Bay, Que., and played golf there a great deal with the former President and Chief Justice of the United States, Mr. W. H. Taft, who too spent his summer holidays for many years at Murray Bay.

The Eastwood Hills Country Club, Kansas City, has recently tried out the experiment of lighting the holes in its course so that members could play in the evening. The Secretary writes me that the experiment has proved quite a success and a careful check-up shows that the scores made by players by artificial light, compared favourably with those made in the daytime. He is quite enthusiastic about the test and predicts that night golf in the future is destined to be very popular indeed in Kansas City and he sees no reason why other clubs throughout the country should not also instal the electric lighting of courses.

International Tourney

The annouricement made by Mrs. M. K. Rowe, Secretary of the Canadian Ladies' Golf Union, that a match between the women players of the States and Canada, will be staged the Saturday previous to the Canadian Open Championship, at Laval-sur-le-Lac, the week of September 15th will be heard of with great satisfaction. Such an International event will be fraught with much interest. A very representative team of U.S. Ladies were defeated early in the season, by the ladies of Great Britain and then the Americans took their revenge on the ladies of France. This match at Montreal, next month, will therefore give a particularly good slant on how Canadian women players line-up with their fair sisters of Great Britain, France and the United States.

Miss Ada Mackenzie, of Toronto, as the ranking player of Canada, will captain the Canadian team and Miss Mary K. Brown, the American. She, it will be remembered, three years ago turned professional in tennis and was promptly disqualified as a result by the United States Golf Association, and properly so too although at the time the judgment was criticised in many quarters. Only this year she was re-instated as an amateur. Miss Brown enjoys the unique distinction of being both a ranking tennis player and golfer.

After rather a shaky start and a near collapse in the third round at the hands of the Michigan player, Frank Connelly, Ross Somerville of London, generally installed favorite, dominated the Canadian Amateur Championship the last last two days on the links of the London Hunt Club which encircling the stately stone building of the Western University, presented altogether a most pleasing and picturesque setting for the stellar amateur event of the 1930 season. With smashing vistories over the two Americans J. B. Ferguson of Philadelphia, in the semi-finals by 10 and 9 in the final J. Wood Platt also of Philadelphia, by 11 and 10 "London's favorite son" came through with flying colors during a week of unpretitably demonstrated that he is Canada's greatest amateur golfer of all time.

The Dominion owes a great deal to him the past six years when it comes to the question of stemming the American golf invasion. In 1924 at Rosedale, he eliminated Lawren W. Upson, the brilliant U. S. collegiate champion, and the following year at the Royal Ottawa, he defeated Max Marston, the only U.S. amateur champion ever to compete in the Canadian amateur and generally looked upon to win the title. Then in 1928 at Montreal, he vanquished W. K. Lanman of Columbus, Ohio, and now last week "Woodie" Platt of Philadelphia. If it had not been for the hard-hitting Somerville, on four occasions, the Canadian championship would have probably crossed the border.

SHARKEY-CARNERA BOUT HINGES ON THE BOSTON 'GOB'S' CUT

Malloy, Chicago Promoter, Offers 25 Per Cent.; Englander Demands 30 Per Cent.

CONTENDS WITH DICKSON.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—Out of a frenzied tumult of heavyweight matchmaking that took place, there emerged the chubby figure of Mique Malloy, a Chicago boy who seems to have made good in the big city.

It looks like Malloy has landed Jack Sharkey, America's leading heavyweight, as the opponent of Primo Carnera, for a ten-round round match at Chicago on the night of September 29. The match will be held at Soldier Field, where Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney drew a gate of $2,667,000 in 1927, a record that never has been even distantly approached in the history of sport.

Malloy was within five percentage points of an agreement last night, after a four-hour wrangle with Johnny Buckley and Jack Conway, managers of Sharkey.

Malloy made two propositions to Buckley and Conway. He offered Sharkey a flat guarantee of $125,000, with no privilege of percentage. The second offer was a guarantee of $100,000, with a privilege of 25 per cent of the net receipts.

Want 30 Per Cent

Buckley and Conway would not consider the $125,000 offer at all. The $100,000 guarantee was satisfactory, but the percentage was not. They held out for 30 per cent, which Malloy staunchly declined to give.

The dispute was taken up directly with Sharkey over the long distance telephone. Sharkey is at a fishing camp in Connecticutt, but talked with his representatives twice during the day. The fighter himself insists on making the final decision on the terms.

"We want a guarantee, but we are not particularly concerned about what it is," said Buckley. "The percentage is more important. We think the fight will draw, or we wouldn't take it. It strikes us as the best match we have been offered from a money-making standpoint."

"I have talked to Frank Bruen, of Madison Square Garden, as well as Malloy, to-day, Bruen offered me 37½ per cent for a match with Victorio Campolo late in September at the Yankee Stadium. I asked him for a guarantee of $100,000 in addition to the percentage, and he would not pay it. Then I offered to take Campolo on a straight percentage if the Garden would guarantee Sharkey another chance at Max Schmeling in the event Jack defeated Campolo. He would not agree to that, either.

"So we'll go with Malloy if we can straighten out the terms. The Garden seems more interested in building up Campolo than they are in making matches. They tried to tell me they had nothing to do with the fighter, but I know they have a three-year contract on him."

In addition to Bruen, Malloy was also competing against Jefferson Davis Dickson, a virile young American, who has established himself as the leading boxing promoter of Europe during the past year. Dickson arrived from England with "Pa" Stribling Tuesday, and he was holding conference with managers of important heavyweights. Malloy worked at the Forrest Hotel on 49th street, between Seventh and Eighth aves.; Dickson held forth at the corner of Eighth ave. and 49th street, and Bruen was in the Garden offices, a few doors away.

CAR FALLS OVER BRIDGE ONE KILLED, TWO HURT

COBALT, Ont., August 16 (C.P.).—Cyril Harrison, whose home was in Haileybury, was killed, and Paul Caya of Villa Marie was so seriously injured that grave fears are entertained for his recovery, when the automobile in which they with two other men were riding, plunged over a bridge at Villa Marie yesterday. A third occupant of the car, named Valliquette of Fabre also is seriously hurt, and only the driver of the machine escaped injury.

The French official commission examined 160 new types of airplanes last year.

Nearly $260,000 was collected in a recent one-day charity drive in London.

Seven women were among the 135 recently admitted to legal practice in England.

ENGLAND TO MEET AUSTRALIA TO-DAY

Interest Increases in Cricket Test Match At Kennington Oval

LONDON, Aug. 16 (Canadian Press Cable).—Fairly good weather is predicted for the fifth cricket test match between England and Australia which opens at the Kennington Oval to-day. The match is the last of the series and the "ashes," mythical symbol of the international cricket championship, are at stake, the other four matches resulted in England and Australia winning one each, while two were drawn.

Critics agree in expecting the game will be the most memorable in the annals of test match cricket. Excitement in England and Australia is at fever heat. The game will be played to a finish, unlike its predecessors in England, which were limited as to time. All reserved seats for the first four days have been sold.

Groundsman Martin announces the wicket is in perfect condition and should last at least a week. While this period is expected to provide plenty of time for the match to be concluded, it is pointed out by cricket writers that methods adopted in Australia, where there is no time limit to matches, will produce the dourest defense by batsmen on both sides and a week may be insufficient.

WINDERS LOSE TO ENGINEERS

Winners Battle Way To Place In Finals of C. G. E. League

SCORE 9 TO 7

The Engineers battled their way to a place in the finals for the C. G. E. Works' softball championship last night when they defeated the Armature Winders 9-7 in a sudden-death game to decide second place in the league. The game was a hard fought battle despite the fact that both teams had several fielding errors, the Engineers having seven fumbles to the losers eleven.

Munro, who twirled for the winners pitched nice ball, fanning four and allowing only five hits. He walked one.

Powell, pitching for the Armature, although ill turned in a steady game. Cameron, for the winners clouted out two clean three-base hits and Frost and Millard for Armature, each secured a triple also. The teams:

Children's Story Corner

HAPPY DAYS

We are going swimming in the moonlight to-night! Yes, we've been in before to-day and it's bad for children to go in more than once—you get thin or bilious or weak or something—but for three or four of these hottest August days, Mother relaxes her rule.

Isn't it gor-GEOUS to roll into the water and roll out again all afternoon with never a thought of heat or cold? No one asks "Is the water cold?" these days. No one warns you, "You'd better go home, my lady, your lips are blue." Float on the bosom of the river, lie in the grass of the wharf, gaze up at the blue sky and the soft little clouds—it's all sheer delight!

I don't think there is a nicer swimming place in the world than ours. We don't call it "the old swimmin' hole" because it isn't a hole at all, although goodness knows it's deep enough.

"Uncle" Davey Conroy dredged it years ago when he built the piers for the new bridge. It's not a bit stagnant water. There is always a pleasant current in the river yet not enough to carry us away and there are no lurking undertows such as we read of. The bottom is mostly hard I think, but few of us go down to examine. It's only our best swimmers we send down to explore when we lose the strap of our bathing cap or one of our new shoes.

Just now we have no diving board. Someone always breaks ours. We've nearly ruined the wharf too by forcing planks between the big timbers. When we can do a little better than simply step in we climb onto the cement piers to dive—first the low part then the high—then there remains only the last pinnacle of success, the highest stand of all, the Top of the Bridge! Oh, yes, we jump off it, even our quite small boys and girls, although it takes a good deal of courage the first time. I tell you it's just like jumping off Brock's monument. Florence never had done it—had never dared try—and then one day she got started and climbed up and jumped down, climbed up and jumped down, twenty times! So it wasn't even a stunt for her after that.

But diving is different. It needs skill as well as courage. Sometimes visitors come and swan dive and jacknife, off the bridge and our hearts are filled with longing and a determination to get the trick ourselves. Up we go—'spread your wings and spring out"—Down comes Dick the Daring, smack on his front!—Oh such a smack! "Lovely Dick," we cry, when his rueful face appears above water, "You descended like an angel." But Dick is swimming in with one fin, rubbing his tummy with the other.

"I say, I hurt my head every time."

"My legs double up at the knees."

"Oh Susan that was a beauty!"

Our littles ones watch the others at their games and then one fine day they start out. Oh, I do not mean they come to the river before they can swim. They learn to swim up in the canal near the old stone mill and for years they wend their way up its beautiful bank and play in its clear, swift-running water. It's a race way for the mill. The bottom is all clear pebbles. Blue gentians and buttercups grow on the edge and a really fairy bank of fern under the soft cedars while friendly old Bur-rum the Bullfrog peers at our antics from underneath a ledge of rock. Oh the canal will always have our heart but when you want to dive with the older 'kids' you graduate to the river.

When the men were dredging years ago, they dumped a heap of earth and stones just at the water's edge and about twenty-feet from the bridge. This leave one spot where the little ones can 'bottom' it. Often this mound is occupied by a timid aunt or big sister who lets herself gingerly over the dock at this point and slowly 'ducks' to the shoulders—but never lets go the timbers. Her timidity is scorned by the swarm of young water—rats diving and plunging around here Her mother couldn't have taken her to the canal when she was small!

"Follow the leader," someone shouts, and up jump all of those who have been lying face down on the grass getting a good coat of tan.

"Try the Peterborough dip. I bar go first," yells Pete. "All ready?"

Across the grass he races for ten yards then catapults far out into the water, gathering his knees in his arms so as to light with the greatest possible splash. That's the trick. The others follow in quick succession and the river is coverd with tiny rainbow flashes where the sun catches the mist after each great splash. Over the edge they swarm and on to land ready for the next dare.

"Can you do the cannon ball? It's like the last only you turn in the air and land on your back?"

"Sure we can. "Come on."

"You stand on bottom Tommy and let me swim between your legs."

"All right, and give me a boost as you go through."

"Hey, Connie, float on top and let us dive under you."

"Let's try diving through that inner tube."

"I say Betty, show us the picnic starting out for Stoney Lake and we'll be the ladies waiting on shore."

Obligingly Betty drops to a submerged ledge and with both legs churns up the water like a regular old stern-wheeler.

"Let's see who can swim the farthest under water."

"Oh well, wait till we get some breath back. Joanne swam right to the middle pier under water; Honest, she did—last year."

"Say girls, I saw a bass over near the pier just now. It was so long I was swimming with my eyes open face down."

"Say fellows do you suppose there are any black snakes in between those timbers?"

"Never mind if there are. Let basking snakes be. Come on out here and see who can float without moving a muscle."

"Yes, let's try something serious Pretend you're drowned Pat, and we'll try re-sus-sus-itation exercises on you."

"Well, if you want something serious we might try falling in with all our clothes on and see how far we could swim."

"Fifteen men on a dead man's chest,

chants Mary Jane, who has climbed on the top of the bridge and stands like the Statue of Liberty holding aloft an empty pop bottle for her torch.

"Oh quit your clowning, M.J., come on down and practise for the regatta and I'll pin a medal on you." One step out and down come Liberty torch and all straight to the bottom of the river.

And so the afternoon wears on in fun and frolics. It's only a healthy sensation of hunger that reminds us of home and when whe have climbed the hill, gone under the broken elm wriggled through the hole in the fence, paused to visit the blackberry bush in the orchard, what gives us a cosier feeling than to see that Granny has the fire lighted and the tea kettle on for supper!—and, oh can we have toast and honey—and lettuce and green onions and the new potatoes fried?

Everybody hangs out his own bathing suit!

PAIN so easily relieved

How to treat Headaches Neuralgia Neuritis or check a Cold

WHY are some women so patient with pain? Shopping with a head that throbs. Working when they ache all over. Sometimes it's hours before they take Aspirin and get relief! Most men take these tablets the moment that some sudden ache or pain threatens their comfort and so should you. Aspirin is perfectly harmless; it cannot depress the heart. The tablets stamped Bayer are always genuine Aspirin; always the same, always safe. So it isn't sensible to suffer with a headache, a cold, neuralgic pains, or anything else that these tablets relieve almost as soon as swallowed. Buy by the bottle and save money. Any drugstore has the 100-tablet size.

BURLINGTON MAN HURT IN DYNAMITE CAP BLAST

HAMILTON, Ont., Aug. 15.—(C.P.)—Accidentally setting off a box of percussion caps, Victor Thomas 29, of Burlington was badly injured in a shed near his home in that town yesterday. Thomas was cleaning out a drawer when he came across a box of caps used for explodinfg blasting powder. How he came to jar the box sufficiently to cause an explosion is not known, but the blast blew the top off a work bench and threw Thomas to the ground. He is suffering from severe lacerations and shock.

Missionaries Married In Western China City

EDMONTON, Alta., Aug. 16.—(CP).—Two thousand miles from the sea and in the heart of western China, lies the city of Chengtu, in the Province of Szechuen, and there on May 24 a wedding was solemnized, in the United Church, the details of which will be of interest to many friends in Canada. The principals were Miss Edith Loree, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Loree, of Nanton, Alta., and Dr. Rudolph Leonard Crook, of Yachow, Szechuen, formerly of Philadelphia. Miss Loree was well known in Vancouver as a teacher before her departure several years ago to follow the same profession in China. Dr. Crook is in charge of the American Baptist Mission Hospital at Yachow, a city of about 25,000 people.

The honeymoon was spent at Tachlenlu, in the borderland of Tibet, whence they travelled for 14 days by sedan chairs and lived under a canvass near a sulphur springs. On their return to Yachow they were met by the Chinese community with hundreds of firecrackers, their chairs draped with red scarves, and were carried through the street to their home, where a presentation of six scrolls was made to them and they received callers from several town institutions. Two or three days later Dr. and Mrs. Crook gave a reception to which the 100 Chinese citizens who had contributed the firecrackers were invited.

Nearly 94 per cent of the men in Denmark are employed.

SIR THOMAS WHITE OUTLINES FORM TARIFF BOARD OF 1912 WAS TO TAKE

Was Not To Be Tariff Making Body But Just a "Fact-finding" Organization.

SET UP NEW TRIBUNAL.

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 16.—(CP).—The Tariff Commission legislation sponsored by Sir Thomas White in 1912, passed by the House of Commons and later rejected by the Senate where the Liberals were in the majority at the time, was not intended to take the tariff out of politics, said Sir Thomas in a statement issued to the Canadian Press to-day.

Sir Thomas, who was Minister of Finance in the Borden Conservative Government when he introduced the legislation, said the Tariff Commission was to be an agency for the finding of facts for the information of the Minister of Finance in framing his tariff proposals from time to time, but responsibility for any tariff changes was to continue to be the responsibility of the Minister.

Set Up New Tribunal.

In announcing the abolition of the Advisory Tariff Board last Monday, Premier Bennett said it was the intention of the Government to ask Parliament for statutory authority to set up a new tribunal along the lines of that proposed before the war by the Borden Government.

Emphasizing that, the proposed commission of 1912 was to be a fact-finding, not tariff-making body, Sir Thomas said. "Whether the time has arrived for an enlargement of this conception of the function of a tariff board or commission is, of course, for the Government of the day to determine."

Sir Thomas said he was prompted to make the statement because statements in certain of the press to the effect that the legislation he introduced in 1912 was intended to "take the tariff out of politics." Nothing was further from the intention of the Government of that day, he said. "And I said so in language as clear as I could command."

AWAITS ORDERS FROM TORONTO

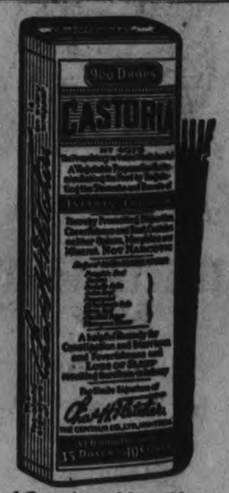
WINDSOR, Ont., Aug. 15 (C.P.).—Whether or not the Windsor Trades and Labor Council will face a court action as a result of the circulation of lottery tickets in their name, on a Montreal horse race, with prizes totalling in the vicinity of $200,000, will depend entirely upon the further attitude of the Attorney-General's Department.

23 YEAR OLD BRIDE TAKES HER OWN LIFE

TORONTO, Ont., August 15 (C.P.).—Mrs. Ina Mitchell, 23-year-old bride, died in hospital here last night from the effects of drinking sulphate of nicotine.

Mrs. Mitchell, who comes from Galt, Ont., is alleged to have kissed her husband good-bye and said, "Jimmy, I love you," before drinking the mixture. Poverty and hard luck are given as reasons for her supposed despondency.

Coroner Dr. Burgess stated that this was the first sulphate of nicotine death he had heard of in Toronto. This poison is used to kill flies.



If Baby has COLIC

A cry in the night may be the first warning that Baby has colic. No cause for alarm if Castoria is handy! This pure vegetable preparation brings quick comfort, and can never do the slightest harm. Always keep a bottle in the house. It is the safe and sensible thing when children are ailing. Whether it's the stomach, or the little bowels; colic or constipation; or diarrhea. When tiny tongues are coated, or the breath is bad. Whenever there's need of gentle regulation. Children love the taste of Castoria, and its mildness makes it suitable for the tiniest infant, and for frequent use.

And a more liberal dose of Castoria is always better for growing children than some needlessly strong medicine meant only for adult use. Genuine Castoria always has Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the wrapper. Prescribed by doctors!

TARZAN OF THE APES No. 38 (Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.) By Edgar Rice Burroughs

Within the cabin Jane saw the lioness almost through the window. She reached for the fallen revolver. Raised it. Then she saw Esmeralda, inert but alive. She could not leave her. She must use one cartridge on the senseless woman before she turned the cold muzzle toward herself again.

Quickly Jane ran to the side of Esmeralda. She pressed the muzzle of the revolver tight against that devoted heart, closed her eyes, and —Sabor, the lioness, emitted a frightful shriek. The girl, startled, recoiled and turned to face the brute, again raising the weapon against her own temple.

She didn't fire again. Surprised, she saw the huge animal being drawn slowly back through the window and in the moonlight the heads of two men. Tarzan had seized the long tail in both his hands, braced himself, and thrown all his mighty strength into the effort to draw the beast back.

Slowly the lioness was emerging from the window. Tarzan, suddenly releasing his hold upon her, sprang full upon her back. Tighter his strong young arms forced her head lower and lower. The immense muscles of Tarzan's shoulders and biceps leaped into corded knots—a super-human effort—and Sabor's vertebrae snapped!

Instantly Tarzan was on his feet. For the second time Clayton heard Tarzan give the bull-ape's savage roar of victory. He ran toward Jane's agonized cry. Calming her fears, they came out to the dead body of the lioness, to thank their rescuer. But Tarzan of the apes was gone.

RECORD RISES.

Chemong Park regained the tree-sitting record from Bridgenorth last night when Stroyan Leith, Jr., descended from a pine tree in the Park at eight o'clock after having sat on a branch for seven hours—half an hour longer than the previous day's sit by two lads in the neighboring village.

Stroyan Leith, who is just seven, sat an hour for each of his years. An alarm clock and a pillow were the only refinements his perch afforded, but he managed to persuade his parents to pass his dinner and supper up to him. He was covered with resin when he came down, but had the satisfaction of being the first boy thereabouts to sit alone and in one position for the entire time.

However, "Never again!" he said.

WIFE A MISS DENNISTOUN

R. M. Hamilton of Auburn, whose family is closely related to that of the Dennistouns, points a slight error in the recent account of the career of Sir Frederick Haultain, when it was noted that Sir Frederick's brother, Wilmot Haultain, married a Miss Barlee, of Peterborough. Mr. Wilmot Haultain's wife was formerly Miss Annie Dennistoun, fourth daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James F. Dennistoun.

AID BROWNLEE FUND

Four small summer residents at Chemong Park took time from there play and frolic this week to think of less fortunate citizens. To the Blind Man's Fund which was started in these columns recently in aid of John Brownlee, $1.25 was contributed this morning, the result of a little play, "Mischievous Nancy" given at Chemong Park yesterday by Olga and Margaret Westbye, Barbara and Andrew Scott.

WEDDING BELLS

HALES—JOHNSTON

A pretty wedding was solemnized quietly at one o'clock to-day at Knox United Church, when Sadie Ella, youngest daughter of Colonel and Mrs. T. J. Johnston, 186 Reid street, became the bride of Everett A. Hales, son of Mrs. Mary Hales of 505 Bethune street and the late Richard Hales. The ceremony was performed by the pastor of the church, the Rev. W. McDonald. Decorations were carried out with gladioli and ferns and white ribbons marked off the guest pews.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a lovely gown of peach georgette of ankle length, with short bolero jacket Her hat of white mohair was trimmed with a bow of peach velvet ribbon. She wore white silk gloves, white kid slippers and white silk hose and carried a bouquet of Butterfly roses and maidenhair fern. Her only ornament was a white gold wrist watch, the gift of the bridegroom.

Witnesses to the signing of the register were Miss Elma Hales, R.N., of Cleveland, Ohio, sister of the bridegroom, and Walter Baptie of Peterborough.

The organist of the church, W. R. Potter, played the wedding music, and Mrs. Ernest Johnston sang very sweetly during the signing of the register. The gift of the bridegroom to the solist was a ring.

After the ceremony, a dainty wedding luncheon was served to forty friends of the bridal party, at the home of the bride's parents, where decorations were in gladioli and other summer flowers. The table was centered by the bride's cake. Catering was done by Hooper and Sons.

Mr. Hales and his bride left later by motor for a trip to Windsor and Detroit and other places. They will reside at 505 Bethune street.

The bride travelled in an esemble of rose-beige georgette with matching velvet hat and accessories.

SWATFEST EXPECTED IN E.P.L. FINAL ON NEXT MONDAY NIGHT

STRONG CLUB FOR PLAYOFFS

Can Canadian Generals crash through the pitching of Jeff Hardill and tie up the series for the East Peterborough League championship? There are plenty of fans who believe that the Electricians are not equal to the task, and there are just as many more who claim that the team is due for a batting spree and that the swatfest will go over on Monday night. But there is also another angle to the argument. Have the Generals a pitcher who can put the blanket on the Crescents? Then there is also the possibility that one of the teams will blow up under the pressure of a nerve-racking series. No matter which team wins the championship, the fans will have a strong club to get behind in the O.B.A.A. playdowns. Monday night's game will start at six o'clock.

The bandits had been chased on the highways outside of Hamilton by five motorcycle policemen who were on their trail immediately after the robbery.

SINGLE SURVIVOR IN MINE TRAGEDY

Efforts Renewed to Recover 42 Bodies in Blackburn Mine.

FIRE SEALED OFF.

PITHEAD, BLAKEBURN MINE, COALMONT, B.C., Aug. 18 (C.P.) — Four days ago, a gas explosion caved in the shaft of the Blakeburn coal mine, entombing 43 miners of the afternoon shift. To-day it was admitted that John Porchella, brought out alive from beneath a pile of debris near the pit-head, is the lone survivor. Three bodies have been recovered, but 42 remain buried in the shattered mine.

Fire which caused rescue work to be abandoned for a period, has been located in old workings and has been sealed off. It is felt that digging may now proceed without the danger of further explosions which previously threatened the searchers.

During Saturday night and Sunday, fair progress was made in clearing the main tunnel. Three shifts of men are being used working 24 hours a day.

TWEED INQUEST TUESDAY NIGHT

CABLED SCOTLAND.

TWEED, August 18 (Examiner Staff Correspondent).—"No further developments" was the laconic comment made by Police Chief W. Moon in response to an enquiry by The Examiner concerning the mystery surrounding the death of George White, Scotch farm hand, whose body was recovered from Moira River on Wednesday last.

Coroner Dr. Mather will open the inquest in the Council Chamber here, to-morrow, at 2 p.m., when it is expected the probe will cause more than usual interest on account of the many mysterious features of the case.

In an effort to help unravel the problem, The Examiner dispatched a cablegram to the police in White's home town in Scotland, on Friday afternoon and received the following reply on Saturday afternoon:—

"Cannot enlighten. Further information urgently required. George White, Senior, Inellan, Argylishire."

TORONTO CLUB IS LEADING IN CANOE RACES

Island Acquatic Boatmen Paddle to Victory Despite Unfavorable Weather Handicap.

WINNIPEG CREW WINS.

England to Meet Hamilton Victorias in Lawn Bowling Series.

HAMILTON, August 18. (C.P.) — Racing under difficult weather conditions, in a heavy sea, that swamped many of the boats, Island Aquatic Club, Toronto, had scored the only double points up to noon, at the Canadian Canoe Association Regatta. The meet is being held in conjunction with the British Empire games. Island Aquatic placed one-two in the junior double blade single.

A heavy northwest wind churned the water all morning, and in the only five races run before lunch, many of the tiny shells left their crews swimming.

The first race of the day, intermediate single blade single, will be re-run as a result of one of the patrol boats crossing the course.

Winnipeg Crew Wins.

Winnipeg walked off with the junior double blade fours. It was the first time Winnipeg colors had swept ahead on a C.C.A. meet since 1921, for the Westerners have not been east since that time.

Balmy Beach, Toronto, won the intermediate single blade tandem, while Parkdale, Toronto, scored a nice win in the intermediate single blade fours.

The junior double blade single went to Island Aquatic when their two entries E. Gruber and R. Thompson finished one-two. Gruber had three lengths on his team mate and finished going away. F. A. Myott, Brittania, Ottawa, was in third position.

When the intermediate single blade four went to the line, the top of the Parkdale boat had been covered with oilcloth to prevent water from coming in. Holes had been cut in the waterproofing through which the bodies of the paddlers protruded, Eskimo kayak style. Whether it was the covering or paddling, Parkdale came up nicely to win at the finish.

Sudbury was second and Gananoque third, four boats being swamped.

Canada's hopes for the doubles title rested with two far-Westerners, Reid and Moore of Vancouver Lawn Bowling Club. The Coast couple won the Dominion crown here a week ago and Reid also named single titleholder in the Canadian tournament, will carry the Maple Leaf in Empire competition with visiting stars.

Each rink, in all three events, will

No reasons were assigned today for the delay in the coronation and for the renewed doubtful status of the reconciliation, other than that they were personal as well as political and economic.

GREAT VICTORIES IN NORTH CHINA MADE BY GOV'T

Nanking Regime Predicts End of Civil War on Own Terms.

REBELS ON RUN.

People's Army Begins Withdrawal From Honan Province.

NANKING, China, Aug. 18 (A.P.) —Sweeping claims of victory on the battlefields of Northern China caused high Government circles to-day to predict the end of the civil war on terms dictated by the Nanking regime.

The optimistic forecast was made as the result of the recapture by Nationalists of Tsinan, capital of Shantung Province, and reports indicating Northern rebel armies in Hunan Province were finding Government fire too hot to withstand.

Recapture of Tsinan from the rebels was regarded in Government circles as virtually re-establishing Nationalist authority in Shantung. Military reports from along the Haichowatungkwan Railway stated the rebel Kouminchu (people's army) had begun a general withdrawal from Eastern Hunan.

While specific reasons accounting for the alleged Kuominchun retreat were not given, it was generally believed strengthening of the Nationalists in Shantung had made the rebels' position untenable in Central and Eastern Honan.

CANADIAN MARKS FALL.

Finest of 11 Countries in Impressive March Before Vice-Regal Party.

HAMILTON, Ont., August 18 (By W. R. Wheatley, C.P. Staff Writer). — Athletes of England showed the way, and the sons and daughters of her globe-encircling Dominions and colonies bowed to the prowess of the Mother Country at the gala opening of the British Empire Games.

Motherland Conquest.

It was a veritable conquest for the Mother Land—a conquest that carried her to victory in five of the nine field, track and swimming championships, and a conquest that won anew, in a brilliant setting of unity and purposeful achievement, the hearts of a sport-loving Empire.

From the moment of the impressive ceremonies, when Lord Willingdon, Governor-General of Canada, and honorary president of the British Empire Games, formally opened the week of sport the spirit of Empire breathed over the 17,000 persons who crowded into Hamilton's Civic Stadium.

Before the sand of the Viceregal party and officials, the Empire's finest stood at attention. Through the huge gates at the north end of the Stadium, they had marched upon the field of competition, the flags and standards of the eleven competing countries, the distinguishing garb of each unit of athletes add-

IMMIGRATION POLICY DISLIKED IN ENGLAND

LONDON, Eng., Aug. 18.—(CP) — Although officials here whose duties are concerned with immigration are indisposed to comment openly upon the action of the Hon. W. A. The subject of migration, is felt to be one of the most important which will be discussed at the Imperial Conference.

Bull Ring Fans Boo Brooklyn Matador

Madrid, August 18. — Sydney Franklin of Brooklyn, Spain's United States Matador, yesterday afternoon returned to the ring after an absence of two months, only to receive a razzing from the fans because of the color of his costume. Franklin killed two bulls, but the ringsiders found his work hasty and conservative and his sword play below standard, although he used only one thrust for each animal. They said so, loudly.

What bothered even Franklin's followers was a salmon pink suit embroidered with white lacings which he chose to make his appearance.

ENGLAND SCORES 405 COUNTER IN FIRST INNINGS

Homesters Away to Good Start in Second Day's Play of Test Match.

BOWLERS RE-ARRANGED.

Ponsford Scores Century For Aussies After Series of Brilliant Strokes.

LONDON, Eng., Aug. 18.—(C P Cable)—England completed their first innings today in the cricket test match with Australia, scoring 405. Herbert Sutcliffe, who held the team together when collapse threatened on Saturday, carried his score today from 111 to 161. Thirty-six runs for the loss of no wicket had been scored by lunch time by W. M. Woodfuliand W. H. Ponsford, the opening pair of batsmen.

The game was resumed in beautiful sunshine, the pitch looked fresh and was unharmed by a few showers which fell during the night. England's magnificent recovery whetted the appetites of the fans for a fine day's cricket and the queue which awaited the opening of the gates was larger than on Saturday, all the unreserved places in the stands were filled at 9.30 a.m. Twenty thousand were present at 11 a.m. when Sutcliffe and Wyatt came out to continue England's innings, left at 316, the former got a wonderful ovation. Clarence Grimmett opened the bowling with a maiden. Each batsman pushed T. Wall, the bowler at the other end for a single.

When play had been in progress for fifteen minutes at 11.15 the gates had been taken.

Wyatt was applauded when he twice hit Grimmett to the boundary past square leg. He boundaried on a glance from Wall. Grimmett began to find his length and had both batsmen guessing, but Wall's in swerves were not difficult.

I. Sutcliffe reached his 150 with a short single, when he was 56. Wyatt snicked a ball from Wall waist high into the slips but P. M. Hornicbrook dropped it.

A Fairfax relieved Grimmet at 359 and was quickly successful, getting caught at the wicket. The Yorkshireman's monumental innings was one of the best displayed of his career and with Wyatt he had pulled England out of a bad hole. He richly deserved the terrific applause which greeted him as he returned to the clubhouse in his 161 were ten fours and six threes, his only chance was a difficult one when he was 83. When Grimmett came back he put down a tempting ball to Maurice Tate. The batsmen pumped out to it, missed and easily stumped. Another bitter blow for England followed when Wyatt was also smartly stumped off Fairfax's bowling. In his 64 were eight fours, the eighth wicket fell at 379.

W. M. Woodful and W. H. Ponsford opened the Australian first innings and put on 36 runs before lunch. Woodful when six gave a chancve to Duckworth behind the wicket off Tate which was not accepted. Wyatt changed his bowlers around, trying out Tate and Larwood at both ends, Ponsford made a poor stroke just after lunch when he edged Larwood, who was bowling into the wind.

Wyatt tried bowling change after change, but he failed to trouble the batsmen. Ponsford settled down to play in his best form. He got Hammond away for a single to send up the 100.

Ponsford reached his century after a series of brilliant strokes. Woodful scored very slowly, being in the thirties at the time.

Detectives Make Startling Find; Raid Perri Home

Murdered Woman Recently Tried Two Hamilton Hardware Stores to Buy Shot Gun Ammunition—Failed to Get Kind She Desired at First But Made Purchase at Second.

CLERK POSITIVELY IDENTIFIES ASSASSIN'S VICTIM AS WOMAN WHO SOUGHT TO GET 12 GAUGE SHELLS

HAMILTON, August 18. (C.P.) — Startling revelations in the mystery surrounding the murder of Mrs. Rocco Perri were made by the police to-day. Mrs. Perri purchased the shot-gun shells which were used by the assassin who took her life. Detectives have discovered the woman recently went to the hardware department of a local store and tried to buy shells for a 12-gauge shotgun. The clerk was unable to provide her with the type she desired. Later she went to a hardware store where she succeeded in procuring the ammunition she wished, it is declared.

The clerk in the department store was taken to the Perri home and identified the body as that of the woman who had asked him for the shells. The clerk in the store where the actual purchase had been made was unable to swear positively to her identity but believed that she had been the purchaser.

Police Occupy House

Headed by Inspector Miller of the Provincial Police and Inspector Crocker of the local force, a large squad of detectives and constables descended upon the home of Rocco Perri, Bay street south, shortly before noon to-day and occupied the premises.

The raid had evidently been carefully planned beforehand, and Perri seemed to be taken by surprise. He accompanied Inspector Miller and Crocker into an upstairs room where the police officials were closeted with him for a long time.

ATLANTIC AIRSHIP LINE IS FEASIBLE

London Paper States Shipping Companies Need Not Worry For Some Time.

REFITTING R-100

LONDON Eng., Aug. 18. — (C P Cable)——The fine achievement of the dirigible R-100 in making its flights to and from Canada proved that the regular airship service which Sir Dennistoun Burney, the ship's designer, wishes to see established between Britain and Canada is a realizable proposition, says the Daily Telegraph in commenting on the R-100.

The Telegraph stresses the need of an improved Atlantic meteorological service as an essential condition to the safety of such flights. Discussing the comforts and discomforts of the voyage, however, the newspaper remarks that those whose main idea is to reach the other side at something better than topmost speed may gladly endure "the cramped monotony of airship travel" but the Telegraph believes it will be long before the shipping companies need to grow nervous about their patronage.

The Telegraph's reference to the "cramped monotony of airship travel", is answered by Sir Dennistoun Burney's statement that the regular service would be conducted by ships twice the size of the R-100 which is 5,000,000 cubic feet.

The Herald states that the vessel is to be fitted with a new envelope and with six new engines.

THE PAS, Man., Aug. 18.—Cree Indian residents near the Cedar Lake reserve, 50 miles southeast of the Pas are preparing to flee from their homes before the crackling approach of forest flames. MYSTERIOUS MISS DOLLAR GOES SHOPPING ON TWIN DOLLAR DAYS

Ten Dollars Will Be Given to the Person Discovering the Elusive Lady as She Visits the Stores

Next Friday and Saturday the merchants of Peterborough are holding their annual Summer Community Dollar Day. Between eighty and ninety of the best business houses in the city are presenting a simultaneous array of bargains, never surpassed and probably never equalled, on any previous event of the kind. The aim of the merchants each Dollar Day is to beat the former record, and the thrifty buying public can confidently expect to see a few dollars do better buying on this occasion than ever before. To add to the interest of the two big days, Mysterious Miss Dollar will mingle with the shopping crowds until some one discovers and captures her, thereby earning the Examiner's special prize of $10 in cash.

The elusive lady will be out on her shopping rounds on Friday between 9 a.m. and 5.30 p.m. and on Saturday, if not captured before, will be out during the same hours, with the addition of an evening trip from 8 to 9 o'clock.

As soon as Miss Dollar is captured a bulletin will be posted in front of The Examiner to end the chase, but the lady is going to be hard to catch.

Miss Dollar will go from store to store and must be captured in one of the Dollar Day stores, not on the street. Also to make her admit that you are right, you must show her this story about her, cut out of The Examiner. Just say, 'You are The Examiner's Mysterious Miss Dollar, and here's the story about you from the paper." That's all—find the lady; she may be shopping right beside you, because, of course, she is just as anxious to profit by the bargains as you are. But be sure and clip this story from The Examiner, and have it in your purse or pocket. It's worth $10 in cash to the one that finds her but all conditions must be complied with.

From time to time bulletins will be posted in front of The Examiner telling of some distinguishing feature of dress or outfit Miss Dollar is wearing.

175 PASSENGERS ABOARD SINKING LINER ARE SAVED

Ventura Reaches Disabled Tahiti As Bulkheads Give Way

CREW STAYS ABOARD.

Only Heroic Work at Pumps Kept Ship Afloat Till Help Arrived.

WELLINGTON, N.Z., August 18.— Racing against an impending storm, the Matson liner Ventura this morning reached the disabled British steamer Tahiti, about 500 miles south-west of Rarotonga Cook Islands, and took aboard her passengers and mails.

Despite a heavy swell running, the lifeboats safely transferred the 175 persons composing the Tahiti's passenger list.

The Tahiti, though listing badly and expected to founder, was not abandoned by her crew, which remained aboard at the pumps in a desperate effort to keep her afloat.

Ordered to Lifeboats.

LONDON, August 18.— Despatches to the Daily Herald from Brisbane, Australia, this morning reported that heroic work at the pumps of the disabled British steamer Tahiti had saved the ship from foundering before rescue arrived.

Twice before the Norwegian freighter Penbryn came alongside Captain Toten of the Tahiti ordered the passengers into the lifeboats as he did not inform them that a great storm was brewing.

On each occasion, however, furious work by the crew at the pumps gave the Tahiti another chance to ride out the heavy swells. Each time the passengers were ordered back on board again lest the boats be scattered in the impending storm.

Conditions at sea were reported to have been too difficult to allow the transhipping of the Tahiti's passengers to the Penbryn.

In Nick of Time.

SUVA, Fiji, August 18. — A radio despatch received here from the Matson liner Ventura, said the vessel reached the disabled steamer Tahiti, at 9.30 a.m. Suva time, just as a bulkhead on the Tahiti began to give way and the passengers were taking to the boats.

The message said five boats got away safely from the Tahiti, and the passengers were taken aboard the Ventura.

The weather still was fair, but a heavy swell was running.

The Tahiti was listing and her officers believed the ship was doomed.

ROWELL LAUDS SIMON REPORT

Noted Britishers Given Honorary Doctor of Laws Degrees.

BANTING PRAISED.

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 18 (C.P.) — The Simon Report will go down in history as one of the greatest state documents of modern times, said Hon. N. W. Rowell, K.C., in introducing the Rt. Hon. Sir John Simon at a special convocation of the University of Toronto. Together with Lord Dunedin, who presides over the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council; Lord Tomlin, and Sir William Jowitt, Attorney-General of England, Sir John received the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws.

"The report which bears my name is the work of seven men, not one," Sir John told the convocation, adding that the solution which they unanimously put forward, has not been universally accepted as the right solution to the problem of India. He referred to his interest in universities, recalling the fact that he had been a member of the Royal Commission on the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge some years ago.

The importance of university research was stressed by Sir John, and he lauded the work of Dr. F. G. Banting, Owen Sound, the discoverer of insulin.

RAIN OF BOMBS HALTS AFGHANS IN BORDER RAIDS

Afridi Hillsmen Reported In Full Retreat Towards Frontier.

MARTIAL LAW ENFORCED.

Haji Of Turanezai Still Urging Mahammadans To Fight British

PESHAWAR, India, Aug. 18. — Chastened by a daily rain of bombs from British planes, raiding Afridi tribesmen yesterday were reported in full retreat to the hills of the North-west frontier, and the menacing situation here was considered relieved.

Despite the decreased tension, the martial law regulations proclaimed in the city Saturday were officially published Sunday. The Haji of Turanczai, a consistent border troublemaker, is reported to be still trying to persuade the powerful Mohammedans to take the field against the British.

All Afridi invaders have disappeared from the cave area at the junction of the Bara Valley and the Khajuri Plain, and the Plain itself was reliably reported to have been completely evacuated. Other districts seemed likewise freed of the tribesmen.

Punishment inflicted on the villagers by raiding airplanes was said by officials to have had a salutory effect. The disaffected sections are expected to sue for peace in a short time. An influential leader in the Bara Valley described the damage from air raids as impressive, and gave his personal pledge that no more hostile parties would be allowed to pass through his territory toward India.

DENMARK ORDERS EXPLORERS AWAY

French Scientists Fail to Comply With Instructions In Greenland.

INSPECTION SHIP SENT.

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 18.—The scientific expedition financed by Le Journal, of Paris, must leave Scoresby Sound, Greenland, the Danish Government decided yesterday.

The expedition, headed by Dr. Downbrova, landed on the Sound despite the Government's prohibition, and orders have been forwarded to the authorities there to oust the explorers.

The Government objects to the expedition's presence, it was said, because on previous visits to Angmagaalik and East Greenland, Dr. Downbrova failed to comply with conditions laid down for him by the authorities.

The expedition left Bergen in July in the Norwegian whaler Crane. The inspection ship Godthaab will be in Scoresby Sound presently to enforce the Government's orders.

The party took along ten automobiles from Canada, stowing them uncrated as baggage aboard ship. The owner of each car acted as chauffeur while a doctor and an expert mechanic traveled with the caravan to attend to any possible ills of man or machine.

G. J. Drobey of Edmonton, acted as conductor of the tour.

U. S. OBJECTING TO CANADIAN TRADE IN CHICAGO PIT

Federal Farm Board Called on to Decide Question.

MAY TAKE ACTION.

Winnipeg Wheat Market Reports Show Americans Deal There.

CHICAGO, Aug. 18.— A new question in connection with the grain trade has, it is understood, been called to the attention of the Federal Farm Board, a problem involving relations between Canada and the United States. That question is: "Shall Canadian grain interests be permitted to continue to sell wheat futures as hedges for speculative account in the Chicago wheat pit, while at the same time a virtually prohibitive tariff has been placed as a protection to the United States farmer?"

United States Trade in Winnipeg

The total sales volume for the account of Canadians and Liverpool importers on the Board of Trade in the past have been large at times, it was pointed out. On the other hand, Winnipeg market reports sometimes say that Americans have transactions of importance in that market. Whether Canada will take up that side of the question has not been indicated. The report of the grain futures administration of the Department of Agriculture, recently published, includes much pertinent information on the transactions by Liverpool importers and for the account of Canadians.

The first move in this development in the wheat market may be expected from the Federal Farm Board, according to one observer, with the Department of State being involved, perhaps.

That Body of Yours

WONDERFUL HELP FROM OUR GLANDS.

You have read from time to time of the wonderful power of adrenalin the juice manufactured in the small adrenal glands, which are situated one on top of each kidney.

This juice injected into a heart, which has stopped beating, has been able, in many cases, to restore heart action.

For a long time this juice which is obtained from the inner part of the adrenalin gland, was considered its only, and important secretion. Its ability to regulate the body processes has been amply shown.

When these glands were removed from experimental animals, the animals would die in a few days.

Injecting adrenalin into them during these few days had no effect, but the injection of the juice from the outer portion of the gland kept these animals alive as long as it was used.

These experiments give some idea of the wonderful effect upon that body of yours of these little glands which with the other glands of the body have only been getting real attention from scientists during the past few years.

And the ductless glands have been shown to have more than one kind of juice, each of which has a different action in the body processes. The little pituitary gland in the head, which is only the size of the pea, manufactures two or more kinds of juices, one from the front part having to do with growth, and the juice from the back part with the handling of starches and water in the system.

Now these glands are in us when we are born and unless they get injured by a blow or fall, or by some infection, they will do their work of regulating the body processes day in and day out, and year in and year out, without any thought on our part.

In former times injury or infection to these glands created all kinds of trouble in the body, large feet, jaw bones, the homely woman, the fat woman and the living skeleton of the circus, and so forth.

But now, extracts of glands will slow down or speed up the processes of the body, will enable the blood to utilize more sugar, will reduce high blood pressure, will cure pernicious anæmia, and do many other wonderful and useful acts for that body of yours.

It is certainly gratifying to know that these glands, when in normal condition, regulate properly the body processes, and when we are not normal or not well that extracts of them will help to do this work for us.

Just Between Us Women

A daily chat with Examiner neighbors conducted by Anne Wilcox

NOW THAT patchwork quilts are so much in the limelight of modern household accessories, and women are making the decorative patchwork squares there is a demand to know how to make the finished patchwork into quilts.

• • • • • • •

Just how, for instance, is the quilt put into a frame, and what are the frames, and how is the work actually done?

• • • • • • •

Some of you older women who have quilted many quilts in the olden days, may think it is rather absurd for anyone not to know how to go about quilting a quilt, but you will find that there are many who never saw a quilt in the frame!

• • • • • • •

Before the quilting begins there must be three portions ready to complete the quilt, namely the patchwork top, the lining, and the inter-lining.

• • • • • • •

The best interlining is wool wadding, but cotton batting can be used. Spread the lining on an extension dining room table, a bed or on the floor, and cover smoothly with the interlining and tack it here and there with basting threads.

• • • • • • •

Lay the patchwork top above the wadding and smooth it down over it, so that all lines are absolutely even with the squared edges of the lining. Tack this top to the other portions already basted correctly.

• • • • • • •

In olden times a quilting frame was essential for this work but to-day curtain stretchers can be substituted, or four strips of wood, two as long as the quilt, and the other two the width of it. Use large clamps for fastening corners together. It is important to have the corners perfect right angles.

• • • • • • •

Tack the edges of the quilt prepared as described, to the frame, or press them down firmly on to the pins, if a curtain stretcher is used.

• • • • • • •

Some, instead of basting the three portions together before, tack the lining on to the frame and then lay on the interling, and then the patchwork top, basting all together—and I believe, perhaps, it is easier.

• • • • • • •

A quilting frame of whatever sort is an awkward article to manage, but the quilting itself is not difficule. The work should be so planned that consecutive time can be given to the stitchery.

The frame can be rested on tablas or chair backs. Where space is a consideration keep the frame in a room where it can be leaned against a wall, cleared of pictures for the time being. In such a case the frame will have to be positioned each time and put away when the quilting time is over.

• • • • • • •

It is important to have the quilt positioned in some one of the ways suggested so that there is nothing under it while the stitching goes on. The worker can sit on a chair or a stool while she sews, changing its place from time to time, so that reaching over it in taking the stitches is made as handy as possible.

• • • • • • •

Do not imagine the work is difficult to get at, even in the centre of the quilt, for the huge quilts of olden times are not made. But as the work is finished along the edges, it can be rolled in' so as to make it easier to reach the centre.

• • • • • • •

And of course, when the quilting is finished, the edges are bound and it is all finished ready for use.

WEDDING BELLS

KUNST—McLAREN.

St. James United Church was the scene at half past two o'clock this afternoon of a pretty wedding, when Mabel Marguerite, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William McLaren of 534 Chamberlain street, became the bride of Frank Kunst, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Kunst of Lethbridge, Alberta.

The church was attractively decorated with gladioli, ferns and palms. In the absence of the pastor, the Rev. A. E. Moorhouse, the ceremony was performed by the Rev. A. H. Going, Dennistoun avenue. T. Phillips played the wedding music.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a lovely frock of blue georgette with yoke of eggshell. Her hat, shoes and hose were in eggshell tints. She wore a necklace of pearls and carried a bouquet of Butterfly roses.

Attendants were Mr. and Mrs. Elmer McLaren, bother and sister-in-law of the bride. Mrs. McLaren wore beige georgette with hat, shoes and hose to match, and carried a bouquet of Columbia ross.

After the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents where buffet refreshments were served from a table centred by the bride's cake and decorated with gladioli.

Mr. and Mrs. Kunst left later by train for the Royal York Hotel, Toronto, en route to Wheaton, Illinois, and Chicago. They will return by way of Niagara Falls, and will live at 209 Rutherford avenue.

The bride travelled in an ensemble of brown silk tweed with matching accessories, and scarf of red fox fur.

MUNRO—WILLIAMS

MARMORA, Aug. 18 (Examiner Correspondence).—At high noon on Saturday, the United Church, Marmora was the scene of a pretty wedding, when Elsie, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Williams of Marmora Township, became the bride of Mr. C. Gordon Munro, son of Mr. and Mrs. N. Munro of Peterborough. The ceremony was performed by the paston, Rev. F. H. Howard, in the presence of a large congregation. The rostrum and windows of the church were beautifully decorated with palms and a choice assortment of flowers.

The bride was given in marriage by her uncle, A. P. Williams of Sprinkbrook. She was daintily dressed in long white satin, Princess style. She wore a white veil draped with orange blossom and carried a bouquet of sunset roses, lily-of-the-valley and baby's breath. She was attended by her sister, Miss Hazel Williams, who wore pink georgette, white lace hat with drooping brim and white shoes. She also carried a bouquet of yellow and pink roses and baby's breath.

George Munro of Peterborough, brother of the bridegroom, was best man. Wedding music was played by Mrs. W. H. Litt, and while the register was being signed, Jack Grant beautifully sang "At Dawning." The ushers were Garth Sabine and Magee Sanderson.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's uncle, A. P. Williams, at which about seventy relatives and friends were present.

Among those from a distance were Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Cookson, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Cookson, Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Cookson and daughter Mary, who came from Sandy Lake where they have been camping; Mr. and Mrs. N. Munro, Mr. C. Munro and Mr. Bert Munro, Peterborough; Mr. and Mrs. J. Pilley, Peterborough; Mr. and Mrs. Will Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Thompson, and Mr. Robert Thompson, Teeswater; Mrs. Willoughby Sharpe Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. John Herbertson, Foxboro; Mrs. E. Cookson, Miss Helen Rozel and Miss Mildred Peace.

The honeymoon is being spent in Montreal. The bride's travelling costume was a brown silk dress with shoes to match. She also wore a sand tweed coat and sand hat trimmed with brown ribbon.

The bridegroom's gift to the bride was a crystal necklace; to the bridesmaid, a dress ring; and to the best man, a miniature clock.

The happy couple were the recipients of many presents, serviceable and costly. The bride, who has spent several years in the teaching profession has for the past three and a half years enjoyed popularity as a member of the teaching staff of the Marmora Public School. She has also been a faithful teacher at the United Church Sunday School, and for the past year has presided at the organ of the church in which she was married. The best wishes for a long and happy wedding life are extended by her many friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Munro upon their return, will reside in Peterborough.

26 PHOTOGRAPHY PLANES

OTTAWA—Twenty-six airplanes, working in thirteen detachments, are now engaged throughout Canada in aerial photography and surveying for the Dominion Government. A CANADIAN NATIONAL BAND.

The experiment of the directors of the Toronto Exhibition in organizing a Canadian band of nearly eighty pieces for the featured daily concerts will attract the attention of all visiting music lovers this year.

Heretofore, foreign bands have held the spotlight and have invariably deserved it. They included the famous British Guards bands, and other notable organizations like Goldman's of New York, the Republican Guard band of France and the Cuban musicians of a few years ago. For this year's Exhibition a composite band from the Canadian garrisons at London, Kingston and Quebec has been rehearsing for some time under the direction of Capt. Chas. O'Neill of the 22nd Regiment of Quebec. This was a happy and ambitious thought in keeping with the all-Canada year, as the approaching "C.N.E." has been designated, and it is sincerely hoped that it will be as thoroughly successful as it deserves.

A national band with all the resources of instrumentation of eighty instruments evokes a lively appeal to our pride, and we only wish it might become a permanent institution. That probably is too much for us to expect, just as we shall not lock for all the qualities of musicianship which endeared the British Guards bands to us. But, it is a splendid effort for which the Toronto Exhibition directors are to be congratulated. Such an enterprise requires strong financial support, and when we had to stand helpless by while the splendid Huntsville band, which had been built up by Mr. Chas. Shaw of the Anglo-Canadian Leather Company, was being dispersed at the peak of its excellence, there was a widespread feeling of loss to the aesthetic life of the country. Possibly Toronto will kindle a new inspiration in the formation, however temporary it may be, of this first Canadian national band.

TROUBLES OF U. S. FARMER.

When the American Bar Association meets in Chicago next month, its committee on American citizenship will submit a report severely condemning the Federal Farm Relief Act, saying:

"In our judgment it is a dangerous assault upon the form, the ideals, and the purposes of our government.

"If one crew of mendicants can come to the doors of Congress and with a threat of votes loot the Treasury, other groups will follow the example."

"'Mendicants' is a harsh term to apply to those who feed us all," says the New York American.

"Farmers might strike back by asking what about those who, with a threat of withholding campaign contributions, get Congress to place in their hands a high-tariff blackjack with which to loot everybody, the farmer more than anybody else.

"The committee on American citizenship is not creating good citizens by calling the farmer a beggar. A combination of poverty and insult has more than once in the world's history put such 'beggars' on horseback. Once there, they rode until they re-won usurped rights and extended human liberty.

"Farmers form one of the most useful groups of citizens in America. They feed themselves and the remaining 70 per cent. who are consumers. Their industry is essential above every other, because without it none other could exist. They are worthy of respect and they are entitled to every legislative aid which can wisely and reasonably be given."

The effect of post-war deflation upon the farmers of the United States is recalled from an article in the Kiwanis Magazine late last year by Hon. Gray Silver, director of the United Growers of America.

At the close of the war the agricultural plant of the United States farmer was valued at eighty billions of dollars, at that time the greatest wealth ever distributed among one group of people. The indebtedness of the farmers was approximately four billions of dollars. Last fall this debt had swollen to fourteen billions of dollars.

"A staggering sum of money, fifty per cent. more than the Allies owed the United States at the close of the World War," Mr. Silver wrote. "That war debt, between nine and ten billions of dollars, was so great that both debtor and creditor nations agreed that those debtor nations could not pay it, although there were one hundred and fifty millions of people in those debtor nations. According to Secretary Mellon, that debt was reduced one-half that they might be enabled to pay. Can 27,500,000 people on American farms pay fourteen billions of dollars? Conditions that brought about that indebtedness, if continued, will not enable agriculture to liquidate that indebtedness."

To this staggering deflation has been added the twin tribulations of depreciated grain prices during the last two years, and the 1930 drought which has brought a loss of hundreds of millions of dollars to the farmers of at least thirteen States in the central west and as far south as Tennessee and Louisania.

These rural troubles in the United States may perhaps temper the opinion of the American Bar Association of farm relief during their forthcoming deliberations.

A NEW PROBLEM IN UNEMPLOYMENT.

Any canvass of the unemployed in Peterborough will disclose a comparatively large number of men who are idle because they are no longer young.

Most of them should have years of usefulness ahead of them, but they have been shelved out of jobs after long service because a new maximum age limit, born of America's immoderate worship of youth, has declared them inefficient.

These men are found not only in Peterborough but in all industrial centres, wherever the spirit of modern industrialism and its fetishism of speed and youth have marked them as its victims. Not so long ago, prior to the war at any rate, men of their age might no doubt have looked forward to a concluding period of valued service and remunerative employment for another ten, or possibly fifteen, years. To-day, the machine is displacing them, and even the younger operators, in many instances, obtain only intermittent work, as in the automobile industry, because the highly mechanized plant can turn out its products faster than they can be consumed.

And this is an experience not only of the present year of depression. It was observed with apprehension during the whirling prosperity of two years ago.

By way of contrast and parenthesis, the London Mirror a few weeks ago ran the picture of a veteran employee of a Birmingham factory, William Byfield, now 82 years old, who has been oiling and operating the same machine for 65 years. This machine was built and is said to have been worked by James Watt, the famous inventor.

This extreme, which is possibly not typical of British industry, is the antithesis of the modern idea in America.

In Peterborough, the City Council has found its unemployed men of middle age to be a new and rather difficult problem, those who did not anticipate an untimely dismissal, and failed to provide for an unseasonable autumn of rainy days.

They are not old enough to come within the pensionable age. They are not enfeebled, and yet they are not fit for road work and other rough construction employment because they have not been inured to it. They have spent too many years at their accustomed jobs.

Will any expedients of employment, that may be carried out under the Government's program of relief, apply to them? A canvass of labor conditions will discover them, but what help can be given them?

Mayor Denne and the members of the Council deserve the gratitude of the city's workingmen for the local improvement work that has been provided this summer. If the same solicitude and recognition of emergent needs had been displayed by those in authority throughout Canada the business depression might not have been so sharp and widespread.

It is likely that the Council's experience has furnished them with an accurate estimate of the number of unemployed here, but the Council should go further and prepare as complete a list as possibe, not ony for present reference, but as a permanent source of local information. It might be conveniently maintained by the same department which has charge of the city's charity.

Incidentally, the next Dominion census is to include the number of unemployed persons in Canada, but this will be only a decennial record if it is continued. It should be helpful to the Government in any consideration of unemployment insurance that has been mentioned as one of the social questions to be dealt with by the new administration.

In the meantime the problem of the middle-aged man who has been displaced by the speeding-up of industry does not present an easy solution. And yet it is a responsibility which society cannot ignore.

COMMUNISM IN CHINA.

If the excesses at Changsha and elsewhere continue, Communism may become an old man of the sea on the back of Chinese Nationalism. Though encouraged by economic prostration and administrative chaos over wide areas, Communism in China dates back to the association of the Nationalist movement with Moscow in 1926. The Nationalists then allowed themselves to be led by Soviet agents. They and their staff of officers and field workers made Chinese Nationalism a military force to be reckoned with. Their work done, Chiang Kai-shek cast them out and founded a Government at Nanking free from Muscovite and Communist influence.

Then came the relentless "purging" of Nationalism by bloody attacks upon the Communists. But the very act dispersed military bands over isolated sections of the south-east, where they roamed and ravaged at will. The purge also drove under ground hundreds of agitators who, made proficient at "boring from within" by the teachings of their Bolshevist mentors, helped the Nationalist cause in the manner of Cromwell's field preachers by rousing the civil population before the armies appeared. After their proscription by Nanking they continued to burrow in industrial areas.

In military terms, this fresh trouble is hurtful to Nanking in its operations against the North. But it is just as disagreeable to Peking to discover that Communism has put on the appearance of a military force contending for spheres of influence. Even if it contents itself with the creation of riot centres, it will deepen apprehension, for it would sterilize victory, no matter which side won. No surprise need be occasioned, therefore, by the alarm which the dispatches report to be manifest in the northern capital as well as in Nanking.

As spoliation advances along the Yangtse like a prairie fire, engulfing foreign property as well as Chinese, it must arouse both of the leading Chinese factions. Neither side is hospitable to Communism. Both Nanking and Peking stigmatize "Red Imperialism" as the new arch-enemy of China. They cannot uproot it by perpetually flying at each other's throats and allowing Communism to profit from their quarrels.—New York Times.

MUCH TOO EARLY TO JUDGE.

It is too early to make intelligent comment on the calibre or worth of the Bennett Cabinet. Many of the men holding Cabinet positions have had no similar experience before. They will have to go ahead and demonstrate what they can do.

To illustrate: W. D. Euler of North Waterloo went into the Cabinet from the ranks of private members in 1926, and was given the department of national revenue. There was a great deal of cleaning up to be done and Mr. Euler did it remarkably well. He demonstrated after he secured the post that he was the man to fill it.

That is the way the Bennett Cabinet Ministers will have to do. Entering a Cabinet may put the seal of the leader's approval on a man, but in reality it is only giving him an opportunity to demonstrate how much national worth there is in him.—Stratford Beacon-Herald.

In New Cabinet

Hon. Maurice Dupre, K.C., Solicitor-General in the new Bennett Cabinet. He was elected in the constituency of Quebec West.

The Office Hound

"I think your waterways are just swell!"

O—H

This was the comment made to The Office Hound by Captain Rex of the "Hesperus" who was tied up at the local wharf this morning. The "Hesperus" is a 99-foot garbage barge bound from Dan to Beersheba via the Great Lakes, the Panama Canal, and English's Creek. Her home port is Niagara Concord.

O—H

"You gotta real dump here," opined Captain Rex, expectorating into the oily water.

O—H

The combination of smells from a neighboring slaughter house and Captain Rex's barge was striking.

O—H

Captain Rex would like nothing better, he says, than to settle down somewhere in our beautiful mongst "A nice little shack down near the Sewage Disposal," he added.

O—H

But Captain Rex's work ties him to the garbage. His business in life is just a constant barging around from one dump to another.

O—H

In reply to a question, the Captain thought that perhaps potato peels were his favorite form of his commodity. "There is something so sympathetic about a potato peel," he declared," . . . something so appealing. It just sorta curls up on you."

O—H

But general slops are not to be despised, according to the Captain. "They have a liquid, melting quality all their own," he said.

O—H

The interior of the "Hesperus" is a delight to behold. Chintz curtains of a dainty mauve with empty beer bottles in preserving the homelike touch.

O—H

The bride's cake was of pink and white and had tortoise shell rims.

O—H

Everything is done for the comfort of the passenger. There is a washbowl in the corner and a roller-towel beside it. Captain Rex claims to be getting quite phenomenal mileage from his present towel. But if the hot weather continues, he says, he is going to buy a new towel in October.

O—H

Captain Rex expects to return this way about that time with a cargo of New Zealand butter.

TEMPLE TOWER

By CAPTAIN DRUMMOND

"A big yellow one, Peter," he said. "There's a woman in the driver's seat with a man beside her. And leaning over the gate talking to them is our Mr. Spragge himself unless I'm much mistaken. Now I wonder if they've got anything to do with it. Hullo! they are turning round, and going back towards Rye. Going like hell into the bargain. Come on, let's hit the Bentley. We might spot something."

"A Bentley," sighed Freckles. "Indeed and in truth the Lord is good. And incidentally, Drummond, if it's any good to you at any time, I'm used to driving the breed."

"Good," said Hugh. "It may come in handy."

We fell into the car, and he let her out. He drove, as he did everything else, magnificently, and in four minutes we struck the top of the hill leading down to Rye. Now as I say, Hugh had trodden on the juice, and yet, roaring up the hill towards us was a big yellow car driven by a woman with a man sitting beside her. And another in the back seat. I had a fleeting glimpse of a beautiful, rather scornful face bending over the wheel, and a man with a small pointed beard sitting beside her: then they had flashed past.

"They've turned off towards your house," I said.

"And towards Granger's," he answered, swinging into the entrance of a house to turn. "By George! they must have travelled."

"An Isotto straight twelve," remarked Freckles casually. "But you've got the legs of them in this. Oh! if Mother only knew what her baby boy was doing instead of sitting in Prodom and Peanut's office, the old girl would pass right out."

"Ylu are a reprehensible young devil," chuckled Hugh as we started up the hill again. "But the girl at the wheel, Peter, was undoubtedly a pippin of the first order."

And as from a great distance I heard the voices of two adorable ladies in the Hermitage at Le Touquet wondering how the dear lambs were enjoying their golf.

We swung past the entrance to Hugh's house, and then he slackened speed a little.

"No good looking as if we were racing them," he said. "And if they've got anything to do with it—By jove! Peter, they have."

Thecyellow car had stopped at the entrane to Granger's house. The occupants were still sitting in it, and were apparently studying the place. But as we passed they all three stared at us.

"Don't look round," said Hugh quietly. "Though I'm afraid we've committed a tactical bloomer. Do you think they spotted us as the car they met on the hill?"

"The chauffeur bl... at the back did," said Freckles.

"Damn!" said Hugh. "However it is done now. We'll go back to Rye by another route. Now I wonder where that bunch come into the picture. In fact, I wonder the hell of a lot of things."

CHAPTER 111

In Which We Come to Spragge's Farm by Night.

The Dolphin Inn at Rye is almost too well known to need description. It stands halfway up a steep cobbled hill in the centre of the town, and to its hospitable doors come all sorts and conditions of men. Tourists, artists, golfers—all may be found there—discussing everything from the history of the Cinque Ports to the Futt that Failed on the Last Green. Of old, when the sea lapped round the foothills of Rye, and in later years too, it was a well-known haunt of smugglers, as Hugh had said. Many a cask of old brandy: many a roll of silk had come in through the front door, which the most drastic search by preventive men had failed to reveal. There were stories told of secret passages, and sliding panels by means of which the Excise men were outwitted; but in the present year of grace the only sliding panel in evidence is the one through which the barman hands out the necessary.

It was half-past six when we entered the lounge hall, having left the car at the bottom of the hill. Two old ladies were sitting in one corner immersed in guide books, whilst another was occupied by an elderly clergyman. There was planty of room for us, but Hugh went straight through to a small room which led off the main hall.

"The only untouched part of the hotel," he remarked. "This room is as it was when the place was built."

Nearly the whole of one end of it was occupied by a huge fireplace, in which as the guide book put it, "it was the custom on special occasions to roast an ox whole" The special occasions presumably were when a particularly good haul of contraband had successfully eluded the coastguard men. On each side of the fireplace the wall consisted of a sort of scroll-work, long since blackened by the smoke. The shelves were filled with pewter—some valuable, but for the most part modern stuff. And perhaps the most interesting thing in the room was an old map worked in embroidery, showing the country in 1723. Even as late as that the sea was very nearly up to the outskirts of Rye, and almost the whole of Romney Marsh was covered with water.

"Looks a bit different, doesn't it?" said Hugh, studying it idly. "Where we dotted old man Spragge one this afternoon was a bally lake. There's where his farm is, Scott," he went on. "And that is our destination to-night. By jove!" he added with sudden interest, "that must be Granger's house. I'd no idea it was so old. A convent: that accounts for the wall around it."

"Naughty girls—the nuns," said Freckles. "Do you know the story?"

But he never heard this bright particular gem, because at that moment two men came in, one of whom hailed Hugh with a shout of joy. He wore a Guards tie and his face seemed vaguely familiar to me.

"You old blighter," he cried. "Fancy meeting you here."

"Hullo! John James," said Hugh. "How's yourself? You know Darrell, don't you?"

"I met you once in the pavilion at Lord's," cried the newcomer, and then I placed him. He was whiskey or beer or something, and rolled in money. Sir John Jameson, Bart., was his name, and he had recently come into the title. Moreover he had a big place somewhere in Kent.

"This is Scott," went on Hugh. "Sir John Jameson."

"This undoubtedly calls for a drop of the old and bold," said John James. "By the way, this is Piggy Heythrop, who suffers from the delusion that he can beat me at golf. Waiter—five martinis. Well, old lad—what are you doing down here?"

"I've rented a house for the summer called Bay Trees, Principally because there isn't one."

"The devil you have," cried the other. "Why, man, that house used to belong to my governor. And the one next door as well. Look here, Hugh, we've got back to Laidley Towers: and you and your lady wife must come over and stop."

"Hold hard a moment, John," said Hugh. "You say the next-door house used to belong to you. Which one do you mean?"

"Temple Tower. Used to be a convent. The old man sold 'em both about twenty years ago. Personally I was rather sorry about Temple Tower. It's got a very interesting history. I wonder who has it now."

"A very eccentric individual," said Hugh. "By name of Granger. He's barricaded the place like a prison: put two-foot spikes round the top of the wall, and bars on every window. He's got a menagerie in the garden, and any caller is examined through a hole in the gate before he is let in. It would take a cross between a monkey and a mongoose all his time to get in, let alone a human being."

John James stared at him thoughtfully.

"What an extraordinary bloke," he remarked. "Doesn't sound as if he was all there. Still I bet I'd penetrate the fastness: once, that is, I'd negotiated the wall."

"What do you mean?" said Hugh sitting up with a jerk.

"I told you the place had belonged to us," said the other. "Well—it used to be a convent."

"I know that," said Hugh. "Just seen it marked on the map."

"And the nuns, bless 'em, though forbidder to receive male visitors through the front door got away with the goods through the back. There's an underground passage leading from an old crypt in the garden which runs into one of the cellars."

"Are you certain?" cried Hugh.

"Of course I am, old boy. Mr. Monk, having said his little piece in the crypt, toddled along the passage to pay his respects to the lady of his choice in the house. Why, we've got an old plan of it hanging up in the hall at Laidley Towers."

"Have you ever been along this passage, John?" demanded Hugh.

"Can't say I have," admitted the other. "As a matter of fact, it's not quite as plain sailing as it sounds. You see . . ."

"How much did you beat him by?" said Hugh suddenly. "We must have a game one day, John."

"What's that?" stammered the bewildered baronet. "I—er . . ."

"How are the links playing, John? Must be a bit dry, I suppose."

And it was then I became aware that someone else had entered the room. It was the bearded man who had been sitting by the girl in the car. Hugh went on calmly talking golf: John James, though still looking slightly dazed, followed his lead, until Heythrop, happening to look at his watch, gave a startled exclamation.

"Good Lord! John—it's nearly half-past seven."

"The devil it is," cried the other. "We must go, Hugh. Got the most ghastly collection of county bores dining. Look here—I'll come over and see you tomorrow sometime."

"Splendid," said Hugh. "We might have a four ball."

BLUEBERRY SHIPMENTSEARLY.

YARMOUTH, N.S.—Blueberry shipments from the Annapolis Valley to the Boston market are ten days ahead of last year and the outlook for the season is excellent.

What To-day Means To You.

If August 18th is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 6 a.m. to 7:45 a.m., from 11 a.m. to noon, and 5 p.m. to 6 p.m. The danger periods are from 9 a.m. to 10 a.m. and 7 p.m. to 8:30 p.m.

Relaxing influences will be in force on this date, which will not be propitious for business. Artists and musicians, on the other hand, will be in their element. An inclination and a responsiveness toward social activities and pleasures—feasts of fun.

The children born on this August 18th will have uncontrollable tempers, and brooding natures. They will have vehement desires, and will be pleasing and sweet, when having their own way. Will have executive capacities.

You have rather an envious and a jealous disposition, and no matter what your status in life may be, to you, your neighbors will always be better. "Envy is like the rust of iron, it wears away the envious." Your pride is a false pride, for if it were of the right kind, it would sustain you, and make you rejoice over the real gifts which the gods laid at your feet and not belittle them. You need to cultivate your individuality — individuality of taste is far more important than money to spend—that is why a gypsy is often better dressed than a duchess. You worry too much over other people's opinions. You have plenty of originality, if you only dared express it. Your own taste is far superior to that of many of those whom you wish to ape.

You are very ambitious, and you will place yourself above the ordinary in both your material and social position, if it is possible to do so. You will never bother with the so-called "nobodies" as friends. They must be able to give you something equal or better than that which you already have in education, experience, culture or position. It cannot be denied that you have a grasping nature. You are diplomatically, more than spontaneously, charming at times. You can put yourself out for people, if it pays you to do so. You are a brisk worker, a lively talker and modern in your views. You are fond of the good things of life, and you seek amusement.

A Thought

A NATION.

I believe there is no permanent greatness to a nation except it be based upon morality. I do not care for military greatness or military renown. I care for the constitution of the people among whom I live. There is no man in England who is less likely to speak irreverently of the Crown and Monarchy of England than I am; but crowns, coronets, mitres, military display, the pomp of war, wide colonies, and a huge Empire are trifles light as air and not worth considering, unless with them you can have a fair share of comfort, contentment, and happiness among the great body of the people. Palaces, princely castles, great halls, and showy mansions do not make a nation. The nation in every country dwells in the cottage, and unless the light of your constitution can shine there, unless the beauty of your legislation and the excellence of your statesmanship are printed in the feelings and condition of the people, rely upon it you have yet to learn the duties of government.—John Bright.

FINANCIAL and MINING REVIEWS

TORONTO LIST IS IRREGULAR

Weakness of Wall Street in Opening Session Reflects Queen City Trading.

TRACTION EASIER.

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 18.— (CP) —The week opened quietly on the Toronto Stock Exchange with the forenoon session irregular and volume light. Wall Street was weak at the opening and this checked progress on the local market although the tone was better than that of the closing days of the previous week.

C. P. R. carried it's recovery to 175 for a net gain of 2 on the day and a net recovery of almost ten points for the extreme low for the year was touched last week.

Brazilian Traction was easier, slipping off ½ to 34¼. Weakness in the exchange value of the milreis is proving a handicap to this issue and will probably be reflected in the earning statement for the month of July which will be made public within the next few days.

International Nickel was off fractionally to 20¼, equalling the low for the year. A large block of stock turned over at a slight reduction at the opening of Wall Street to-day.

Massey-Harris firmed ½ to 25, Ford ¼ to 30¾, Abitibi 1 to 24, and Standard Paving 11 to 20.

The leading oils were irregular with Imperial off ¼ and British American and International Petroleum up 1½ each.

ITALIAN QUAKE TOLL ONLY 1,375

Statement Issued Claims Many Reported Dead Were Found in the Hills.

DENY TRUTH HIDDEN.

ROME, Italy, August 18 (C.P.).—An order sheet of the Fascist Party said to-day that the total deaths in the earthquake of July 23 numbered only 1,375, in contrast to the previous official total of 2,142.

The statement said that the reason for the reduction was that many persons had been found alive since the roll call in the stricken towns, because they had fled to the hills or to relatives in other villages.

It also said that a complete list of the dead with names and places of residence soon would be issued, and condemned reports published abroad at the time of the quake that the deaths ranged from 5,000 to 15,000, with millions homeless. It denied that the Government had hidden the truth for purposes of promoting tourist business.

BLAST ON SHIP FATAL TO FIVE

Four Visitors and Sailor Perish in Engine Room of Tanker.

CARGO OF GASOLINE.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Aug. 19. — (C.P.)—The known death toll in an explosion aboard the Atlantic Refining Company's tanker Brilliant reached five to-day with the death of Joseph B. W. Jeffords, one of the visitors inspecting the engine room at the time of the blast.

One unidentified visitor was missing and believed burned in the tanker with its cargo of 378 000 gallons of gasoline. The five dead include one member of the crew and four visitors.

YACHT FOUNDERS 2 SWIM ASHORE

Squall Drives Cruiser Four Miles Into Lake From Grimsby.

SPEND NIGHT BAILING.

GRIMSBY, Ont., Aug. 18 (C.P.)—Adrift in Lake Ontario in a rapidly foundering cabin cruiser, Joseph Cox, Niagara Falls, N.Y., and Clarence Smith of the Dominion Body Company, Hamilton, Ont., were forced to swim half a mile to shore at 4.30 this morning.

The men had spent the night in taking turns bailing out the vessel and in signalling towards shore with a flashlight, but no help arrived.

After a sleep and change of clothes the men were reported none the worse for their experience. They were cast adrift in the boat last night when a sudden squall on the lake drove it four miles out into the lake from the wharf at which is was anchored. The squall was also responsible for leaks springing in the craft.

FLIERS SET NEW RECORD.

ST. LOUIS ,Mo. August 18.—Dale Jackson and Forest O'Brine endurance fliers landed at 6.30 yesterday morning after being in the air for 647 hours 21 minutes and 30 seconds—a new world's endurance record.

GOLD SECTION IS UNCHANGED

Trading Carried on at Slow Pace on Standard Exchange This Morning.

NORANDA EASIER.

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 18 (C.P.)—Trading was carried on at a very slow pace on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange to-day, during the early session. Volume was the poorest for some time.

International Nickel and Noranda were easier, both selling off 2, the former to $20.25. Hudson Bay was up 5, at $7.50. Lindsley's irregular, Sherritt Gordon was up 6 at 1.35, Sudbury Basin was off 5, at the same price, Ventures showed no change at 90.

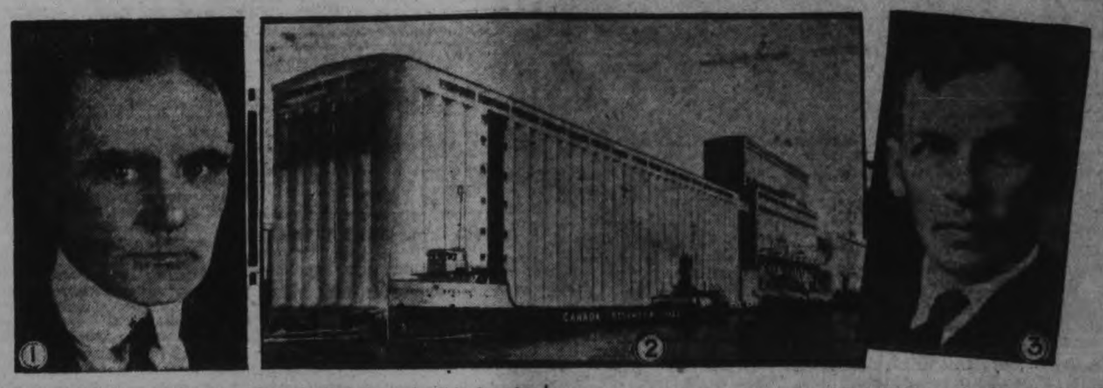
Wheat Pool Officials May Be Forced To Raise Own Marketing Funds



Although no definie report has as yet been received from the three-cornered parley at Ottawa, comprising the wheat pool officials, government and bankers, it is rumored that the result may be that the pool will be forced to raise its own funds for marketing. Marketing circles in the west anticipate a generous gesture on part of the banks. Some reports concerning decisions of conference have been conflicting. The photographs above show: (1) A. J. McPhail, president of the Canadian Wheat Pool. (2) the Canadian Wheat Pool elevator at Fort William, the largest in the world, with a capacity of 7,000,000 bushels, and (3) E. B. FINANCIAL NEWS AND BRIEFS

A SPECIAL SERVICE TO THE EXAMINER

Current advertising of the Ford Motor Company of Canada carries a brief resume of the company's history that should prove interesting to the large number of stockholders in the Dominion. The company was organized 15 years ago and the business started in a small frame building with the entire first year's production 117 cars. To-day the fine modern plant covers many acres of ground and the average payroll is in excess of $11,000,000 a year. The first force of 17 men has grown to a peak of 7,500, and the Ford Company is one of the leading industrial organizations of the Dominion. The advertisement states that Canada may well be proud of the Ford, for it is practically all made in Canada, or Canadian materials, and by Canadian workers, while nothing is said of the financial history, it is as impressive as the production end. Ford's financial record is replete with large cash and stock bonuses, splitups, and liberal dividend treatment for the shareholders.

Consider Borden Offer.

Shareholders of the City Dairy Company, Limited, will hold a special general meeting to-morrow to consider the offer of the Borden Company. Borden proposes to purchase the local company by payment of $135 cash for each preferred stock outstanding and by exchanging even of three shares for eight City Dairy common. City Dairy is one of the few Canadian companies that is controlled by the preferred issue, and this had made necessary the holding of Tuesday's meeting under a court order. The original capital consisted of preferred shares of $100 par and common stock of $100 par. Both the preferred and common stock carried voting rights and when the ordinary shares were split four for one on two separate occasions, the voting right of each preferred share was increased to 16. As the preferred is non-callable, it is necessary to have a majority of the holders agree to accept $135 cash and then apply for a court order calling the issue at this figure. It will be recalled that this was the procedure adopted in retiring the preferred issue of shareholders that they accept the Borden proposal in an official letter to the stockholders, giving complete details of the proposed deal. President and chairman of the board, S. J. Moore, states one reason for the favorable consideration by the board is that sooner or later the company must either lead in the formation of a new dairy chain, or become identified with an existing one.

Massey-Harris Report

Stand Statistics Co. of New York, in a current analysis of the Massey-Harris Co. Ltd., describe the company as the principal agricultural machine manufacturer in the British empire, having a well developed sales organization throughout the world, producing virtually every type of farm machinery, having plants, in addition to those in Great Britain, in the United States, Canada, Germany, France and South Africa. In an attempt to advance sales this year, Massey Harris had scheduled fifty percent increase in tractor production, although demand that followed with the agricultural difficulties of the second quarter fell short of anticipations. Export business making a good start, was later unfavorably affected by down-trend in quality of crops abroad, unfavorable trade balances, depreciated currencies, etc. Standard statistics believes that much in 1930 incoming showing depends on Canadian crop which lately has been showing signs of deterioration.

Wall Street turned soft in the first hour to-day and the local market was almost at a standstill with volume light and price movements irregular. Week-end accumulation of both buying and selling orders was comparatively light and cleaned up in the first half hour of trading. From then on the list on the Toronto board drifted aimlessly without leadership and no definite trend in either direction.

The news carried very little that would encourage speculative commitments with only the usual amount of investment buying and selling from sources that has become tired of waiting for an upturn.

Daily trading continues to show a preponderance of odd lots, or sales of five, ten and fifteen shares, and this indicates most people are trading for cash, taking a few shares and paying outright instead of purchasing large cimmitments on margin.

RUMANIAN CROWN FACING TROUBLE

Rumor King Carol Planning Morganatic Marriage With Old Sweetheart.

DISAGREES WITH HELEN.

VIENNA, Austria, Aug. 18 (C.P.)—Roumanians in Vienna said to-day that it was rumored in case King Carol fails at reconciliation with his wife, Queen Helen, he is planning a morganatic marriage with Mme. Lupescu, red haired woman for whom he once renounced his throne.

Their information was based upon the statement of a foreign diplomat who recently passed through Vienna from Bucharest, who said that he shared the convictions of the King's entourage that the breach between Carol and Helen was widening.

TORONTO CLUB IS LEADING

play three matches during the week, meeting each other entrant. The matches will run 21 ends.

Will Meet Hamilton

This afternoon the rinks start play. England will meet Harry J. Allen's Hamilton Victorias, newly crowned Canadian champions, and Scotland will play New Zealand. In the singles, Reid of Canada will meet the South African entry.

Just as the Mother Country had won the opening events Saturday in track and field, so did she mark up the first triumph in lawn bowling. Robert Colquhoun, grey-thatched Briton, led South Africa's entrant, J. C. Thoms, almost from the start of their singles event to finally win at the 15th end. The score was 22 to 12. Colquhoun's deadly draws put him in front at the second end where he scored a three. Thoms had counted one at the first. The Englishman added a two, then a pair of threes to his total and at the sixth end was leading by 11 shots. The South African started to lay his shots dead on the cat to the seventh, where he scored three. He got two at the eighth and another three at the ninth.

There his rally was halted and Colquohoun went on to score the necessary shots, bringing his total to 21, which in the singles is game. He scored two at the fourteenth and another pair at the final end, laying two beautiful draws to within three inches of the little white ball; he needed but one to bring him the win.

England Downs New Zealand.

England's doubles team finished strong to beat out New Zealand by 20 to 13 in the last three ends. The Britons overcame an early four shot deficit and held the trundlers from down under even until the 17th. Then they scored three to go into the lead and added one at the 19th. Skip Fielding of New Zealand "killed" the 20th end as the British team threatened to score another three, but Wright came back with a two at the other end to bring victory.

South Africa, playing in two of the three opening matches, failed to gather a single point and New Zealand's doubles duo fell before the clever draw shots of the English pair, skipped by George Wright. Each win in the Empire bowling five day tournament will count two points, a draw will count each team one point.

An enthusiastic crowd of about three hundred saw England score the first win of the trundling classes. Robert Colquohoun, veteran singles champion of England, easily forged ahead of J. C. Thoms of South Africa to win by 22 to 12 at the 15th end. The Briton lost the first end by a single shot. Thereafter he counted up a string of twos and three's that gave him a comfortable lead by the 11th and finished with a pretty two at the 15th.

Dosens of enquiries have been received by mail and lists of available cottages supplied. A letter received to-day by the Chamber contains an appreciation of the facilities offered. PERRI FUNERAL MARRED BY PANIC AND FIST FIGHTS

Mourners Hardly Able to Shove Way Through Immense Throngs.

GRAVES ARE OVERRUN.

Rocco Perri Collapses at Grave —Escort Strikes Thrill Seeker.

HAMILTON, Ont., Aug. 18.—(CP) —One of the largest funeral processions ever to wend its way through the streets of Hamilton yesterday followed the body of Mrs. Bessie Perri to the Jewish cemetery, Ohev Zedeck. Here mourners had to almost fight their way through the various crowds to get to the grave where the wife of Rocco Perri, alleged kingpin of local bootleggers, slain by gangster guns last Wednesday night, was buried amidst a profusion of costly floral tributes.

15,000 Assemble

It was estimated more than 15,000 persons assembled outside the Perri home prior to the start of the funeral cortege to the little cemetery on the mountain.

So great was the jam at the cemetery officials were forced to appeal for some measure of respect for the dead as people trod over graves, crushed flowers and bushes, adorning the graves near Mrs. Perri's.

Rocco himself collapsed at the graveside and Mrs. Perri's two daughters Mrs. L. Maidenberg and Mrs. L. Shimes, children of her legal husband fainted and panic threatened to seize the crowd. Some blows were struck when burly escorts of Perri forced an opening for him and his daughters to make their way through the throng.

DR. L. DE FOREST ISSUES WARNING

GROWS STEADILY WORSE.

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 18.—(C.P.)— Use of the radio for "direct and blatant advertising" was condemned by Dr. Lee De Forest, eminent radio authority, in delivering the presidential address to the delegates attending the annual convention of the Institute of Radio Engineers which began here to-day.

"In my inaugural address last January I sought to point out a real danger to the fullest usefulness and enjoyment radio has to confer, a menace steadily growing greater, more ruthless, more deserving of suspicion and more generally detested—the use of the broadcast for direct and blatant advertising, in larger and longer doses, subsequent observation and active enquiry has convinced me the warning then sounded to the radio industry was not without fear," said Dr. De Forest.

"Unless this evil is voluntarily reduced we are headed straight for Government regulation, with taxation, possibly censorship and all the evils and benefits of Government control," he prophesied.

MAJOR FRED RICHARDSON WINS GOVERNOR-GENERAL'S TROPHY

British Columbia Marksman Oldest Entrant in D.C.R.A. Competition.

WILL NOT REVEAL AGE.

CONNAUGHT RANGES, Ottawa, August 18. (C.P.) — On most occasions youth must be served, but there are exceptions, and Saturday, one of the exceptions came to light, for Major Fred Richardson, Victoria, B. C., oldest marksman of the Dominion of Canada Rifle Association Ranges, won the blue ribbon of Canadian marksmanship, the much coveted Governor-General's prize.

Major Richardson was reluctant to reveal his real age when interviewed by the Canadian Press as he rose from the firing point after a most strenuous day of shooting. "You'll have to ask my wife," he said, "for she claims I'm somewhere between 60 and 70. Anyway I was shooting in 1880, so figure it out for yourself," and there it is.

Treading on the heels of the shooting Victorain was another westerner, Sergt.-Major S. J. Reid of Esquimalt, B.C., who scored 344.

In third place was the first Easterner, Captain J. Houlden of Sherbrooke, with 243.

Lindsay Water Supply Unfit For Consumption

LINDSAY, Aug. 18. (Special to The Examiner).—The question of Lindsay's future water supply for domestic purposes has become quite acute as the result of the reports received from the Provincial laboratories as to the condition of the water pumped from the Scugog river. Saturday morning Dr. Blanchard, M.O.H., received a further report from Toronto in which water supplied for domestic purposes was graded as "D" or "unsatisfactory." This means that the Scugog water is not fit for human consumption unless it is boiled.

Not a few of the citizens express the opinion that the river water is not fit to drink at any time. The river has its source at Scugog Lake, which is rapidly filling in with weeds. The river as it wends its way from the lake runs through low land. The weeds are very thick on both sides and are rapidly filling in the channel. In view of these conditions it is felt by some that the town will have to consider the question of securing water for domestic purposes from artesian wells. Others hold to the opinion that the weedy condition of the river is not injurious to the water, as weeds help to filter it.

However, the Water Commissioners have been overhauling the filters at the pump house and have been using chlorine more generously in an effort to improve the water.

AMOYETTE FACES CRIMINAL CHARGE

GIRL IS INJURED.

Held responsible for the serious motor accident at the corner of Hunter and Aylmer streets, on Saturday night, in which Miss Aileen Milloy, 524 Parnell street, received injuries, Moses Amoyette, 283½ George street, faced a charge of criminal negligence in police court this morning. He pleaded not guilty and was remanded until Thursday, bail being fixed at two sureties of $1000 each.

Police allege that Amoyette was driving at a high rate of speed and that his car skidded 84 feet when the brakes were applied.

Miss Milloy was driving east on Hunter street, accompanied by her brother-in-law, S. S. Shaughnessy, and Amoyette was proceeding north on Aylmer street. The smash-up occurred at the intersection, and the Milloy car was overturned by the force of the impact.

The woman suffered severe head injuries and two badly cut fingers. An X-ray at the hospital this morning failed to show any internal injuries, but it is feared that she may lose part of a finger.

FARMERS WAIT POOL'S DECISION

Statement This Week Will Indicate Size of Cheque For Season's Work.

70 CENT PRICE TEMPORARY.

WINNIPEG, Man., Aug. 18. (C.P.) More than half the farmers on Canada's prairies are waiting for word to indicate the size of their paycheck for this season's work. Some day this week, it is expected, a statement from Canada Wheat Pool headquarters at Winnipeg will name the initial payment, definitely, on grain delivered by pool farmers who number almost 150,000 in the west.

While no remarks on the conference of last week have been made to pool headquarters, it is accepted that the matter of the size of the 1930-crop initial payment was under discussion between the pool and the lending banks. For wheat delivered since the "cut-off date," July 15, pool payments are 70 cents per bushel, basis number one northern, Fort William. This figure has been set, however, only until final decision on the matter is made.

Mrs. Brown, Executive

Mrs. Brown, housekeeper of scarcely more than a generation ago, was a skilled laborer. The Mrs. Brown of to-day is an executive.

She has turned over much of her work to mechanical appliances. Much of her cooking has been placed in the hands of manufacturers of foods. Most of her sewing is done for her by the makers of clothing and household furnishings. Freed from drudgery by modern inventions, she has become a manager.

The advertisements in her daily newspaper have enabled her to be a better director of the affairs of her home than any woman of any past generation. She is primarily an intelligent buyer. She spends 85% of the family income. The care with which she reads the advertisements and the wisdom with which she acts on them determine the health, happiness and prosperity of her household.

She studies every new and every accepted product that might benefit her in her business of home management. She compares values. She is an expert in getting one hundred cents' worth of comfort, protection and satisfaction for every dollar she spends. She reads the advertisements every day. On them Mrs. Brown's efficiency depends.

ICE ENGINEER TO TRY AGAIN

Dr. H. Barnes to Experiment With Newly Devised Iceberg Detector.

OFF NEWFOUNDLAND

HALIFAX, N.S., Aug. 18.—Icebergs during fogs and at night time, one of the greatest menaces to ocean travel over the St. Lawrence route to Europe, may be successfully combated this summer if the work of Dr. Howard T. Barnes, ice-engineer expert, comes to a successful conclusion.

Dr. Barnes will leave Montreal on his tenth iceberg expedition about the middle of July. This expedition will be sponsored by the Shipping Federation of Canada and will have as its centre of operations Notre Dame Bay on the coast of Newfoundland. The base of operations will be Lewisporte, Newfoundland.

The main object of the expeditions will be to try out the Barnes-Van Horne Iceberg detector for which the idea was discovered during Dr. Barnes' ninth iceberg expedition last summer, sponsored by R. B. Van Horne.

Icebergs, Dr. Barnes claims, have a voice of their own, and it was accidentally discovered during the experiments last summer, that this voice could be heard through the water.

The discovery was made when some one "listened in" on a crudely made detector of rubber pipe with a funnel on the end, the latter under the water.

Improvements and refinements have been made on the apparatus now called the Barnes-Van Horne iceberg detector, and it is expected that icebergs will be discovered when approaching within a six-mile radius of the experimental ship.

The location of the iceberg is determined through using two or more detectors in the hull of the ship. A ship carrying such detectors, determines the location of an iceberg, and travels on in safety from the bergs, even during dense fogs.

ROSENEATH HOME IS DESTROYED BY FIRE

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Crowe Make Escape From Blazing House—Cause Unknown.

ROSENEATH, Aug. 18. (Examiner Correspondent)—Wakened from sleep yesterday afternoon by passers-by, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Crowe of Alderville were enabled to make an escape from their blazing house. The fire which had broken out in the roof from some cause unknown speedily consumed the frame dwelling, which is owned by Mrs. John Beaver. The occupants, assisted by neighbours, just had time to remove the contents of the lower floor. All bedroom furniture was destroyed and the cat and dog also perished in the fierce flames.

Mr. and Mrs. Crowe are living in the Pastoral Chambers until they are able to secure other accommodation.

PILES GO QUICK

Piles are caused by bad circulation of the blood in the lower bowel and a weakening of the parts. Only an internal medicine can remove the cause. That's why external remedies and cutting fail. Dr. Leonhardt's HEM-ROID succeeds, because it relieves this congestion and strengthens the affected parts. Dr. Leonhardt's prescription has such a wonderful record for quick, safe and lasting relief even in chronic and stubborn cases, that McDermid & Jury and Bond's Drug Store say try HEM-ROID at our expense. Your Pile suffering must end or money back.

INSTITUTE STAGES HOUSE DRESS PARADE

Members of Fenella Society Meet at the Home of Mrs. Phineas.

FENELLA, Aug. 18 (Examiner Correspondence)—A house dress parade, by the members of the Fenella Women's Institute at their August meeting on Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Phineas was the chief feature of the program.

The judges, Misses Nellie Montgomery, Iva Rogers and Jessie Waldie had a difficult task to select a first and second prize dress among the many paraded for view. Finally prizes were awarded to Miss Mildred Lean as first and Mrs. Frank George as second. The prizes were donated by Mrs. Frank George.

A paper contentment in the home was given by Mrs. S. Leack, pointing out that for the housewife to be contented she must acquire repose in action, also that happiness comes from within, for 'as a man thinketh so is he,' that many of the blessings that surround us cannot be bought with money, concluding with the thought that we are placed here for a purpose so every one must do his very best.

During the business period it was decided to meet the trustees of the town hall in regard to making needed repairs on the same.

Several interesting letters from former Institute members who were unable to respond to the invitations to the silver anniversary celebration were read.

The hostess served afternoon tea at the close and the usual social hour was enjoyed. The September meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. W. Rogers when there will be an exhibit of old time handiwork and a chorus by the grandmothers.

ADDED TAN AND LESS APPAREL AIM OF MODERN SPORT WEAR

Sun Gets at People More and Hurts Them Less Calculator Finds.

LAUDS HATLESS CULT.

(Special to Examiner, Copyright, 1930)

TORONTO, Aug. .—Pagan sun worshippers who did their stuff when Alexander the Great was knocking Persia's big leaguer, King Darius, for a home run, had nothing on the modern youth of Canada. If you don't believe it just try to buy a bathing suit to cover more than 35 per cent of your hide acreage. Or better still, browse around the beaches and golf clubs and see what the young folks and folks who stay young are wearing.

You will find more body exposed than ever before, more smiling health, more sunburn and more tan. You will find bathing suits built to satisfy both laws of the city and laws of health and having a good time under such catchy titles as "sun tan," "speed cut," "racy rig" and "whoopee whirl"—whatever that is.

If you like statistics you can find that the modern man's swimming outfit weighs less than half what the one worn by his 1925 brother weighed, and that backless frocks are proving hot stuff among the frauliens, even those who dance.

The racy bathing suits are outselling their more conservative boy friends by two to one and the idea seems to be that the more material goes into the suits, the less it costs. As for the ladies, they long ago discarded two-piece outfits and having weathered the original criticism, are proceeding to shorten their suits year by year.

Fewer Prostrations.

What is the result? Just this. Although this has been one of the hottest summers since the war, there has been fewer heat prostrations, fewer cases of sunstroke and practically no deaths due to heat, except of people already beyond the three-score and ten mark.

Many present day babes wear nothing but sun suits and run around in the heat of the day defying old sol to burn them up. He makes a colorful try, but fails miserably.

There has not been a case of sunstroke this summer, involving a child under seven, serious enough to involve hospital treatment.

More people are hatless on the streets to-day, than at any time before. Just watch them as they pass. Not lads trying to act collegiate, but citizens who have heard the news that no germ can live ten minutes in sunlight—not one.

The sun cure craze started in Europe and has gone so far over there, that hundreds of clubs have started where the members bathe their entire body in violet rays straight from the sun itself. Canada is coming more gradually to acceptance of a similar idea and if style designers have their way, the new frocks will cover less and less.

Open Closed Cars.

Closed motor cars are being built with roofs that open the same as windows, glass which permits free entry of violet rays, is being put in houses, schools, cars, shops and office.

In the play off for the Canadian golf title at Hamilton, hundreds of women followed Diegal and Armour without parasols or hats and with no backs and no sleeves in their frocks. No one fainted. Most of them walked the entire 4½ miles. Ten years ago women wouldn't have followed at all. Five years ago they might have gone nine holes in the shade of a parasol.

Getting back to statistics, sun worshippers are pointing out that the month with the most sun has the least deaths and the one with the least has the most deaths. This, however, is not strictly accurate. Health records show more people die in March than any other month and fewer people die in August than any other month. There are dozens more deaths every March day, than every August day, yet each month has 31 days. Sun does it, according to sun worshippers. Doctors give sun half the credit. The other half goes to outdoor exercise made possible by sunlight.

Sun Wrecks Germs.

"Is it really true that no germ can live ten minutes in sunlight?" a doctor was asked. "Yes, quite true."

"Well, if a germ of cancer, say, was put in sunlight would it shrivel up and perish?" "If there is such a thing as a cancer germ, it would. But we are not sure there is a germ."

"But in any case this business of going hatless, coatless, sockless and sleeveless is good for the well-known vim, vigor and vitality?" "The very best."

Armed with this medical endorsement and the knowledge that milady really likes these peek-a-boo dresses, designers are doping out all sorts of weird ideas for next summer. The general idea is like those paper things you tear when they are folded up and get surprising results when they are straightened out again. It would be just too bad if one of those frocks were put on backwards.

But in the meantime an education awaits you on the beach. For already we have bathing suits which cover a minimum and cause no objection, golfing togs that can be tucked into a handbag and bare legged tennis. And if you think it is still necessary for men to wear coats while dining in public, visit any golf or tennis club and see for yourself.

RETALIATION ON BORDER OF MAINE

Enforcement of U. S. Immigration Laws Starts War Near Vanceboro.

AMERICANS ONE UP

VANCEBORO, Me., Aug. 18.—Barrages of complaints that the border laws are being violated have been hurled back and forth around this vicinity lately with the result that the workers who have been crossing the line for their employment, do not know just where they stand, or when another exchange of ultimatums may force them to seek new employment.

The trouble started over road construction in New Brunswick, the gravel for which has been hauled from here. Several Canadians were working on this side of the line in the pits until complaints were made to the Immigration authorities, who had no alternative except to send the Canadians back.

Complaints were then made in Canada that Americans were working in the woods there, peeling pulp-wood, guiding and unloading pulp-wood on the trestle of the Eastern Pulp Wood Company. The Canadian immigration officers retaliated and chased the Americans back to their own yard.

The next move was in form of a word to the Canadian customs that trucks working on the construction job were buying gasolene in the United States. That brought about the desired result and now all gas bought in this country must pay a duty of one per cent imperial gallon.

As several of the Canadian trucks are running on this side of the border without the proper Maine registration plates, it is understood that the next move is to have these drivers arrested for improper registration of their vehicles.

What form the Canadian reprisal is to take is yet to be ascertained.

HOW ONE WOMAN LOST 47 POUNDS OF FAT

"I have been taking Kruschen Salts for nearly 3 months. I have continued taking one teaspoonful in warm water every morning. I then weighed 217 pounds, was always bothered with pains in my back and lower part of abdomen and sides.

"Now I am glad to say I am a well woman, feel much stronger, years younger, and my weight is 170 pounds. I do not only feel better, but I look better, so all my friends say.

"I shall never be without Kruschen Salts, will never cease taking my daily dose, and more than glad to highly recommend it for the great good that is in it."—Mrs. S. A. Solomon.

"P.S.—You may think I am exaggerating by writing such a long letter, but truly I feel so indebted to you for putting out such a wonderful salts that I cannot say enough."

ATHLETICS OF MOTHERLAND

Dominion-wide Hook Up

There were messages of greeting and goodwill read to the gathered throngs and broadcast over a Dominion-wide radio network from His Majesty the King, and the Prince of Wales; there were felicitations and good wishes from the Duke of Connaught and the Earl of Derby; there were words of encouragement and congratulations spoken personally by Prime Minister R. B. Bennett, and Premier G. Howard Ferguson, of Ontario; and there was the inspirational address of Lord Willingdon, expressing his faith in the great success of the games.

As a sporting spectacle the opening day left nothing to be desired. From the sternest competition in the track and field events, there emerged three new Canadian records and from the swimming events, held at Hamilton's municipal pool in the evening, there came a world's record.

Miss Celia Wolstenholme, comely English swimmer, in the hundred yards breast stroke for women lowered her own world's record of 2.56 set three weeks ago in England, by establishing a new mark of 2.54.

To Canada, however, fell the lot of making first inroads upon former record achievements, for Garden Smallcombe of Toronto, set the first new mark of the day, by winning the running hop, step and jump, at the stadium in the afternoon. With a leap of 48 feet 5 inches Smallcombe enmassed the record of J. G. Macdonald, of New Glasgow, N.S. But again England came to the fore; Lord David Burghley, winner of his heat in the 440 yards hurdles, romped through to victory in the final and knocked 1 3-5 seconds from the Canadian mark held by W. J. Montabons of Montreal, and finished in 54 4-5 seconds.

Savidan Sets Record

From down under the other side of the world, came the record-smasher in the final track event of the day. W. J. Savidan, tanned New Zealander, unheralded and unsung as a middle distance star, but with inexhaustible stamina, plodded his persistent way to victory in the six mile event. Savidan's race was a relentless one. Always within striking distance of the pace-setters early in the grind, he moved unexpectedly to the fore at the three mile mark, and then shook off all challengers to win in 30 minues 49 4-5 seconds. It was given recognition as a new Canadian record, and was not far from the world mark of 29 minutes 50 4-10 seconds, made away back in 1904 at Glasgow, by the veteran runner Alf. Shrubb.

England Takes Sprints

It was "all England" in the sprint events, and it all started with Lord Burghley's triumphs in the opening 440 yards hurdles heats.

England repeated in the second heat when R. Leighood, son of Sir James Leighwood, chairman of the British Council for the games, gracefully cleared his obstacles, and held off the challenge of Canadian representative W. Connolly, who finished second.

In the finals of the hurdles "Lord Davey" set his new Canadian record, and the Englishmen run in one-two-three-four order. Connolly and Hickey, of Canada, although away to a fair start, never threatened the leaders. Lord Burghley had things his own way, though Leighwood gave him his strongest opposition.

Leighwood held his second position to the finish, with D. M. L. Neaman third and W. G. Tatham, fourth. Connolly took fifth place and Hickey sixth.

England's second championship of the afternoon came in the 220 yards dash, the only other sprint event on the opening day card.

FIFTY YEARS OF CONSTANT ENTERPRISE

THE PILOT DOESN'T WORRY

Fifty below in the Arctic night—and a plane down, with a defective spark plug and an empty tank.

The spark plug can be replaced, but that won't help without gasoline to turn the motor—and the nearest "town" is a few Eskimos and a trading post across the lake at Blackfish Point.

But the pilot doesn't worry. He knows there is a cache of Imperial Gasoline at Blackfish, and someone there to help him.

The great wealth of Canada's north is being found from the air many years before it could be reached afoot, because men are willing to adventure and supplies are there when they are needed.

These supplies come from the Imperial Oil Refineries. By ship up through Hudson Strait into the Bay, by rail beyond the Pas, by paddle wheeler down the Peace and MacKenzie Rivers they go to distributing points. In winter, dog teams and sleds drag them further into the wilderness.

For fifty years Imperial Oil has been meeting the new needs of transportation and industry. Because it has met each need with enterprise and energy, Imperial has become a great company—serving every corner of Canada—its ships on the Atlantic and Pacific — its pipelines in the tropics.

Marvelube is Imperial's finest motor oil.

Which means that nothing finer can be put in your car.

CAMPBELLFORD ROTARY STREET FAIR PROVED VERY SUCCESSFUL

Many Attractions at Annual Event Draw Large Crowd to Enjoy Fun.

AMOS N' ANDY IN PERSON

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 18 (By Examiner Staff Correspondent).—Fun and merriment were rife on Friday evening, when the citizens of Campbellford and district made merry at the annual Rotary Carnival and Street Fair. Pally lit with colored electric lights, Front street, from Bridge to Market streets, which were roped off for the occasion, were thronged with people who surrounded the various booths, trying their luck at the wheels or bidding on a blanket, eating ice cream or drinking pop, or listening to the strains of the Campbellford Jazz Band and enjoying the antics of those gaily decorated and funny musicians.

A free picture show in the Queen's Hotel drew large numbers of children and relieved many weary parents, for at least they knew where the kids were for a short while.

And then there was Amos 'n' Andy in person with the largest horse in the world, and the smallest. And what is more, these two entertainers, who kept the crowds in good humor, had their own milk supply with them.

The fish pond drew many of the children of all ages, and it has been a point of contention whether it was the prize or the attraction of the Red Indian that was the drawing card.

Another thing that seemed to worry the citizens was the headgear of the club members, and many a time the question was asked as to whether the heads of local Rotarians had swollen or their hats shrunk. But this fact made no difference to their vocal powers, as they called the spectators to try their luck at the different stands. The response on the part of the people was good, and not wholly to their disadvantage, as many a housewife was seen taking home a new pot or pan, or her good man heaving a sack of sugar. Such is the fortune of a street fair, and the local auctioneer became almost Scotch when he was forced to part with so many beautiful blankets to the lucky winners at the raffle stand.

The Bingo stand brought back memories of the war, and many a man wearing the button of the Legion was seen trying his luck and feeling a familiar response as the numbers were called.

The result of the grand draw showed that Miss Jennie Dillword of Meyersburg won the first prize, and Roland Pettifer of Campbellford came second in the award. What prizes these two lucky people have chosen out of the four to be picked from is not at present known. The four prizes up for choice are a chest of silver, a bicycle, a suit of clothes or a watch; all valued at fifty dollars.

The conclusion of the fun was a street dance in which many of the citizens of the town and district indulged. At this event the jazz band fulfilled a very necessary function and rounded off the fun which was carried on until the early hours of the morning.

Those members of Rotary who were in charge of the different spheres of activity were as follows:—The Nail Game, Dr. B. Longmore; the 10c and 25c Wheels, J. C. Birmingham, A. J. Armour, E. H. Greig, A. D. Bennett, W. Wiggins and D. W. Douglas; Bingo, A. McColl and J. A. Loucks; Horse Game, S. Sykes and A. L. Riendeau; Fish Pond, S. Maguire and A. Hazel; Pictures, Rev. R. C. Tait and W. Henson; Hot Dogs, C. H. Davidson and P. C. Denyes; Blankets, H. N. Carr and R. McLaren, and Lottery, C. Nadoo and E. C. Dolman.

The stores were in charge of R. Scott and the committe on welcome was G. A. Kingston. All stunts were in charge of Eli Brunelle, and H. Lapp acted as the handyman. H. N. Carr looked after the purchasing of the prizes, while the lights were in the capable hands of R. Scott and P. C. Denyes. The closing of the street was left to Mayor Davidson, who obtained the council's permission, and the official broadcasters and publishers were J. A. Armour and S. MacGuire. C. Williams handled the whole of the arrangements for the Fair, appointing the committees, and also looked after the obtaining of the wheels.

Many of the local men who are not Rotarians came to the assistance of the club and ably helped out. These assisted in the booths and with the blankets and in the general arrangements for the affair.

IDEAL FACTORY IS GIVEN HIGH SCORE

Campbellford and Stirling Cheese Factories Inspected and Prove of High Standing.

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 18 (By Examiner Staff Correspondent).—Arrangements are going ahead fast by the Cheese Markers' Association of Central Ontario for the coming competition for the best factory conditions in the different districts.

Last week George H. Barr, of Toronto, who is Director of Dairying, accompanied by W. J. Murray, Campbellford District Supervisor, inspected the Campbellford district for the purpose of judging the factories for conditions inside and out. One factory, the Ideal at Norham, was awarded a mark of 98.25. This factory is run by D. Turney. Mr. Barr was pleased with conditions generally throughout the district.

On Friday, Mr. Murray was taken over the Stirling district for the same purpose, accompanied by the Stirling District Supervisor, W. H. Baily of Madoc, and reports that the factories in that district are all of a high standing.

The report from the Campbellford Grading station for the week ending August 16th, shows that 20 lots, 685 boxes of cheese were graded as compared with the same week last year which registered 22 lots, 949 boxes.

A report from the Dominion Cheese Grader, J. L. Irwin, states that this year's figures show a decrease of 5,200 boxes of cheese graded as compared with last year. Although this seems a lot, this figure is for the whole of Central Ontario, and is a lot better than anticipated.

Of the cheese in the Grading Station at Campbellford last week, one car load was shipped to Hodgson and Renson, Montreal, and another to W. S. Cook and Sons, Belleville.

CAMPBELLFORD MAN PILOTS PLANE HOME

C. D. Beattie Flies Solo From Belleville to Campbellford With Club Machine.

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 18 (By Examiner Staff Correspondent).—Circling the town and finally coming to rest in a field to the north of Campbellford, C. D. Beattie brought back the flying machine belonging to the Campbellford Flying Club from Belleville to-day.

Mr. Beattie made a solo flight, taking about thirty minutes and making a very easy landing. He has the distinction of being Campbellford's first pilot, and the organizer of the flying club here and has accomplished a great deal along the line of aviation in this town during the past few months.

It is expected that now the club machine is back from Belleville where it underwent tests, that the activities of the club will be resumed, and it is probable that local flying will commence in the near future.

CATTLE, GRAIN AND PRODUCE

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, August 18. — Influenced by weakness at Chicago, the wheat market here on Saturday registered declines at mid-session, dropping from 2c from the high for the day, and closed 1⅝c to 1¾c a bushel lower. Local selling was quite heavy, but outside interest was lacking on Saturday.

Trading in cash wheat during the morning was very slow. Demand for the various grades continued indifferent and spreads were generally unchanged. Offerings were extremely light.

Cash interest in coarse grains generally was very light, and no business of any account was recorded. Values, for the most part, followed the action of wheat.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, Aug. 18.—Corn traders fizzled in attempts made Saturday to hoist the corn market regardless of moisture downpours in various parts of the drought region. Futhermore, something of a rout for friends of higher prices followed an official forecast indicating that corn-belt weather next week promises to be damp and rather warm, conditions helpful to the crop where damage was not irreparable. Wheat followed the setbacks of corn values, and also was influenced by bearish reports of friction between the Canadian Growers' Pool and the Canadian banks.

Corn Drops ½c.

Fenella Farmer Suffers Mishap —Team of Horses and Seeder Thrown Into Cellar.

FENELLA, Aug. 18 (Examiner Correspondence)—What might easily have been a more serious accident occurred on Thursday at noon at the home of the Misses Nellie and Elma Rogers when a part of the barn floor gave way, precipitating a team of horses hitched to a wagon and a seeder down into the basement.

Horses, wagon and seeder were badly tangled up together and it required several men to extricate the animals. Neither horse was seriously injured although they are suffering from severe cuts.

WILL CELEBRATE AT GRAND PRE

175TH ANNIVERSARY

HALIFAX, N.S., Aug. 18.—Among the thousands who are expected to gather at Grand Pre on August 20 to celebrate the 175th anniversary of the expulsion of the Acadians from Nova Scotia, will be a party representing the Association of Louisiana Acadians.

The Acadians of Louisiana are direc descendants of the people who w er exiled from Nova Scotia in 1775. Invited to attend the celebration at Grand Pre, the association at once planned a pilgrimage which will leave Lafayette La., on August 29. Three days will be spent at Grand Pre, where the party will take an active part in the proceedings.

In order to give recognition to the different sections of the Acadian country of Louisiana the Association has recommended that a girl be selected to represent her community. These girls will participate in the celebration at Grand Pre and will be dressed in Evangeline costumes with a ribbon attached, bearing the name of the town or parish she represents. It is understood that Dudley K. LeBlanc, president of the association, will be included in the party.

Plans for the celebration are progressing rapidly, and Hon. Justice A. T. LeBlance of the Supreme Court of New tBrunswick, who will preside, recently announced that he had been assured that ghe British Crown and the Government of France would be represented. The Province of Nova Scotia will have a speaker and it is anticipated that the State of Massachusetts which played such an important part in pioneer days, will be represented. Many other speakers, from Louisiana, New England, the Maritimes and Quebec, are already on the accepted list.

Kiwanis Eliminates Belleville in Playdowns

Wins Third Fixture 8-0

Wood Hurls Kiwanis Juniors To First Shutout Decision Of Season.

HEAVY HITTING.

Three Walks Issued in O.B.A.A. Play-Off Tilt. Triple Hit For Foley.

Playing practically errorless ball and superb hurling on the part of Don Woods who was on the mound for the Kiwanis juniors, the local entry in first round of O.B.A.A. playdowns took an 8-0 decision from the Belleville Moose in Deloro on Saturday, the game was the third of the series. The Bay of Quinte team won the first game here a week ago Saturday 8-3 but the Clubmen turned tables on them on their home field Wednesday when they emerged with a 10-4 triumph, making a third necessary for the right to meet the winner of the Toronto Kiwanis and Hamilton series in the next round.

It was a great game and the fair crowd in the bleachers witnessed some ball that was worthwhile in every respect. "Woodsy" the youthful hurler for the winners had a record of sixteen strikeouts and allowing but one walk, a mark in itself in that it is the first shutout game that the Kiwanis have had this season, not to mention the so'iditary base-on-balls.

Slugfest in Fourth

After having gained a two run lead in the third frame, the victors stepped in to connect for five runs in the fourth. Foley dropped a long triple into right field, scoring Whatley, Dallin and Miller who were reposing on the bases. The Kiwanis collected in all a total of 12 hits while their opponents amassed five while Mott was the only Belleville player to have an error chalked up against him.

Practically every one of the Kiwanis players had one hit or more to their credit, Dallin, Foley and McCullough being the star sluggers of the fixture. Brilliant stops, throws and running catches proved nearly errorless scintillating support for Wood.

As mentioned before the feature of the game beside the strikeout record set by "K" hurler was the fact that their were only three walks in the game, one for each team on called balls and McCullough who was given a base on a hit-by-pitcher sphere.

Start Off With Bang

Whatley grounded to the shortstop and was thrown out at first. Dallin made a long fly over the centre fielder's head for a triple. Miller struck out and Foley popped a short fly into the waiting second baseman's mit for the third down. No runs, one hit and no errors.

McKinnon the first batter up for the Belleville Moose grounded out to Whatley who overlooked the ball and the runner made second sack. Morgan fouled to the catcher. Riggs struckout and Young filed to the pitcher. No runs, no hits and one error.

Sproat and Saunders, the first two man up in the second frame, struckout while Hall filed to the centre fielder to retire the side. Nothing across.

Mott gained first on a short hit through the infield and later advanced to second and third but the next three batters Darrah, Delany and Barrage, left the plate by way of the "three called route" and left the runner on third. No runs, one hit and no errors.

McCullough made a nice drive through centre field to gain the first sack, later stealing second. Wood, the next man up, hit through short gaining the initial bag and advancing McCullough to third while Whatley laid a short bunt down the third base line and made the base easily. Dallin struck out and Miller popped to the pitcher for the second down. Foley made a long drive in the left field, the fielder misjudging the distance and McCullough and Wood romped home with the first two counters of the game. Sproat filed to pitcher for third down. 2 runs, 3 hits and no errors.

Booth struck out to open the frame of the Moose, McKinnon made a nice drive into left field to gain first, later advancing to second but the next two up, Morgan and Riggs, struck out to retire the side. No runs, one hit and no errors.

Stage Five Run Slugfest

The Kiwanis juniors commandered their big lead in this frame Saunders gained first on a short hit down third base line. Hall flied to the centre fielder for the first down. McCullough made a drive into the right, scoring the first runner. Wood, gained first when Mott muffed his fly and McCullough romped home. Whatley bunted down the first base line to beat Booth at the sack and Wood advanced to second. Dallin made a short drive down to third, Young throwing to first but Dallin beat the throw, the runners on bases advancing to fill the sacks. Miller hit through centre field and made first but Wood was thrown out stealing home. Foley, the next Kiwanis batter up, made a triple hit, scoring Whatley, Dallin and Miller. Sproat filed out to the second baseman. Five runs, five hits and one errors.

Yuong bunted to the third baseman and was thrown out at first and Mott and Darrah struck out to retire the side. No runs, no hits and no errorts.

Saunders and Hall, the first two up for the Kiwanis struck out, McCullough made first on a hit-by-pitcher ball and Wood struck out. no runs, no hits and no errors.

Delaney and Barrage fell before Wood's work on mound in the latter half of the fifth and Booth bunted to the third baseman to be thrown out at first. No runs, no hits and no errors.

First Walk of Game

Whatley popped to the first baseman, Dallin filed to centre fielder and Miller took a base on balls, the first of the game. Foley bunted to the pitcher and was thrown out at first for the third down. No runs, no hits and no errors.

McKinnon walked and was later thrown out trying to steal second. Morgan fouled to the catcher and Riggs struck out. Nothing across.

Sproat, the first man up in seventh filed out to the left fielder. Saunders gained first on a long hit to centre, later stealing second. Hall struck out and and McCullough popped a short one to the second baseman. No Runs, one hit and no errors.

Riggs filed to the first baseman; Mott left the plate by way of strikeout route. Darrah gained first on error through part of shortstop and Rowbottom struck out, retiring the side.

The Kiwanis hurler flied to pitcher and was thrown out at first. Whatley made a nice drive into centre field to gain first base, later advancing to second and third. Dallin popped a short one to the third baseman and Whatley was caught trying to make home from the keystone sack. No runs, one hit and no errors.

Close Call for Wood

Barrage flied to the second baseman for the first down. Booth struck out but McKinnon made a double drive into left field. Morgan also connected to gain the initial sack on a hit into centre garden. Riggs stopped all chances for scoring by flying to the second baseman. No runs, two hits and no errors.

The Kiwanis gained another counter in their half of the final frame, Miller struck out, Foley gained first and second on wild pitch from the third baseman to the initial sack guardian. Sproat flied to the second baseman and Saunders hit through shortstop area to score Foley who had stole third base. Hall struck out, to retire the side. One run, one hit and no errors. Young gained first on low grounder into the infield. Mott flied to shortstop and Wood retired the next two batters, Darrah and Rowbottom to end the game, the Kiwanis emerging triumphant with an 8-0 verdict. No runs, one hit and no errors.

LEAFS AND WINGS DROP DOUBLE BILLS

TIGERS DEFEAT SENATORS 15-1

Ruth's 44th Homer Leads Yankees to 8-7 Victory Over Chicago Sox.

INDIANS BEAT RED SOX.

NEW YORK, Aug. 18 (C.P.) — Washington's somewhat successful attempt to overhaul the Philadelphia Athletics in the American League pennant chase met with a violent interruption yesterday after the Senators had taken six straight games. Detroit's Tigers staged an uprising in the first two innings and scored eleven runs to win by a 15—1 count.

Yanks Break Even

Babe Ruth and Charley Ruffing gave the New York Yankees a ten-inning victory over the Chicago White Sox 8—7, in the first half of a double bill, but the Sox came back behind Red Faber's pitching to win 6—1, in a second game which was stopped by rain after five innings. Ruth clouted his 44th home run in the seventh inning to tie the score then made the winning run in the tenth on Ruffing's pinch single.

With the Athletics and St. Louis idle, Cleveland made the days' only important American League gain and still remained in fourth place, 9½ games behind the Yankees. The Indians won both games from the Boston Red Sox with a pair of effective feats. Willis Hudlin kept the Sox hits ineffective in the first clash to gain a 9—3 decision, while Clint Brown gave only four blows in the seven inning second game to win by a 2—0 count.

ORIOLES DRAW NEAR CHAMPIONS

Joe Hauser's 55th Homer Wins 2-1 Decision for Birds Over Toronto.

WINGS FALL TO PESTS.

TORONTO, August 18 (C.P.). — Once again the Baltimore Orioles have fought their way up the International League percentage ladder within striking distance of the pace-setting Rochester Redwings.

A double victory yesterday, the sixth and seventh triumphs in the last nine games, shoved the Orioles within two games of the champions, who dropped a pair of Sunday contests.

Here is how the two rivals look today:

Rochester	79	51	.608
Baltimore	78	54	.591

Toronto was the victim of the Orioles' savage attack, Baltimore winning the opener 2-1 in 12 innings, and the second fracas 7-2. And as has happened several times in the past, it was Joe Hauser's fifty-fifth home run of the season that knotted the count in the ninth inning of the first game, while a remarkable one-hand running catch by Vince Barton saved the Orioles in the tenth. In the second, the Orioles took advantage of their eight hits off Barnes and Samuels.

Baltimore has Jersey City to thank for the twin defeat of Rochester, the Skeeters taking the first 3-2, also in 12 innings, and the nightcap, an abbreviated even inning affair, 4-1, Dixie Walker did much for the cause of the Skeeters, pounding out six hits during the course of the afternoon.

Montreal continued the practice of Baltimore and Jersey City in winning double-headers, defeating Newark twice 3-2 and 5-2.

Bryon Spence, former Phillie National hurler, and Marty Griffin for the Royals, went the entire route in the opener and though Speece was nicked for only seven hits and issued but one pass, errors at the critical stages caused his downfall. Myles Thomas, another former major leaguer, pitched for Newark in the second, but six errors behind him were costly.

Reading managed to win the series from Buffalo by breaking even in a double-header, the Keys taking the first 7-3 and the Bisons the closing battle 5-4. LeRoy Herrmann's six-hit pitching was responsible for the Keys' triumph in the first game.

CANADIAN COMPANIES HIT BY INFERIOR U.S. GAS

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 18 (C.P.)—The dumping of inferior gasoline by United States companies into the Canadian market has severely hit local oil refineries, it is reported. GIANTS GAIN ON LEAGUE LEADERS

Vance Hurls Dazzling Ball To Keep Robins In Second Position.

CUBS WIN FROM HILLS.

NEW YORK, Aug. 18 (C.P.)—Always noted for their strong finishes, the New York Giants appear to be the darkest kind of a dark horse in the current National League pennant race. While Brooklyn and Chicago were drawing all the attention to themselves in their struggle for the lead, the Giants ploughed steadily along through their schedule in the past few weeks to make themselves a strong contender for the flag.

The Giants pulled up until they were only a half game behind the second place Brooklyn Robins and only three games behind the league-leading Chicago Cubs after Saturday's games, and the loss of half a game by an even break in yesterday's double header was not a serious setback. For while Brooklyn and Chicago were engaged in throat-cutting, the Giants won 22 out of 32 games in the last month to start their closing rush.

New York extended its latest winning streak to five games in the first half of yesterdays' twin bill by pounding Wild Bill Hallahan and three successors for 17 hits and a 12—4 victory. A seven run rally in the sixth settled the matter. But Burleigh Grimes turned the tables on them in the second game, while the Cards outdid the earlier Giant rally. They scored six runs in the first two frames and eight more in the sixth for a 14—4 triumph.

During this division of games, the two leaders, Chicago and Brooklyn were turning in single victories to gain a half game on the Giants and continue their race 2½ games apart. The Cubs again had difficulty with the humble Phillies but took advantage of their one opportunity when Earl Collard developed a streak of wildness in the eighth and scored two runs to win 5—4. The loss of Charley Grimm, injured Saturday, did not prove serious, as Lester Bell filled in with three hits in three times at bat and drove in two tallies.

Vance Wins Again

The Robins played a single home game against Pittsburgh and sent out Dazzy Vance to entertain the Flatbush fans. The Dazzler did his part by fanning nine as he hurled an eight-hit shutout while Brooklyn pounded out a 5—0 victory.

The Boston Braves supplied Cincinnati's fans with enough thrills for a world series in a double-header between two clubs buried deep in the second division. The Braves barely edged out a 4—3 victory over the Reds in the first game, then went 13 innings in the nightcap to win 9—8, as 37 players, eleven of them pitchers, strove for a victory.

Two Great Scullers Meet

On the left is Jack Beresford, famous English sculler, three-times winner of the Diamond Sculls, in 1920, 1924 and 1925, greeting Bob Pearce of Australia, Olympic champion, at Hamilton. Beresford is the sculler who stopped rowing in his race with Joe Wright at Henley this year when the Argonaut oarsman caught "a crab" and waited for the Canadian to get straightened away again before resuming rowing. Beresford will be one of England's representatives in the empire singles at Hamilton.

GOOD BATTING DISPLAY GIVEN BY JOHN WADE

C.G.E. Scores 144 Runs Against Peterborough Cricket Club's 118.

SOME GOOD BOWLING

R. N. Stuart and E. Stott Play Good Game for the Losers.

A return match was arranged between Peterborough C. C. and the C.G.E. Cricket Club, the latter seeking revenge after their defeat last week, when Peterborough scored 118 for five wickets and C.G.E. 44.

Capt. F. Dyer won the toss and elected to bat, opening the innings with G. Combe and R. N. Stuart to the bowling of Reg. Dyer and J. Combe played cautiously until a loose ball came from Dyer, which he cut through the slips for a 4. R. N. Stuart played steadily to the fast bowling of J. Wade, playing a straight bat. No runs were scored during that over. After scoring eight runs, Combe was bowled and caught in the forth over by Dyer.

F. Jefferson followed Combe, but did not stay long, being caught by Martin, only scoring one run. C. Elliott joined R. N. Stuart, who was still playing steady cricket; he stayed long enough to score six runs, one being a 4 and was caught out by R. Dyer.

F. Dainton went out to Stuart and was bowled by Wade. Capt. F. Dyer followed and was out the first ball, which was one of Wade's specials, just taking the bails in its flight.

Register Small Score

Things were looking bad for the P.C.C., six wickets down and only 36 runs on the board. F. Smith was bowled by Dyer and only scored 4 runs. H. Howard doing the same, but being bowled by Wade.

E. Stott, a newcomer to the P.C.C. went out with the intention of staying with R. N. Stuart, who was still playing nicely. Stott's first hit was for a 4, and then settled down to the bowling. Stuart was caught by Malsh, finishing a nice innings with a total of 13 runs. Curtis followed on, but did not score and was followed by W. Davies. Stott was bowled by R. Dyer after a score of 15, comprising two fours, two twos, and three singles. Peterborough's innings closed with a total score of 61.

C.G.E. opened their innings with Martin and Mawhood to the bowling of F. Dyer and F. Jefferson. Martin was caught out with the fifth ball in the first over by R. N. Steuart. W. Binks joined Mawhood and in playing a ball to square leg, he drove it right to the hands of A. Combe.

Wade came out to partner Mawhood, both playing good cricket and making a nice score. Capt. Dyer changed bowlers, putting Elliott on in the place of Jefferson.

The slow break-bowling of Elliott brought about the desired change and appeared to have Mawhood in difficulties, and in trying to hit one out of the ground was caught by Howard at mid on, and ending a good innings with a score of 28 runs.

G. R. Langley was next batsman and was bowled by one of Elliott's slow deliveries, scoring 11 runs. S. Malsh was out the next ball. C. Lewington followed and joined Wade, who was still playing a brilliatn game and getting runs all around the field. Lewington did not stay long; he was bowled by Elliott and caught out by Comb. J. Chambers stayed long enough to score 4 runs and was smartly caught by Stuart behind the wicket.

R. Dyer, ninth man in, was bowled by Jefferson, taking his middle wicket clean out of the ground. Lawrence was also bowled by Jefferson for none. J. Wade's score was 63 and not out, comprising eight boundaries, ten twos, and the remainder in singles.

A return match will be played in the near future to decide the best of three games.

Former Paris Typist Claims Unique Record

ISTANBUL, Turkey, Aug. 18.—(CP)—Mrs. Patrick Carey, the former Miss Mercedes Gleitze, pretty English typist, claimed a unique record when she announced she had swum the Hellespont, a feat never before accomplished by a woman.

In Turkey on a honeymoon, Miss Gletize or Mrs. Carey went over to Hellespont on Saturday and on her return said she had swum across the swift, treacherous strait at its widest point in 2 hours and 55 minutes. The distance was four miles.

OVER The KITTY By "Newsie"

Daily Happenings on Peterborough Bowling Club's Greens.

Another Saturday evening's bowling was enjoyed by many of our lady and gentlemen members last week-end, the mixed rink competition resulting in chocolates being won by rinks skipped by Charlie Seymour, Reg. Fox and Reg. Dyer. Winning rinks were Harry Northrop, Herb. Martin, Mrs. Seymour, Charlie Seymour, skip; Ken Fox, Roy Disney, Miss Sedgewick, Reg. Fox, skip; Mrs. Northrop, Mrs. Welsh, "Doc" Long, Reg. Dyer, skip.

These Saturday evening games are increasing in favour and all members, ladies and gentlemen, are invited to be on hand at 7.45 next Saturday.

Benny Chesler must have used Nels Routly rather badly as Nelson packed up and beat it for the showers after the first game.

Herb. Martin's clay pipe was in evidence as usual, but rumour has it that one of our members is about to issue a writ asking for an injunction restraining the use of such a pipe as a smoke nuisance.

We hear that three of our rinks are going to Toronto on Monday to make a bid for the Dominion Gold Cup. Let's hope they will be successful in bringing it home. It sure would be a great distinction for the city if this could be accomplished. We are all pulling for them anyway.

The doubles draw will be resumed on Monday night and "Newsie" is informed that a mixed tournament is planned for Wednesday night.

We noticed with pleasure a friendly game in progress on the tennis courts Saturday afternoon, members of the Quaker Oats Club being entertained. That was fine, and we hope they will be back again soon. This friendly rivalry will soon bring the old tennis game back to life in this city. It was good to see George Scott on hand, apparently keeping the games going smoothly, and George is certainly deserving of credit for the various little competitions he has engineered this summer.

Glad to have Fred Brown back again. Fred was called away owing to family sickness and we all express to him our sympathy in the losses he has sustained.

The sale of tickets for Thursday's dance is practically completed and a good night's fun has been planned by the House Committee. Be sure and get in on it.

For those members who dod not know Scotty McLeish, our Secretary, who is leaving us shortly for a new field, has been succeeded by Roy Disney and Jack Fitzpatrick has been added to the board of Directors. Let's all get behind them with our co-operation.

Through the courtesy of The Examiner this column will appear each evening carrying news of the day's games and any items of interest to Club members. We wish to publicly acknowledge this favor.

Don't forget the new slogan "If it's Club news, you will find it here daily."

CALEYS TAKE LEAGUE POINT FROM PACKERS

TWO GOALS EACH.

Downer Missed Penalty—Preston Reduced Score and Obtained Equalizer a Minute to Go.

A well-earned goal gave the Canadian Packing the equaliser a minute to go, in a league game, on Saturday afternoon, against the Caledonians, to make the score two all. They were awarded two all but Preston and N. Downer failed to score against the Caley's goaler—H. Fowler. The league leaders lost a very valuable point which puts the C. G. E. and Brinton all in the category of an undecided championship. As a matter of fact the Scotsmen were the superior combination. Asa Downer had to receive the attention of the St. John's ambulance men after he had a collision with Curtain. He received a slit in his cranium about three inches long but continued playing to the end.

First Half.

The Scots took advantage of the sun at their backs. Preston set the ball arolling into the opponents' half without anything transpiring in that area. Cook travelled down the centre of the field along with McCracken to gain a well-placed flag kick by the latter, while the former missed the cross-bar by inches, from the rebound off the sticks. They returned again and accepting a centre by Gore on the left, Cook sent a twister into the net past Griffin. No time was wasted by the Packers in attacking at the other end where efforts were wide of the mark. A little later Willshaw tested Fowler in goal with a mid-air drive. Nice combination on the Scots left the Packers' full backs in a mix-up. Cook, seeing the opening, inside the goal area, slipped the ball back to his outside right who sent a fast shot across the goal mouth to be connected with a left footer by Gore about a yard out. With two goals aganst them the C.P.C. forced the issue to get a penalty kick through Puttie handling inside the dreaded area. Preston's fast drive from the spot kick was fully measured by the Scots' custodian to prevent a tally. Over eagerness by the Packers in mid field spoiled their progressive tactics around the goal. Time and again, the Scots would raise a siege to have Griffin in goal, working over-time, in fact, scoring oppertunities went abegging. Before the interval Preston worked hard to reduce the lead but he was too well covered. Hard luck dogged C. P. C. when Fowler's misjudged fist missed the ball in transit, Pottie coming to rescue as the sphere rolled on the goal line. The Scots repulsed the attacks and carried the offensive to the Packers' citadel where Gore banged a long drive into the waiting arms of the goalie. Then the next visit terminated as Cook's long range drive missed the upright, just as the whistle sounded the first half.

Caledonians 2, Canadian Packers 0.

Half Time.

A five minute respite permitted a light refreshment. The Packers were the first to become dangerous, and failed to make use of the openings presented. An illegal infringement by a Caley player inside the dreaded area, brought another spot kick to the Packers. Newt Downer was trusted with the kick but his effort found Fowler again the master of the situation, as he picked up the ball with ease and saving his second spot kick of the tussle. In spite of the adversities, the league leaders made amends for their run of hard luck by concentrating in swinging passes from the wing to wing, to harass the Scots' defense. On mid-field play, Downer and Curtain both went up in the air to head the ball, instead of achieving their purpose, they crashed together. Downer falling in a heap with a three inch rip in his cranium, and the Scotsman holding the large bump on his with two hands. A foul against Miller caused the fall of the Scots' citadel. Buchan's placed kick to Preston permitted him to score a perfect goal. They returned again for three fruitless corner kicks. The encounter was stopped a while for Preston to receive necessary repairs, it was a battle to the limit. The Packers working like niggers to get the equaliser and the Scots being unfortunate to let Preston beat in between the full backs who finished a good afternoon's play with a perfect goal, with a minute to go.

SOCIAL EVENING IS MUCH ENJOYED

Mr. and Mrs. Milton Clark Hosts at Jolly Gathering in East Emily.

EAST EMILY, Aug. 18 (Examiner Correspondence). The members of the congregation of St. James' Anglican Church enjoyed a pleasant evening when they were entertained on Wednesday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Clark.

Their beautiful lawn with its rockery and all its plendour of flowers from all corners made a very appropriate surroundings for the occasion, but owing to the weather being cool the gathering assembled in the house which was decorated with a profusion of flowers.

The ladies of the Church held a Guild meeting and a very enjoyable program followed, with the Rev. Mr. Weir as chairman consisting of community singing, instrumentals, Miss Audrey Weir, reading Miss Loraine McCarrell; instrumental, Miss Agnes Klink, of Stouffville, solo, Mrs. E. Hartwick, of Toronto; reading, Miss Helen Rowbotham, of Stouffville; duet, Dorothy and Bruce Clark; reading Mrs. Oke, of Toronto; instrumental, Miss Forester Oke, of Toronto; violin solo, Gerald West.

A dainty lunch was served at the close of the program by the ladies and a silver collection was taken in aid of the Ladies' Guild.

ACQUATIC EVENTS FEATURE

Aquatic events form a big feature in the British Empire Games program and especialy in to-day's events when swimming and the Canadian canoe championships occupy the sportlight. It is interesting to note that in almost every team from the ten different countries taking part in their list of entriming is included in their list of entries. In the team of nineteen athletes representing Bermuda, nearly all are swimmers. The city of Hamilton deserves a great deal of credit in their handsome effort in constructing for the games a $110,000 indoor swimming pool, which is believed to be one of the finest on the North American continent. The Canadian canoe championships should not only provide excitement but will be one of the most picturesque events on the program. Paddlers from all over the provinces of Quebec and Ontario meet this afternoon. The war canoe events generally develop into grudge battles. Rivalry between the canoe clubs is probably keener than in any other form of sport, and when a couple of war canoe crews get a grudge on their chests, it's just a case of everybody holding their seats.

A BEDTIME STORY

by Howard R. Garis

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE LOST BIRD.

After Uncle Wiggily had found out, or discovered, that Mr. Rat, the gentleman janitor, washing the windows made it look as if the Hollow Stump School were crying because the children were on vacation, the rabbit gentleman wondered what next adventure he would have.

"For," said Mr. Longears as he stood on his head in the woods and twinkled his pink nose, "the more adventures I have the more fun there is. I wonder what will happen next?"

And just then a five-cent piece fell out of the rabbit gentleman's pocket and he picked it up and gave it to Baby Bunting who was waiting. I mean Uncle Wiggily gave Bunty the five cents—not his pocket. That's the reason the rabbit gentleman was standing on his head when this story started. It was to see if he had any money in his pockets and that's the very surest way to find out. Just stand on your head with your feet in the air and if you have any money it will fall out of your pocket.

"There you are, Baby Bunty!" said Mr. Longears turning a somersault and getting on his feet after handing the little orphan rabbit the nickle. "There you are! Now you may buy a lollypop."

"Oh, thank you, Unkie Wig," said Bunty and she stopped right there for "Unkie Wig" was all the baby talk she was allowed to use.

The little orphan rabbit had followed Uncle Wiggily when he hopped out of his hollow stump bungalow, teasing him for some money.

"But I haven't any, Bunty," Mr. Longears had said, putting his paw first in one pocket and then another. "Not even a penny."

"Please stand on your head, Unkie Wig," begged Baby Bunty, "and maybe some money will fall out of your pocket."

"All right," answered the rabbit gentleman. "So on his head he stood and, surely enough, out dropped the nickle and Baby Bunty was happy.

"Well, now I wonder what will happen next?" said Uncle Wiggily to himself when, once more, he was standing right side up. "I must hop along and have an adventure."

Over the fields and through the woods he hopped and pretty soon the rabbit gentleman came to a bunch of trees pretty and green. Thinking he might sit there in the shade a while and wait for an adventure, Uncle Wiggily was going toward the wee, little grove when, all of a sudden, from beneath the leaves he heard a sort of watery, splashing sound and a voice said:

"Oh, what fun I'm having! Quee! Quee! Quee! What jolly fun!"

"That can't be any of the Bad Chaps!" thought Uncle Wiggily with a smile under his pink nose. "They never have any fun, unless they call chasing me fun and that isn't any joy on my part I assure you!"

So, thinking it was safe to hop toward the trees, whence came the watery, splashing sound and the jolly voice talking about fun, Uncle Wiggily entered the shady grove and there, fluttering in an old tin can, partly filled with water, was a young robin bird.

"Hello, Robin!" called the rabbit gentleman.

"Hello, Uncle Wiggily!" chirped the young Robin bird.

"What are you doing?" asked the rabbit.

"I'm having a bath," was the reply. "Come on in; the water's fine!"

"Thank you!" chuckled Mr. Longears, "but I would crowd you out. That tin can bath tub of yours isn't large enough for me. Keep on splashing and have fun! I'll watch you."

For a while Uncle Wiggily watched Robin taking his bath in the old tin can which the rain had partly filled with water. Once the can had held salmon fish, but now it held a bird. Into the water Robin dipped his head and then he fluttered his wings and scattered the water over his back. By this time Uncle Wiggily was tired of sitting still so he hopped on over the hills and far away. Soon it began to get dark and the rabbit gentleman had found no adventure.

Then, all of a sudden, he heard a father and mother Robin calling for their small bird. "Chirp! Chirp! Where are you, Robin!"

"What's the matter; is your Robin lost?" asked the rabbit.

"Oh, I'm afraid he is," answered the mother bird. "Robin flew away early to-day and he hasn't come home yet. I wonder where he is?"

"I saw a young bird taking a bath in a tin can in a grove of trees," said Uncle Wiggily. "That must have been your Robin."

"But he should come home!" chirped Mr. Robin.

"Oh, maybe something has happened to him!" cried the mother. "Oh, Uncle Wiggily, please show us where you saw him!" Uncle Wiggily quickly led the older birds to where he had seen the young one bathing. There was the tin can, but no sign of Robin. Then, all at once a sad voice called:

"Let me out! Please let me out! I'm shut in the bath room!"

And what do you think had happened. A big cone from a pine tree had fallen on the bent back cover of the tin can bath tub, and it had folded down and shut poor Robin in his bath so he couldn't get out to fly home to his father and mother.

But Uncle Wiggily quickly bent back the tin top of the can and out flew Robin, safely home with his parents to the nest. He wasn't lost any more and everybody was happy.

More Tourists In Apsley This Year

APSLEY, Aug. 18 (Examiner Correspondence)—Three times as many tourists as last year according to George Couch have made Couch's Landing on Loon Lake their headquarters this season so far, and new parties arrive almost daily.

The road in from the Mill turn to the Chandos boundary requires very careful navigating, one particularly bad rock in the middle of the road giving a lot of trouble to low-bodied cars.

Edmonton Girl Tells Of Experiences As Social Secretary Of The Movie Stars

EDMONTON, Alta., Aug. 18.—(CP).—Olive Kerr, a former resident of this city, writes to the Journal giving an account of the life as part-time secretary to film stars in Hollywood. She has managed to create a new position, the chief drawback being that her time was never her own.

"I realized that the success of my enterprise would depend chiefly upon my willingness to accommodate my employer—to be prepared to dash off anywhere, at any time of night or day, in answer to an S.O.S. call! For when a film star wants a thing it is wanted at once, if not sooner. The film firmament is divided into two classes, the temperamental and the would-be temperamental, and the distinction is a fine one.

"Many a time I have smiled to myself as I clung to my seat, my brief case, and my last-minute instructions, as the limousine sped silently along. I might be on my way to purchase a birthday, bon voyage or Christmas gift, or merely to deposit a few thousand dollars in the bank. The latter was easy—for me, at any rate—but in the case of shopping errands all the information I was given regarding the taste of the recipient-to-be was 'anything that looks nice and is not too horribly expensive!' It was up to me to select something suitable, something that would satisfy my employer, reflect his good taste, and please the recipient: a three-fold responsibility.

"I have been sent on errands of mercy to the sick and to act as intercessor between husband and wife, father and son. While one of my employers was abroad I sold her house, moved into another, and effected a change of staff. I have sold cars, objects d'art, and more recently jewels, for the New York stock exchange smash and its recurrent depressions have left their impression on Hollywood.

"I have rented luxuriously furnished bungalows upon the receipt of cabled instructions from my employer and had them running smoothly by the time he returned. I have done little unimportant things, too, of course, which offset the bigger and more difficult tasks. I have played host in my employer's home during his absence and have entertained the guest until his arrival. I have sat at the telephone for a day issuing invitations to a house warming or dinner party. I have called the same number 20 or 30 times before I have got the response I wanted, but it was my duty to invite each individual personally.

"I could not attempt to count how many valets, personal-maids, housekeepers, chauffeurs and gardeners I have interviewed in an effort to weed out the bad and line up the good. At one time I had so many keys on my key-ring that I was obliged to have marks of identification in order to cope with them at all: keys that unlocked wills, alimony agreements, stocks and bonds, jewels, furs, Rolls-Royce cars, and safety deposit boxes. I have, of course, been given power of attorney on numerous occasions."

225 ENTRIES ARE MADE IN CONTEST

"Village Name" Committee Fails to Arrive at a Decision in Contest.

MEET AGAIN SATURDAY.

More than two hundred letters received by The Examiner Office for the Village Name Committee, each suggesting a name for the suburban community in the south and east border of the city, were examined by the committee on Saturday evening, in the office of Mr. John T. O'Connell on Hunter Street. Those present were Messrs. O'Connell, Dickson Davidson, John J. Howden and Mark S. Burnham.

The meeting organized by electing Dickson Davidson, Chairman, and Frank Kitney, Secretary. Careful consideration was given to the long list and it was decided that another meeting with all members present would be necessary to reach a conclusion and award the prizes.

Mr. O'Connell whose farm "Rossconnell" is one of the noteworthy attractions of the neighborhood has taken an active part in the movement to discover an appropriate name and finally he secured a "Name Committee" which informally decided to enlist the co-operation of the school students of the higher grades and others. The response has been phenomenal. The method used is unique for as far as known, this is the first time in the history of Ontario that a village name has been chosen through popular co-opeation.

Mr. O'Connell when called upon this morning said to The Examiner that "The Committee' was astonished and very much gratified to receive some 225 suggestions, many of them being peculiarly apt. The hearty thanks of the committee are extended to all those who proposed names and especially to The Examiner for its invaluable aid to the project and the interested community.

"The selection of the most fitting name, the second and third best suggestions, is a too arduous task for the Committee to decide at one meeting. It was consequently thought advisable to carefully study the matter this week and make the announcement of the result of the contest next Saturday or Monday.

MISSION CIRCLE ENJOYS PICNIC

GOOD PROGRAM

Jackson Park was the ideal spot chosen for picnics on Saturday afternoon and evening, when every available table and seat was taken at the tea hour by happy groups of all ages. Among these none was merrier than that of the X.L. Mission Circle of St. James' United Church. Notwithstanding the fact that holidays called many of the members afar, twenty-one rallied at the park. The supper and sports were under the direction of a committee composed of Misses Mabel Dulmage, Jean Rose, and Marjorie Hogan, who proved very capable in providing for the appetites and the sporting instincts of the girls. A tour of the park, paddling, wading, and many other stunts were indulged in by the adventurous members of the group. Later the contests of skill and speed were won as follows: Straight race, Miss Florence Cripps; needle and thread race. Misses Aileen and Greta Welbourn; boot and shoe race, Miss Marjorie Baldry.

These picnics are planned by the Circle executive to keep up interest in the work rather than disbanding during the summer months. The X. L. Circle has found the plan to be most successful. The girls keep in touch with things missionary while they meet in a more informal way, become better acquainted, and are usually ready to enter into the real business of the regular meetings when the holidays have gone.

RUM RUNNERS' WAGES HIGHER

Marked Revival Along St. Pierre —New England Rum Route Reported.

CHANGE LANDING SYSTEM

HALIFAX, N.S., Aug. 18.—Current honorariums to seamen engaged in the hazardous business of piloting rum from St. Pierer to the United States coast are the highest in the history of liquor running, according to local waterfront information. Many of the small and extremely fast craft now used in the contraband trade carry only very small crews, it is said, sometimes only a man or two besides the captain and engineer, whose services command a high professional fee. Engineers are being paid on a basis of $750 a month, with bonuses for high averages of successful landings, while skippers are able to demand and get $1,000 a month with higher bonuses, according to shipping men in touch with the situation. One engineer who was in Halifax the other day was paid $800 before leaving for St. Pierre.

Further information coursing along the waterfront grapevine is that there is a marked revival in traffic along the St. Pierre—New England rum route, possibly due to the cessation of legal clearances from Canadian border ports. It is said that "rum row"—that cordon of liquor—laden ships which lies off the United States coast—now includes more vessels than at any time in the last five years.

The recent seizure in Chicago of a Boston-shipped car of intoxicants has been taken to indicate a connection between the Chicago and other-mid-western liquor rackets with the St. Pierre to New England contraband traffic.

It is said, also, that the system of landings has changed, the present method favoring direct landings when possible by small fast boats which are capable of going direct to St. Pierre or loading from mother-ships, as opportunity dictates.

Tarzan went in search of Jane's father. Finally he found the old man, and the professor, brought them safely to the cabin, and again vanished into the jungle. Esmeralda "came to" at the lioness's last shriek. The reunited party of castaways related their experiences and talked long of the mysterious ape-man.

When it grew light, they ate of their scanty store of food. They decided to bury the skeletons. The professor discovered they were those of white people. On the man's finger he found a massive ring. Clayton gave a cry of astonishment! . . . It bore the crest of the house of Greystoke.

And then Jane in a book saw the single name: Greystoke. Thus they identified the skeletons and with deep reference buried them. The professor had noted that the infant's bones were not a human's. He murmured "Most remarkable," but said nothing. From the trees Tarzan of the Apes watched the solemn ceremony.

Most of all he watched the sweet face and graceful figure of Jane. He knew that she was created to be protected and that he was created to protect her. Esmeralda chanced to glance toward the harbor. She cried out, pointing to the "Arrow" slowly sailing seaward!

Now they knew they were deserted —marooned by merciless sailors on this jungle shore. Tarzan saw their consternation; also the departure of the ship. He swung through the trees to see closely this strange floating house. Presently his keen eyes saw the faintest suspicion of smoke on the horizon.

CAMPING GROUND FOR 22 YEARS

Braundport Was Founded By J. T. Braund in Summer of 1908.

OPEN TO EVERYONE.

Braundport, one of the best known camping grounds on the Otonabee River, this year celebrates its twenty-second anniversary. It was in the summer of 1908 that R. C. Braund founded the camp which has since grown and expanded until its can now house many families. The camp is open to everyone but one of the strict rules enforced is that the Sabbath Day must be fully observed.

J. T. Body, manager of the United Church Publishing House retail store in Toronto, was the speaker at yesterday's services at the camp. Mr. Body has been holidaying at the camp for eighteen years. The theme of his message was "How Big Are You", and he stressed the need of "seeing the other fellow's point of view."

YOUNG WOMEN ARE RECEIVED INTO CONVENT

SIX LADIES ENTER.

Many Priests From City and This District Participate in Event.

On Friday morning, August 15th, the Ceremony of Religious Profession and Reception was carried out in the Chapel of the Sacred Heart, Mount St. Joseph. At an early hour numerous friends thronged the beautiful chapel to witness the ceremony which commenced promptly at nine o'clock. On the entrance into the chapel of six young ladies in bridal costume, Mass was celebrated by His Lordship, the Right Reverend Denis O'Connor, D.D., LL.D., Bishop of Peterborough, assisted by Rev. J. J. O'Brien as deacon, and Rev. J. T. Finn as subdeacon. At the conclusion of the Mass these six young ladies, being interrogated by the bishop, publicly declared their great desire to renounce the world and to don the humble habit of the Sisters of St. Joseph. Their request having been granted, they were clothed with the religious habit, and received their names as follows: Miss Mae Curley of Coniston, Ont., in religion Sister Inez Marie; Miss Mary O'Hara, Haileybury, in religion Sister Mary Isabel; Miss Luella Chassie, North Bay, in religion Sister Mary Bernadette; Miss Eileen Foley, Peterborough, in religion Sister M. Canisia; Miss Margaret Lynch, Marmora, in religion Sister Mary St. Edward; Miss Alda McDonald, St. Andew's West, in religion Sister M. St. Donald.

Take Final Vows

On the completion of the Ceremony of Reception, the novices for Holy Vows entered the sanctuary. Sister M. Carmella pronounced her first vows, and Sister St. Germaine, Sister Mary Catherine and Sister Hilda made final Profession. At the conclusion of this ceremony the Right Reverend Bishop, in a few well-chosen words, congratulated those taking part in the ceremony. He referred to the spendid and various works accomplished by the Sisters of St. Joseph. "You are joining a Community which has been engaged in charitable and educational labors," he said. "They teach the children; they care for the aged—those whom a cold world has passed by; the orphan to whom the world has been unfair. These religious see Christ in His suffering members as they minister to the sick in hospitals. It is a glorious Habit you have donned today,—one that has been worn by generous religious women who, during the past three hundred years have spent themselves in the cause of God." The Right Reverend Bishop O'Connor concluded by wishing the novices many years of fruitful service in Christ's vineyard. The singing of the Te Deum brought the ceremony to a close.

Besides His Lordship, the Bishop, and the officiating clergy, there were present in the canctuary Right Rev. Mgrs. McColl, V.G., Lindsay; Rev. W. X. Byran, S.J., Loyola College, Montreal, who conducted the retreat for the Sisters during the preceding eight days; Rev. A. B. Cote, O.P.; Rev. Fr. Kieley, Marmora; Rev. K. Killen, Calgary; Rev. Fr. FATHER SEEKS 29 CHILDREN.

Behind a London broadcast appeal to "any relations of Walter Barker, aged 68" to go to Redhill Hospital, Essex, "where he is seriously ill," is the story of a lonely old man who is vainly seeking his 29 children. Barker said that he had lost trace of all of his offspring, but remembers that two of them, Florrie, aged 24, and Maud, aged 22, were taken to California by a woman who took a fancy to Florrie 20 years ago. He does not know the address of any of his relatives.

TRY THIS ON YOUR COW.

"A wolf in sheep's clothing," we have all heard the expression used figuratively —and now comes a true story of a "cow in a kimona." Motorists entering the city from the direction of Port Hope declare that the cow, a pure bred Jersey, presents a ludicrous sight, attired in a commodious white kimona. Presumably it is a show beast, and is being thus protected from the onslaughts of flies and mosquitoes, in order that her debut before the show judges may be made under the most favorable circumstances.

NEW PUMPER.

A new fire pumper has been received in Port Hope and is ready for use at the next fire big enough to require its attention. It has been tested at the Ganeraska River at the foot of Queen street and found capable of throwing two streams of water more than twice the height of any building in the town at present.

654 WINNING NUMBER

The owner of ticket number 654 is the winner at the Mite-Tee-Green during the past week. The prize is $5.00 in gold and the owner of this ticket is asked to claim his prize before Wednesday night.

ASSESSED 542.54 AND COSTS

Judgement was recently delivered by His Honour Judge L. V. O'Connor in favour of the F. T. James Company, Limited, wholesale dealers in fish and oysters, Toronto, in an action against Jacob Nazimok carrying on business as a retail fish merchant in this city for a number of years.

His Honour gave judgement for the Plaintiff for $542.54 debt and costs.

The action came for trial at a special sitting of the County Court of the County of Peterborough on the 21st June, A. L. Elliott of the firm of Gordon and Elliott appeared on behalf of plaintiff and J. A. O'Brien, for the defendant.

START THIS FALL

"We have instructed that contract work be started close to the City of Peterborough, some time this fall" is the text of a letter from Hon. George S. Henry Minister Department of Public Works and Highways, addressed to the local Chamber of Commerce, and referring to the continuation of Highway 7 east of this city.

PRACTISE DRIVING

The new driving range recently opened on the Mite-Tee Miniature Golf Course, is receiving the patronage of a number of wellknown local golfing enthusiasts, including Robert Abbott, Judge Wearing, Sid Black and Chris Graham. The former gentleman it is stated, is able to drive the ball with almost unerring aim. It is a common fact in golfing circles that Mr. Abbot holds something of a reputation locally as a powerful driver, the fact that he patronises the driving range, speaks well for its usefulness as a means of keeping in golfing trim between tournaments.

DISTRICT ORDERS

According to orders for Military District No. 3 issued by Brigadier W. B. Anderson, C. M.G., D.S.O., D.O.C., Major E. H. Wood of this city ceases to be attached for duty as Medical Officer of the 3rd Prince of Wales Dragoons. The effect of the order is dated October, 1929.

EXPRESSES REGRET

Regret at the recent death of Wm. F. Brown was expressed from the pulpit yesterday by the Rev. Mr. Johnstone, the preacher at St. Paul's Presbyterian Church during the absence of the minister. "It is with sincere regret," said Mr. Johnstone, "that we report the death of William F. Brown, late of 191 Dublin street. The sincere sympathy of this congregation is extended to his widow and son."

The late Mr. Brown died with tragic suddenness here on August 10.

ACCORDEON SOLO

A feature of the Salvation Army Band concert in Victoria Park last evening, as an accordeon solo by Johannan Yurgensen and a sacred duet sung by Johannan with his brother Aage, in their native Danish tongue.

The two young men, natives of Copenhagen are newcomers to Canada. Their father is a Salvation Army Brigadier in Denmark. They came here to join an elder brother Wilbert who has been in this country for the past seven years. Wilbert who is a Captain in the Salvation Army, is leaving Peterborough to-morrow to take charge of the Army's work in Cobalt. He will be accompanied by his wife. The two younger boys will remain in this district and will continue to reside with Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Leggott, Chemong road.

GOES TO ST. JOHN

Joseph C. Hughes, a Peterborough boy who commenced a long association with the Prudential Insurance Company as an agent in this city under Superintendent John I. Allen to-day takes over the post of superintendent at St. John, New Brunswick. Mr. Hughes' first promotion in the company was to the position of assistant superintendent in charge of the Orillia office detached from Peterborough. The company later assigned him the position of inspector for the entire Dominion.

Mr. Hughes is a brother of Chris. Hughes, manager of the Grafton store.

19¼ POUND MUSKIE

The fisherman's chief thrill came to J. W. Gravestock, president of the local Fish and Game Association, over the week-end at Pigeon Lake. Casting with only a light line, Mr. Gravestock hooked a 19¼ pound muskie. The big fish put up a great battle and it was only after forty minutes of patient effort that the city's leading Waltonion succeeded in getting it into the boat. This constitutes something of a fishing record for the district.

YOUTH IS GIVEN YEAR FOR THEFT

Stole Automombile From in Front of Murray Street Church.

OWNER FINDS BOY.

One year in the Ontario Reformatory was the sentence meted out to a young man of 18, by Police Magistrate Langley this morning for the theft of a motor car.

He stole Roland Bradfield's car from in front of the Murray street Baptist church on Sunday morning while the owner was in the church. Mr. Bradfield informed the police, and then went in search of the car himself. He found the car being gaily driven around the north end by the boy, and capturing him, he took him to the police station. The defendant pleaded guilty to the theft this morning.

It was shown that he had had several previous convictions of a similar nature, and police stated that they could do nothing with him.

Two Otonabee young men sheepishly pleaded guilty to being intoxicated in a public place, and were fined the usual $10 and costs.

In Juvenile Court two lads, aged 12 and 13, were charged with stealing cigarettes and chocolate from the warehouse of the Haboco Stores. It was their first offence and after a severe warning from the magistrate they were remanded indefinitely.

SPECIAL SPEAKERS AT BETHANY TABERNACLE

During the absence of the pastor, Rec. G. H. Johnson, who will be away for the next two Sundays, the pulpit will be ably supplied by two outstanding speakers. On Aug. 24th Rev. W. G. Davis formerly chairman of the Alliance work in Central China, will be present. Mr. Davis' message is rich in spiritual experience due to his exceptional ministry for the last 25 years through China. He understands the conditions there as well as any man does and his leadership among our missionaries as well as the native workers has graciously enabled him to speak most helpful to Canadian audiences both on work in China and then, too, to give most inspiring massages from the Word.

On Sunday, August 31st, Rev. J. D. Williams, the Superintendent of the Eastern Canadian Alliance work, will be the speaker. Many now appreciate the ministry of our dear brother. He has been in a place of leadership in the Alliance for many years, is a member of our Official Board and together with his wife they have had an effectual ministry throughout not only the home land but also in many foreign countries and heathen lands. His messages along the deeper life have been especially blessed to all who have been privilaged to hear him. Come and enjoy these special services. The Midweek prayer meetings will be in charge of local brethren namely: Mr. G. Stenton, Mr. Hiscox and Mr. A. J. Johnston. The Pastor will resume his duties beginning the first Sunday in September.

GREAT CANADIAN FUTURE IS SEEN AT BAR SESSION

15TH MEET CLOSES

Legal Lights of Britain, France and U. S. Express Friendship.

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 18. (By Thomas Green, C. P. Staff Correspondent)—With the "valedictory to the bar" by Premier R. B. Bennett, a visualisation of a future Canada as the centre of the Empire by Hon. Hugh Guthrie, Minister of Justice, a declaration by Chief Justice Hazen of New Brunswick that the Union Jack was the flag for Canada, an assertion by Hon. N. W. Rowell that the "Monarchy was the real keystone of the Empire" and with expressions of friendship from the judiciary and legal profession of the British Isles, France and the United States, the fifteenth annual meeting of the Canadian Bar Association concluded Saturday night. Tribute to the work of the Imperial Privy Council was paid by several speakers.

Much Yet to Be Done

In his valedictory address, Premier Bennett had references for the work of the Commissioners of the Association on uniformity of legislation in Canada. "The commission on laws" the Prime Minister declared," are now providing for legislation that will ensure uniformity of statue law and uniformity in other matters in all the Provinces of this Dominion, but there is yet much to be done". Premier Bennett, who by reason of his new official duties declined with regret to continue in office as President of the Association proceeded: "Now it remains for me to say farewell to our distinguished guests. This is my valedictory at the bar. I say that somewhat sadly, for life for me has been very pleasant in the practice of my profession, which has done great things for me. I shall endeavour to discharge my duties to it."

Mr. Guthrie told his audience of Canada's dream of the future. "Can you" he asked, "visualize the picture as we see it. Our dreams have certainly been more slow in materializing that we anticipate, but our dream is in the future, not perhaps of this generation or the next, but in the third or fourth, if we all hold true in this great Empire, Canada will be the throbbing centre of the whole system, the high road from one part of the Empire to the other, the centre of population and the centre of commerce possibly of wealth and a place where, as Sir John Simon said, after we have considered Indian problems, perhaps east and west will meet, Rudyard Kipling notwithstanding.

FIRE RAZES WESTON WOOL SHIPPING PLANT

ALARM SOUNDED ONLY AFTER FIRE BEYOND CONTROL

$500,000 DAMAGE.

Mysterious Morning Fire Defies Efforts of Four Brigades.

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 19. (C.P.)—Damage estimated at $500,000 was caused by a fire which completely destroyed the building and stock of the Canadian Co-Operative Wool Growers near Weston early to-day.

Charred and crumpled walls containing 3,000,000 pounds of water-soaked wool were all that remained of the structure after firemen had finally conquered the blaze which was discovered at 4.30 a.m. at which time it is thought to have been going for an hour and a half.

Officials were at a loss to determine the cause of the fire.

The wool and property loss is said to be well covered by insurance. Ten streams of water were poured on the building by fire crews from a nearby manufacturing plant and from Weston, Silverthorn, Mount Dennis and North York, neighboring municipalities.

No Night Watchman

"We did not have a night watchman. It was not considered necessary as everything was in order in the interior and there was not anything to take fire" said B. I. Hollindrake, plant superintendent.

"It's all a mystery to me" said Mr. Hollindrake, "it could not have been the electric wiring as we turn off our main switch every night. There are so many conflicting stories I dont' know where it started."

"It was the hottest fire I ever attended," said a Weston fireman. A railway car stationed on the siding beside the building was on fire when he arrived, he said, and the firemen pushed it to safety. The charred side of the car bore out this statement.

THREE SUDBURY MEN ARE GIVEN FINE OF $20

SUDBURY, Ont., Aug. 19.—(CP)—Charged with distributing seditious literature Urno Paliviro, William Palawich and Nick Tkach, who were remanded from August 14, appeared again this morning and were sentenced to pay a fine of $20 and costs or one month. Deciding the case, the Bench remarked that the literature in question contravenes the law in advocating the Indian revolution and the changing of Government by force.

COUNTERFEIT $10 BILLS ON MARKET

Description of Spurious Bank of Nova Scotia Money Given in Warning.

NUMBERS POORLY DONE.

OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 19.—(CP)—Counterfeit Bank of Nova Scotia ten dollar bills are beings circulated in Canada, according to a warning issued by the Post Office Department. The spurious money is described as follows:

"The counterfeit is a photographic copy of the front of the genuine note issue of January 2nd, 1929, serial letter "A". In appearance it is darker and is slightly blurred. The back is of the 1924 issue but of a deeper blue and is quite blurred. The numbers, which are crudely executed, are about the same height but wider, and the figures 20082, on one counterfeit already presented take up slightly more space than on the genuine bill. In size one of the fictitious notes presented is about one sixteenth of an inch smaller than the genuine, while another is the correct size. The paper is rather greasy and has a shiny finish."

DOMINION STATUS PRICE OF PEACE IS GANDHI'S PLAN

Rumor Offer Made in Letter to Viceroy Lord Irwin.

SENT FROM PRISON.

Feeling Prevails That News of Great Importance Ready to Break.

LONDON, Eng., Aug. 19. (C.P.)—Reports from India that the Mahatma Gandhi had offered peace in his letter to the Viceroy if Lord Irwin and the British Government will pledge Dominion status for India at the forthcoming Round Table Conference, to-day aroused deep interest in official quarters where news of major importance was expected to be announced within 48 hours.

After the conferences of last week in the yard jail at Poona the leader of the civil disobedience forces in India wrote a letter which was supposed to embody the terms upon which he would consent to a cessation of the activities of his volunteers.

Report Leaked Out

It was pointed out to-day that if reports as to the nature of the Mahatma's peace offering were true they must have evanated from a leak on the part of some interested party since Gandhi's communication to the Viceroy was written in prison and was to be delivered to-day.

There was said to be a growing feeling in exceptionally well-informed quarters that "big news" from India could not be long delayed, this was taken to mean only that the Gandhi letter would be published with its assent or refusal. The possibility that the letter would contain announcement of cessation of the non-cooperative movement on the part of the Nationalists received some credence.

RUMOR BYNG MAY COME TO CANADA

Suggestion, if Made By Bennett, of Vice Regal Post Likely Be Declined.

WARRIOR SEEKS REST.

(By Thomas T. Champion, C. P. Staff Correspondent.

LONDON, Eng., August 19. — The report from Ottawa that the Right Hon. R. B. Bennett, Prime Minister of Canada, will suggest to the British Government when he is here at the Imperial Conference that Lord Byng of Vimy, would be the most popular choice for Canada's next Governor-General, is received rather sceptically here. Nobody in London, of course, professes to know Mr. Bennett's intentions, but Lord Byng's friends are fairly confident that the prospect of returning to the Vice-Regal post at Ottawa, inviting though it might appear, would have to be put aside.

Lord Byng, it is pointed out, had the full intention when he concluded his gubernatorial term in the Dominion of taking a long rest. Within less than two years he was called from his rest billet in Essex on the entreaty of the highest quarter to assume command of the London Metropolitan Police, and to conduct the reorganization of this body of 20,000—a reorganization for which there was crying need.

The noted soldier's work in this connection resulted in a breakdown, which necessitated a voyage to South Africa. Lord Byng is now back at Scotland Yard, and there is no indication that he considers his work finished there. But when he does leave the Yard it would scarcely be conceivable that he would accept the duties of another onerous post.

Don Bradman Adds Another Century to His List of Three Figure Innings.

LONDON, Eng., Aug. 19 (Canadian Press Cable)—After several halts due to rain and bad light Australia fought their way to-day to within two runs of England's first innings total of 405 in the cricket test match at the Kennington oval. Australia had still seven wickets in hand at close of play to-day and were therefore in a very strong position.

During the morning hours when normal play was possible, Don Bradman, Australia's prolific run-getter, added another century to his list of three figure test match innings.

This was the third days' play and the match which the International championship hinges must be played to a finish. A visitor to the match this afternoon was the Prince of Wales, who was introduced to the players on the teams.

It was reported at the meeting that three patients were admitted to the Isolation Hospital during July. Two were infantile paralysis and the other scarlet fever. The three were city cases.

The Board received many applications for the installation of sanitary conveniences in residences by the city on the city payment plan. A number of final orders were issued for the immediate installation of sanitary conveniences, by those who have been previously warned.

Child Beater Is Given $50 Fine

Page was fined $50 and costs or 30 days in jail by the Magistrate who regretted the lash was not provided for such cases. The wife of accused testified that the child "was a great screamer," and had "let her have it" with his fist".

REV. W. S. EDGAR RESIGNS CHARGE

TAKES EFFECT SEPT. 21

After close on eight years as minister of Gilmour Memorial Church, Rev. W. S. Edgar announced his resignation at the close of the morning service last Sunday, the resignation to take effect on September 21. Mr. Edgar proposes to follow a further course of studies at Crozer Theological Seminary, Chester, Pennsylvania.

In announcing his decision Mr. Edgar referred to the happy relationships that have existed between himself and the congregation and made acknowledgment of the kindness of the members during his service as pastor. He had enjoyed ministering to the congregation and would follow with interest the fortunes of the church of which he had such pleasant memories.

Mr. Edgar, who had held several pastorates in Britain, came to Canada over eight years ago, and Gilmour Memorial Church was his first charge on this side of the Atlantic. He was president of the Peterborough Baptist Association in 1926 and president of Peterborough Ministerial Association in 1927. A native of Scotland he has long been a favorite with the Scots of Peterborough and has been in demand as a speaker at Scottish functions. He is a noted checker player, has taken part in several Dominion checker champion ships, and has represented both Peterborough and Toronto in inter-city checker contests.

Four years ago Mr. Edgar received a call from Cheltenham Baptist church, which he declined. He lost his wife more than a year ago, and this fact had something to do with his decision announced this week.

NEGRO PRISONER HANGED BY MOB OF MASKED MEN

Captive Held For Assault on Two Young White Girls.

JAIL STORMED.

Masked Lynchers Quietly Disappear After Body Filled With Bullets.

TARBORO, N.C., Aug. 19. — Mob violence, dormant in North Carolina since 1921, reared its head again early to-day and left swinging from a tree the bullet-riddled body of Oliver Moore, 29 year old negro, who was charged with criminally assaulting two small white girls.

Moore was taken from the Edgecombe county jail here shortly after midnight by a mob of 200 masked men who gained entrance to the building by a ruse and to the negro's cell at the point of pistols.

Silently the man walked down the corridor to his fate. On every side of him quiet men handled pistols, while others kept the deputy guarded.

Bundling Moore into one of 50 waiting automobiles, the mob carried him to his home, approximately 100 yards across the line in Wilson county and 15 miles from here. There they strung him to a tree.

As his body writhed and swayed as the negro hung by his neck, scores of bullets were fired at him. When the last shot had found its mark, the crowd quietly dispersed.

Moore was given a preliminary hearing yesterday afternoon on a charge of assaulting Ethel Morgan 5, and Luckie Morgan 7, little daughters of an Edgecombe county farmer. He waived examination and was ordered held for trial without bond.

12 HOURS AFTER THE HOLD-UP IN TORONTO YOUNG MAN GIVEN 3 YEARS AND 10 LASHES

Within 24 Hours After Two Toronto Men Who Robbed Hamilton Bank Both Had Started on the Long Journey Towards Expiating Their Sins.

HAMILTON, Ont., August 19. — The wheels of Justice moved with lightning like rapidity for John Nevins and Norman Sherratt of Toronto, to-day.

In police court they pleaded guilty to a charge of robbing the Royal Bank here at 1 o'clock yesterday, while armed, and also admitted stealing an automobile.

They were sentenced to six years in Portsmouth Penitentiary each, and thirty lashes, on the charge of robbery. To this was added 2 years in prison for the car theft, the terms to run consecutively.

Thus within less than 24 hours after their offense had been committed, Nevins and Sherratt had started on the long journey towards expiating their sins.

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 19 (By the Canadian Press).—Twelve hours after the hold-up of a local drug store, Lance Ramesbotton pleaded guilty to robbery while armed, in connection with the offense, and was sentenced to three years in Portsmouth Penitentiary plus ten lashes, in police court here to-day.

His wife, Violet Ramesbotton, who also pleaded guilty, was remanded for sentence. The pair were arrested within half an hour of the robbery by two alert citizens who took up the chase. A confederate who was seen escaping is still at large.

The Ramesbottoms were married three years ago in Guelph, Ont. The wife is now only 19 years of age and her husband, 25. In a confession to the police Mrs. Ramesbottom told of careful plans for the hold-up of a drug store which terminated in their capture soon after the robbery when the car stalled in which they tried to make their escape. They got only $21 from the druggist.

As far as police here know, the couple have no previous court record.

TONNAGE LOWER IN SAULT CANAL

Main Canadian Canals Show Wheat Increase of 205,120 Tons.

OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 19 (C.P.) — With the exception of the Sault Ste. BRITISH AIR MINISTRY PLANS TO ESTABLISH AIRSHIP ROUTE

AFTER R-101 TESTS.

LONDON, Eng., Aug. 19.—(A.P.)—An Air Ministry bulletin published to-day said that the British Government intended eventually to establish a regular trans-Atlantic air service between Cardington, where the dirigible R-100, is kept, Montreal and New York.

"When sufficient experience has been accumulated with the airships R-100 and R-101, it is intended to organize regular services between the three cities," the bulletin said, adding that aircraft development has brought trans-Atlantic flights into the realm of regular air routes and that all-year-round service is foreseen.

Three "regular" routes are mentioned. The northern route would be by way of Cape Farewell, Greenland, the direct route via Newfoundland, and the southerly route via the Azores. Another route to Vancouver via the Faroe Islands, Iceland and Greenland, is being considered.

Prisoners Made Splendid Showing

(Special to The Examiner)

KINGSTON, Ont., Aug. 19.—The inmates of the Portsmouth penitentiary who wrote at recent departmental examinations on matriculation subjects came off finely.

In Lower School three tried, all passed. In Middle School two wrote on subjects, one failed. In Upper School work five wrote and all passed their subjects, two of candidates got second class honors, two got first class honors. At entrance examinations in June seven wrote and every one passed. The record is an enviable one and equal to anything in the province.

ONTARIO PICTURE IS BEING REMADE

"Carry On Sergeant" to Return Under New Title—Being Re-shot.

START NEW INDUSTRY.

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 19.—(CP)—"Carry on sergeant', the Ontario made was picture which failed to pay profits on its cost of over half a million dollars, is to be brought back to the screen as the initial move in an attempt to start a motion picture industry in the province.

But the Bruce Bairnsfather drama of the war will not be the same picture that drew a storm of publicity most of it unfavorable, when it was shown in Toronto and other cities of Ontario two years ago. It will be re-edited re-vamped and re-shot with a new title and a new theme.

G. W. Brownbridge, who is producing a series of 26 scenic pictures for the Ontario Government, is the man behind the attempt to save

Hiking Licenses

This license craze is gaining ground rapidly as was conclusively shown in the police station this morning, much to the amusement of the burly sergeant on duty.

Two local youths entered the station and seriously asked: "Is this where you get your hiking license?"

"Hiking license?" queried the sergeant, "What do you mean?"

"Well, we're going on a hike and we understand we must have a license," was the reply.

"That's funny," stated the sergeant, "You have to have a license for driving a car, drinking, owning a dog and getting married, but I haven't yet heard that they compelled you to get a license for taking a stroll. No, we haven't any walking licenses to-day.

DEATH TUNNEL OF BLAKEBURN MINE YIELDS 10 MORE VICTIMS' BODIES

Unfortunate Miners Found Lying One After Another on Shaft Slope.

SUCCUMBED TO GAS.

Pithead, Blakeburn Mine, Coalmont, B.C., Aug. 29. (C. P.) — Blakeburn Mine last night gave up ten more bodies of miners who were entombed in last Wednesday's explosion.

Rescuers fighting their way down into the mine after a temporary halt over the week-end, when an added hazard of fire was fought off, came across the additional bodies shortly before midnight last night.

The bodies were lying one after another on No. 1 slope. They are unmarked, and evidently the miners were victims of the deadly after-damp rather than the force of the explosion itself. On only one body were the clothes slightly burned. The last body of the ten was about 4,000 feet from the mine entrance.

It will probably be several days before the bodies can be brought to the surface, owing to several cave-ins, which partially block the slope, and until then, positive identification cannot be made.

The ill-fated coal mine has now yielded 13 bodies. One man was rescued alive, and of the 46 miners who were in the workings at the time of the disaster, the positive fate of 32 is still Blakeburn's secret.

Rescuers who made the discovery of the additional victims last night, reported upon their return to the surface that the air was good. The workings are still in a dangerous condition however, as the main passage has not yet been cleared.

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 19.—(CP)—Justice McEvoy handed down judgment today at Osgoode Hall awarding the town of Cobourg $3,200 of its $5,000 claim against Dominion of Canada Guarantee and Accident Insurance Co., for losses incurred by the alleged defalcations of a former tax collector.

Some information has been secured by police that may lead to the identification of one of the strangest characters ever to grace the local courts. Since his apprehension more than a week ago by Constable J. Evans of the C. P. R. on a charge of vagrancy this man has not spoken a word. He also showed complete ignorance of sign and written language and the baffled police were forced to refer to him as 'John Doe'

Bank and Drug Store Bandits Are Captured

ITALIAN GIRL'S TIP RESULTS IN 2 ARRESTS

Fast Detective Work Leads to Recovery of $300 Hamilton Loot

DESCRIPTION BROADCAST.

Youths Capture Man and Wife After Hold-up in Toronto Drug Store.

TORONTO, Ont., August 19 (C.P.)—That Hamilton and Toronto police are very much on their toes has been discovered by three men and one woman who yesterday participated in hold-ups in these cities.

Norman Sherratt, taxi driver, and Jack Nevins, truck driver, both of Toronto, are in the police cells at Hamilton to-day, having been captured three hours after allegedly holding up and robbing the Barton and Lotteridge Streets branch of the Royal Bank of Canada of $3,0[illegible] in that city yesterday.

Drug Store Hold-up Fails.

Even more short-lived was the freedom of Lance Ramesbottom and his wife Violet who, aided by a third confederate, held up a Toronto drug store, took $27 from the cash register, and then hastened out to a motor car they had allegedly stolen. They had scarcely gone a block when the car stopped through lack of gas and two youths, William Applegath, 19, and James Sorely, 19, gave chase, and caught Ramesbottom and his wife after a run through back lanes. The third occupant of the car escaped.

Nearly all the loot taken from the Hamilton bank has been recovered, and police of that city are to-day giving credit to Vera Mustacci, dark-eyed new Canadian miss of 19 summers for capture of the alleged bandits. Standing on the street she saw a speeding car suddenly pull up to a parked machine and two men alight and transfer bundles of currency. The pair then hurried away in the car that had been parked. Suspecting something was amiss, the girl took the license number and hurried to the nearest police station to report the incident. Her information proved of great help, for shortly after the car number was flashed throughout Hamilton and district. The machine was stopped and Sherratt arrested. In his possession was found $166.

Caught in Toronto.

Nevin, who lives in the same Toronto address as Sherratt, was arrested in Toronto, and was said to have had cash upon him amounting to more than $2,130. Sherratt had $166 upon him when he was apprehended.

Before being brought back from Toronto last night by Detectives Thompson and Gaylard, Nevin is alleged to have admitted he and Sherratt had entered a grocery store at Ashdale and Applegrove Avenues, Toronto, last Friday night, and robbed Edward J. Wood of $20.

WINDSOR URGES FOREIGN CAR BAN

4,400 WITHOUT WORK.

WINDSOR, Ont., Aug. 19 (C.P.)—An outright ban on importation into Canada of motor cars completely manufactured outside the Dominion is sought from the Federal Government at Ottawa by officials of Windsor and seven of its adjoining municipalities. The Canadian Government also will be asked to conduct a survey of the motor-car industry with a view to determining what additional manufacture of motor parts can be undertaken to advantage in the Dominion. The two proposals were included in a resolution addressed to the new administration at Ottawa which were adopted by heads of the Border municipalities at a joint conference called to consider the present unemployment situation in the light of reports indicating that approximately 4,400 men are out of work in Windsor's metropolitan district.

TONG LEADERS TO MAKE PEACE

New York Police Give Deportation as Only Other Alternative.

FOUR BEEN SHOT.

NEW YORK, Aug. 19—Police Commissioner Edgar Mulrooney told Chinese tong leaders yesterday that all quarrels must be patched up or the culprits will be deported.

The pronouncement came in the middle of a heated argument, in which the leaders of two factions were explaining why they were in the right and why the others were wrong. Four men were shot in a poolroom Sunday night when six tong rivals emptied revolvers through the windows and doors.

Deny R-100 May Call for Bennett

LONDON, Eng., Aug. 19.—(C P)—The Rt. Hon. RADIO AND PLANE USED IN FINDING YOUNG CANOEISTS

Ontario Forestry Pilot Discovers Capitalist's Sons at Lake Kopikik.

OVERDUE WEEKS.

Lads With Guide Had Taken Little Side Trip in Ontario Wilds.

SIOUX LOOKOUT, Ont., Aug. 19.—(C. P.) — An aeroplane of the Ontario Forestry Air Service has located Roger and Bruce Manternach, young Connecticut adventurers, believed to be lost in the North country. A radiogram received here last night stated that the sons of M. C. Manternach, Hartford, Conn., capitalist, are safe at Lake Kapikik, near Cat Lake, about 150 miles north of Sioux Lookout.

Just as a special search party was ready to start out upon the 600-mile lake-and-river trail over which the boys and their guide were to travel, came the radio flash saying that the youngsters had taken a side trip on their own initiative. The unexpected move threw them out of communication with their courier, and gave rise to a belief that they had met with some mishap in the Ontario wilds.

Last night Jack Langnickel, of Sioux Lookout and New York, through whom the wealthy Americans had arranged to travel by canoe into the North country, announced that he would proceed immediately to Lake Kapikik. He said that the boys and their guide, who are well supplied with food, would be brought back to town within two or three days.

Air Cruise of 250 Miles.

It was Pilot Harvey of the Ontario Forest Patrol service who found the party after a 250-mile air cruise. His radio information of their whereabouts indicated they had journeyed about 400 miles by canoe, having covered about three quarters of their projected trip. The canoe journey began at Ombabika, 150 miles east of Sioux Lookout on the Canadian National Railways.

From Ombabika, the boys—Roger is 18 and Bruce three years younger—with their guide, had travelled northward down the narrow Omsbabika and Ogoki Rivers, until they reached the mighty Albany River, flowing westward from Hudson Bay. Westward along the rapid Albany they paddled, paralleling the Canadian National Railways line, but more than 100 miles north, until they reached Lake St. Joseph.

After traversing the treacherous expanses of St. Joseph, where it had been believed they might have been drowned in a squall, the canoeists pushed on northwest up Cat River to Cat Lake, in far west Ontario. It is near here they are waiting—at Lake Kapikik—in the midst of a wild rolling country, years ago burned over, and now dotted with new-growth spruce and jackpine.

GOVERNOR NAMED TO BE MURDERED

Publisher, Politician and Real Estate Dealer in Florida Plot.

WARRANTS ISSUED.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Aug. 19 — Charges and counter-charges reverberated yesterday as an aftermath of the arrest of three men in connection with a reputed plot to assassinate Governor Doyle E. Carlton, of Florida.

Fred O. Eberhardt, publisher and editor of The Talahassee State News; Frank Ralls, former political campaigner for Carlton, and Henry Halsema, Jacksonville real estate operator, were named in a warrant charging conspiracy to procure the assassination. They were arrested here on Saturday night.

Before leaving his cell after posting $500 bond on the charge, which is a misdemeanor in this State, Eberhardt declared the arrests "part of a political plot." The publisher, who has waged a continuous and bitter editorial campaign against the Carlton administration, termed the case "Just a cheap bid for publicity."

Meanwhile, Sheriff W. B. Cahoon, whose deputy, C. E. Hooks, swore to the warrant accusing the three men, remained silent about details of the reputed plot. The warrant charged that the "trio, with divers other persons whose names are unknown," plotted to hire a gunman to kill the Governor. While admitting that the investigation was going forward, the Sheriff said he expected no more arrests immediately.

SIR GEO. PERLEY NAMED TO TAKE BENNETT'S PLACE

Will Have Control While Prime Minister Absent From Capital.

TO VISIT CALGARY.

Ministers Return to Ridings After Cabinet Council To-day.

OTTAWA, Aug. 19 (C.P.)—Sir George Perley, Minister without portfolio and war-time Canadian High Commissioner in London, will be acting Prime Minister in the absence of Premier R. B. Bennett from the Capital. Announcement to this effect was made last night by the Prime Minister prior to his departure for his wesern hame in Calgary. Premier Bennett had no further statement to make following a sitting of the Cabinet. In all probability, the Prime Minister will be away for ten days. His visit to Calgary will be the first since the general election and his assumption of the office of Premier.

Council will meet again to-day, presided over by Sir George, who in order of precedence in the Cabinet ranks next to Premier Bennett. Many of the remaining ministers will then depart for their constituencies for nomination day on August 26. As Sir George is minister without portfolio, the Dominion Election Act does not call for any re-elections as in the case of ministers chosen with portfolios.

No Harbor Appointments

No appointment of the personnel of the Montreal Harbor Commission has yet been made. For nearly three weeks, J. H. Rainville of Montreal has been mentioned as probable chairman of that body, and doubtless selections will be officially made shortly to replace the board which has resigned. Senator W. L. McDougald was chairman of the former body.

There is no official comment available on the reported unofficial impression of disappointment in England that restriction of immigration by Canada might have been deferred until after the Imperial conference. But in political circles there is the feeling that the step taken a few days ago to restrict immigration from the countries of Europe is in keeping with other action by the administration to alleviate unemployment in this country.

BIG LAND DEALS PUZZLE BORDER

Rumor Oil or Golden-rod Rubber Behind Wallaceburg Options.

ALL FARMING LAND.

WINDSOR, Aug. 19.—Mystery still surrounds the purpose for which the Border Properties Limited is tying up much valuable real estate in the vicinity of Wallaceburg. That contracts for the purchase of land in this vicinity are being made was admitted yesterday by Walter S. Gurd, Detroit accountant, who entered a denial as to all of the guesses that are being made as to the purpose of the options being taken.

It was admitted that the form of the contracts for land was virtually an option, with a small deposit being paid down. The properties are all farming land, and the options permit the farmers to get off their crops, but say nothing about planting again.

The favorite guess is that there is oil in the vicinity. In fact, a well was drilled in Sombra Township before the activity in options began, but was immediately capped. Another is to the effect that golden-rod is to be grown in order to make synthetic rubber, while still another is that the land is wanted for a Mennonite colony. The oil theory is, however, the one most generally accepted.

TRUCK DRIVER RUNS AMUCK

CASE IS REMANDED

LINDSAY, Aug. 19.—(Examiner Correspondence).—Headley Wasson, a Toronto truck driver, created quite a furore here on Saturday night when he ran amuck on the main drive while under the influence of liquor. He made an attack on J. P. Hennessey, a local man, and in order to get at his victim smashed a window in Hennessey's car, sustaining a long, deep cut in his arm. The flying glass severed a vein in Hennessey's hand. His clothes were also torn by the assailant.

When taken to the police station Wasson, after being placed in the cell, made a fire of waste paper in the apartment and was threatened with death from flames until the police rescued him.

Yesterday morning he appeared in court, but the case was adjourned for a week.

High time to crush the growing menace.

FERRY UPSETS FOUR DROWNED

Parents and Babe Perish in Connecticut River Trapped in Auto.

BALANCE UNEVEN.

WESTMORELAND, N.H., Aug. 19—Four persons, including a baby, drowned when a ferry plying the Connecticut River from East Putney, Vt., to Westmoreland, upset and sank in mid-stream last night. There were two automobiles on the ferry.

The drowned were Mr. and Mrs. Ray Austin, a young couple, and their one-year-old baby, and William Clark, aged 60, all of Putney, Vt. The Austin family was trapped in their automobile as it slipped off the careening ferry, Clark was a foot passenger. Thomas Carpenter, another foot passenger, and Harry Pierce, driver of the other car aboard, swam ashore.

The ferry, an old-fashioned type propelled by a cable which was pulled by hand from the deck, showed a decided list as it left the East Putney shore, due to the uneven balance caused by the automobiles being on one side. It tipped over in mid-stream.

POLICE RIDDLE CHICAGO CAFE

Machine Guns and Tear Gas Bombs Used to Bring Vagrant Out.

HAD SHOT PROPRIETOR.

CHICAGO, Ill., August 19. — Hundreds of passers-by on busy West Madison Street, looked on to-day while a dozen policemen poured pistol and machine gun fire into a combination restaurant-saloon in a futile effort to rout a vagrant who had slain the proprietor during an argument.

Tear bombs finally brought out the slayer, who gave his name as George Hoffman, a Mexican. His victim was Isaac Protkin.

Witnesses said the men had argued, and that Hoffman had suddenly drawn a pistol and shot Protkin through the head. The patrons fled and called the police, while Hoffman barricaded himself in a rear room.

Officers found the rear door locked, and entering the front were met by shots. They retreated and began systematic firing into the building, but Hoffman stood firm. The tear bombs then subdued him.

LIQUOR VESSEL LEAVES WINDSOR

Vedas, Carrying 15,000 Cases of Beer, Heads For Port Arthur.

DRAYTON IS MUM.

WINDSOR, Ont., Aug. 19 (C.P.)—The steamer Vedas, which was seized on Friday last by Imperial Revenue Department officials and has been tied up at a dock here since then, left port late yesterday. She is bound for her original destination, Port Arthur.

The vessel carried about 15,000 cases of beer loaded at Montreal and cleared for Port Arthur, presumably for Government Liquor Stores sales.

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 19.—"I know nothing about the ship, have no idea what the cargo is, nor whither bound," said Sir Henry Drayton, chairman of the Ontario Liquor Control Board, when queried here as to whether the steamer Vedas, held by Imperial Revenue Department officials at Windsor since last Friday and released yesterday, is used for transporting liquor for the Government Liquor Stores.

PRIMATE INJURED IN SERIOUS CRASH

Auto Ditched as Cardinal Rouleau Returning From Eucharistic Congress.

RESTING EASILY.

QUEBEC, Aug. 19.—Seriously injured yesterday in an automobile accident, his Eminence Cardinal Rouleau, Primate of the Roman Catholic Church in Canada and one of the most distinguished members of the Sacred College, was resting easily last evening at the Hotel Dieu, and reports were that a slight improvement in his condition had been noticed within the last few hours.

Returning from Thetford Mines, where he had presided over ceremonies which marked the regional Eucharistic Congress and also the inauguration of a hospital, his Eminence, who was the guest of Commander Ernest Cote in the latter's automobile, suffered an accident so serious that fear was entertained for a time of his recovery, and two medical attendants were constantly at his side. At midnight it was learned no immediate fear is entertained.

Tire Blows Out

The automobile, which was driven by Commander Ernest Cote's son, was near St. Henri, Levis County, when a tire blew out. The car overturned into the ditch. While Commander Cote and his son were more or less injured, Cardinal Rouleau suffered a broken bone in the neck and and his left shoulder was fractured. He was unconscious when found a short distance from the car. An ambulance rushed him to the Hotel Dieu.

FALL WHEAT HAS SPLENDID YIELD

Conditions Excellent For Storing of Grain and Stook Threshing.

POTATOES LIGHT.

TORONTO, August 19. (C.P.) — Harvesting operations are well advanced with an exceptionally good yield in fall wheat and spring grains, it was made known to-day in the weekly crop report of the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

Weather conditions for the storing of grain and stook threshing has been ideal, and general activity in that line is reported.

Crops, such as potatoes, beans, corn and tobacco, will have light yields, due to the lack of rain, and in some section growers report bean blossoms are falling off. Lack of rain also will affect the yield of all fruits, especially apples and grapes.

Pastures have been severely burned and many dairymen, especially in western Ontario, have had to resort to feeding their cattle grain and ensilage. This expense, in addition to the low price being paid for milk at the cheese factories, is causing the farmers some concern.

The shortage of pasture is also increasing the shipment of cattle and lambs with the result that many cattle will be sold at a loss.

CATARAQUI BAY ELEVATOR USED ONLY FOR STORAGE

KINGSTON, Ont., Aug. 19.—T. R. Enderby, General Manager of Canada Steamship Lines, which owns the new elevator at Cataraqui Bay has stated that due to delay in opening the Welland Canal, the elevator will this year be used for storage rather than a transfer point as was originally intended. When the canal is opened for large boats at the beginning of navigation in 1931, the elevator will then take its place as a transfer point for grain cargoes on Canada Steamship Lines boats. It is planned to fill the Kingston elevator with grain in October and November.

TORONTO PRODUCE

TORONTO, August 19. — Prices on the local butter market yesterday took another advance and small lots of Ontario No. 1 commanded 29c, with an occasional sale at 29½c and late in the day it appeared as if 29½c would be the steady quotation for Tuesday. This was a nice gain for the Ontario product over week-end prices but it was only in evidence on No. 1 as No. 2 Ontario remained around 27c to 27½c for ordinary lots, and with some sales at 28c for top scoring receipts.

Cream.

Churning cream prices were steady at 28c to 29c for special, 27c to 28c for No. 1, and 24c to 25c for No. 2 f.o.b. country points.

Eggs.

Ontario eggs, graded in free cases, were selling firm at 31½c for extras, 29½c for firsts, and 24c for seconds, and in comparison with this Western eggs—which included prairie supplies on spot—were sold at 32c for extras, 29c for firsts and 26c for seconds, which was ½c higher for Western extras and 2c better for seconds, but ½c lower than the price received for Ontario firsts. British Columba shipments were quoted 33c for extras, 1c for firsts, and 29c for pullet extras.

Country shippers were quoted steady prices at 29c for extras, 26c for firsts, and 22c for seconds, delivered, ungraded, cases returned. Retailers were asked 35c to 66c for extras in cartons, 33c to 34c for extras loose, 31c to 32 for first loose, and 26c to 27c for seconds loose.

MONTREAL PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, August 19. — A feature of the cash grain trade here yesterday was the easier feeling that developed for wheat and oats and values were reduced 2c per bushel. The demand was fair.

Owing to the steady rise in wholesale carlot levels last week butter prices to retailers were advanced 1c per pound to-day. Receipts were 17 boxes.

The cheese market was weaker and values were fractionally lower. Receipts were 1834 boxes.

The egg market was steady under a light demand. Receipts were 751 cases.

The potato market was unchanged at 70c to 75c per 80-pound bags of new locally grown stock.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Aug. 19.—Grain prices underwent a sharp all-around setback yesterday influenced largely by rains over corn fields in part of Illinois, Iowa, Nebraska and Kansas. Besides, big arrivals of newly harvested wheat at Minneapolis, 1,250 yesterday, led to increased selling of Chicago wheat future deliveries, and the United States wheat visible supply total piled up 8,519,000 bushels additional as compared with a week ago. Continued uncertainties relative to financing of the 1930 Canadian wheat crop tended also to pull values down.

Closing quotations on corn were unsettled, 2⅜c to 3¼c a bushel lower than Saturday's finish. Wheat closed heavy, 2¼c to 2⅞c down; oats, 1¼c to 1⅜c off, and provisions unchanged to 30 cents decline.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, August 19. — Wheat prices continued to slip on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange yesterday and at the low points were down about three cents from the previous close, with final quotations showing a net decline of 2½c to 2⅞c a bushel.

Lack of export demand, a minimum of speculative buying and fairly generous offerings in the deferred months particularly the December future, account for much of the weakness. Export sales were estimated at less than 250,000 bushels. Heavy selling at Chicago was another factor here.

Pit trade locally was not heavy and operations for the most part were of an unimportant character.

Demand for the various grades of cash wheat was only fair while coarse grains demand was indifferent and only low grade oats and barley for domestic use were traded to-day.

OBITUARY

ARCHIBALD ROLAND REYNOLDS

The funeral of the late Roland Reynolds, a former resident and prominent business men of Delisle, Saskatchewan, took place on Tuesday afternoon, and was largely attended.

Born at Frazerville forty-seven years ago, he lived with his parents till the age of eighteen, when he came West; he lived at Saskatoon for some time, moving to Scott, where he was agent for the McLaughlin Co. He also served two years as Mayor of Scott; later he came to Delisle, where he lived for fifteen years. He carried on a garage and implement business and was quite successful. Roland will be remembered by many a homesteader as well as those of Delisle as a good friend in time of trouble; many a kind and good ded he has done for the needy, and his loss is keenly felt by the people of Delisle.

About three years ago he rented his business here and left for Fawlf, Alberta, thinking to better his health. In Bawlf he bought a general store, but as his health did not improve he decided to try the East. He spent six weeks with his father this Spring and was improving, but business called him home. Shortly after his arrival home he left for Denver, Colorado, thinking the climate would do him good. It was on his way home, while still in North Dakota, that death overtook him. Mrs. Reynolds was with him when the end came, and accompanied the remains to Delisle.

Service was held in Christ Church, many being unable to gain admission. About thirty members of the local Masonic Lodge attended in a body. The Vicar, Rev. A. B. Sharples officiated, and his words were very comforting to those nearest and dearest to the departed. The casket was banked with floral tributes, testifying to the high esteem in which deceased was held. At the graveside the Masonic brethren took charge and the body was committed in the usual Masonic manner—a beautiful service.

"Roll" Reynolds was a keen and clean sport and his memory will be long remembered by those who associated with him in the various pastimes of which he was most fond. While here he served faithfully on the town council for a number of years, and it was never a matter of guessing as to his stand on the various municipal questions. He was a strong Conservative and a member of L.O.L. 46 Frazerville.

Besides his wife and son Archie he leaves to mourn his loss, his aged father, Archie Reynolds, 285 Dalhousie street, Peterborough, also two sisters, Tillie at home with her father, and Mrs. Harry Brown(Margaret), Brown street, and three brothers, Albert of Smith Township, Joseph of George street, and George of Sherbrooke street.

The deepest sympathy of the community is extended to the bereaved family in their trouble.—The Advocate, Delisle, Saskatchewan.

CLEMENT GORDON.

The funeral of the late Clement Gordon took place on Saturday morning from the family residence, 120 Lock Street, at 9 a.m. Requiem High Mass was sung at the Church of the Sacred Heart by Rev. J. J. O'Brien, who delivered an impressive oration on the life and character of the late Mr. Gordon.

The pall-bearers were D. de Laplante, L. D. Letellier, Ed. Feeley, John Coughlin, Frank Fairen, and John Gibson.

PAVING CONTRACT ABOUT COMPLETED

Warren Paving Company is Patching a Few Holes on Main Streets.

Work on Park Hill road was completed on Saturday last by the Warren Bituminous Paving Company. All that now remains is the small job of 'patching up' on certain sections of George street and on Charlotte street. The patching on Charlotte street has been rendered imperative owing to the fact that a certain section of newly laid pavement was torn up again to facilitate the connection of a sewer with a private residence. It is expected the Paving Company will have completed the entire contract towards the end of the present week.

A NEW ZEALAND GRIEVANCE

The declaration of Premier Forbes of New Zealand that unless Canada is prepared to purchase New Zealand butter the New Zealand Government may be compelled to consider the withdrawal of the application of the British preferential tariff on motor cars imported from Canada, cannot help but cause some anxiety to Canadians as a whole and the growing motor industry in particular. Canada in the past few years has built up a flourishing automobile trade with New Zealand, and the cancellation of this preference, according to leading automobile authorities in the Dominion, would mean the taking of this trade from the motor industries in Canada to those of the United States.

New Zealand at present is giving Canadian motor manufacturers the only preference worth while, except England, and it would be a setback to have this preference terminated. The treaty at present will end in October, and it is hoped that the Government will be mindful of the thriving motor industry in Canada when it discusses a new treaty.

The importation of New Zealand butter became almost a major issue in the recent general elections, but we are now reminded that New Zealand has its own economic problems, that she must be an exporter as well as a consumer. Our manufacturers of automobiles, newsprint, dairy equipment and other implements have been expanding their market in New Zealand, but Canada has taken steps to terminate butter imports from the sister Dominion. The King Government announced an increase of four cents a pound in the duty on butter, and the arrangement of a new treaty will be one of the responsibilities of the Conservative administration.

In drawing up this new treaty its terms must necessarily be satisfactory to both Canada and New Zealand, and apparently our antipodean customer intends to demand under the proposed agreement that we buy quantities of her butter. Apparently this issue of the elections is to re-echo again before any negotiations with New Zealand have been satisfactorily concluded.

APPRECIATION OF NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING.

The efficacy and value of newspaper advertising has received numerous tributes from business executives of late, including the Fox Film Corporation and De Forest-Crosley, Limited, manufacturers of radios. These are simply new testimonials of an established medium of business that is essential not only to modern merchandising but to virtually all enterprises dependent upon salesmanship.

Other old and new forms of advertising eventually emphasize the power of newspapers and prove their indispensibility.

The De Forest-Crosley Company has substantially increased its newspaper advertising contracts. J. A. Lowden, advertising manager of the company, recently stated at a conference of the company's sales organization in Toronto:

"I believe that newspapers are the greatest single factor in maintaining or restoring prosperity. Cut off newspaper advertising and business conditions are aggravated. Increase newspaper advertising and you have the greatest force towards the restoration of prosperity. Why is this? It is simply because advertising has told us what goods can be bought, where they can be purchased and, furthermore, creates a strong desire to buy them. When I buy a box of biscuits I am putting money in the hands of the biscuit-maker with which he may buy our product. In other words, each of us is a market for the other's product. If we buy freely, others buy freely and general prosperity exists, but if either one of us refuses to buy, then the wheels of industry slow down."

The daily newspaper is in every home, an intimate influence in every family, and the greater its community service and the stronger its position in the confidence of its readers, the more effective and valuable its advertising columns.

The Fox theatres will confine all their advertising henceforth to newspaper space. It is not only the best medium, but also the most economical.

TARIFF AND THE STEEL INDUSTRY.

Premier Bennett's abolition of the Tariff Board is not unanimously acclaimed even by Conservatives.

True, editors of newspapers supporting the Government have been of one commending voice. They praised the action of the Prime Minister, and derided the work of the board with sarcastic and rather superficial comment.

The disbanding of the Tariff Board was another promise fulfilled. It was another evidence of Mr. Bennett's quality of decisive action. According to these editorial opinions, the country was well rid of the enquiring if not inquisitorial methods of Mr. W. H. Moore, and as for R. J. Deachman, he was finally and effectually squelched.

The "yes" men have all written their assent; Liberal editors have been saddened and dubious. As for the independent electors, they have had no alternative but to wait and see what Hon. Mr. Bennett will bring forth as a substitute.

In the midst of this change and flux and editorial applause, Mr. J. T. McCall, of Montreal, a Conservative and one of Canada's leading business men, a director of Canada Iron Foundries, Limited, and president of Drummond, McCall & Co., Ltd., nationally known iron and steel merchants, writes to the Montreal Gazette (Cons.) a letter that is singularly different from the other Conservative comments which have been published since the Tariff Board was withdrawn.

Mr. McCall reviews the purposes of the board and remarks: "So far as these purposes are concerned, I think they have succeeded. They could hardly have done better had the board been appointed by a Conservative Government, with instructions to follow protective principles."

This prominent Conservative is writing about the board's enquiry into the steel industry in Canada. He may be quoted further as follows: "Everyone present—manufacturer and importer alike—felt that it was desirable to increase our imports from Great Britain in goods that we have hitherto brought in from foreign countries. In no case can I find that the British preference has been increased at the expense of any existing or even potential legitimate Canadian industry engaged in the manufacture of iron and steel."

Mr. McCall proceeds with advice to the Conservative Government not to raise the tariff without careful investigation. However, that subject and the steel trade clauses of the Dunning budget are other issues which Premier Bennett has to deal with.

The McCall letter to the Montreal Gazette tends to offset the rather questionable approval of "yes men" editors upon the minds of independent readers who have wondered about the work of the Tariff Board.

The deliberate approbation of a prominent business man and Conservative, and also Mr. McCall's counsel to the Government, sound more authentic and authoritative and altogether more impressive than a great deal of the hair-trigger press opinions that buried the Tariff Board without a funeral note.

A GERMAN VIEW OF INDIA.

"There is no Indian nation and there is no Indian people," writes Colin Ross in the Berlin "Vossiche Zeitung." "Both are figments of the imagination."

This correspondent explains that Europe is similar to India in size, the number of inhabitants and also in respect to the number and variety of nations, races, languages and religions, though India is composed of a rather more brilliant mixture than Europe.

Colin Ross is a German journalist born of British parents. "If one travels from the southern extremity of the Deccan to the foothills of the Himalayas one encounters people of every color, from the deepest black to the palest yellow, peoples of all religions, cultures and civilizations. This journey alone is enough to make one understand that there is no such thing as 'India' in the usual sense of the word.

"This 'India' as a single conception is a British creation, and even the idea of it would not exist if it were not for the fact that English is spoken throughout this entire subcontinent. Because English law, English police and English speech all exist throughout India the fiction has arisen that Canada can be regarded as a geographic unit. If an Indian from Madras meets an Indian from Calcutta he must speak English to make himself understood. If it were not for the English language the Indian Nationalists would have no way of exchanging ideas."

Pan-India needs strong foreign control to hold its quarrelsome national factions together, just as the Italians, Gauls, Greeks and Africans of the Roman Empire had to be kept in subjection by the Roman legions. And just as the Roman Empire disintegrated when the Romans grew weary of ruling, Mr. Ross observes, so will India disintegrate when the British reach the same state of mind. Not only would religious warfare threaten India if the British withdraw, but national wars are certain to break out between all the different nations and races.

Mr. Ross states that there is no bridge between such fundamentally opposite faiths as Hinduism and Islam. Nor does the western world understand the intense religiousness of India, especially of Hindu peoples.

"To the believing Hindus religion embodies the whole of life. It permeates everything. Not only are births, weddings and funerals sacramental occasions, but religion penetrates every corner of their daily activities. This profound feeling is by no means confined to any one part of the population; all the Hindus share it, even those with a European education. Try to imagine the religious convictions of a man who, in spite of this education and with a full knowledge of European hygiene, will bathe in the River Ganges at Benares with ten thousands people, many of whom are suffering from the most horrible contagious diseases. Not only do they bathe in this filthy river into which half-decayed corpses are thrown at all hours of the day and night, but they douse themselves thoroughly, drinking its waters as they do so."

All India seems to be united in a demand for dominion status or actual independence, Mr. Ross says, but we forget that we are hearing the voices of only one million of India's three hundred and twenty million inhabitants. This one million is articulate; the three hundred and nineteen millions are dumb, at least as far as foreigners are concerned. Even if one knows Hindustani it is not of much use since twenty languages and two hundred and twenty dialects are spoken throughout the country.

The great mass of the people would be satisfied under almost any rule, but the idea of a free India is a hypothesis that will work itself out of its own accord.

"Yet, as I have pointed out in my previous dispatches," Mr. Ross says, "if England loses India it will only be because she has first made up her mind to do so."

Further on in this illuminating sketch of conditions in India appears this statement: "If the British Government gives way to a national government the Indian problem will not be ended. It will only have begun."

OWNING ONE'S HOME.

The president of a United States savings and loan company is credited with the advice to young newlyweds not to think of owning their own home until they can make a down payment of at least 25 per cent. of the cost. Moreover, he says, they should never buy a house that exceeds in value three times the annual family income. The latter suggestion seems an eminently sensible one; but as to the former, if it were followed by all young couples, one cannot help wondering whether it would be good for them or in the best interests of the community in general. Few are in a position to pay in cash a fourth of the price of their home, and if the installment system is justifiable at all, it is surely more so in the case of securing possession of a home than in any other instance. A place to live in is a primary necessity. To own their own house should be the most coveted of all ambitions for young people on setting up their own establishment. "There is no place like home." The effort to purchase is beneficial, when the income is of a stable character. What is put into the home may be regarded as a good investment; there is not the same chance of it being lost, as would be the case if it were dissipated on extravagances or unwisely invested elsewhere. As a steadying influence home ownership may be placed alongside insurance; both breed habits of thrift and unselfishness which are as good for the purse as for the character. Young people should be advised to choose well before entering into any purchase; but not to worry too much if they are not able to finance it to the extent of a quarter of the price down in cash. The independence and comfort secured by ownership is well worth the effort entailed.—Hamilton Spectator.

The Office Hound

Dollar day comes this week, and you are urged to look for the elusive missed dollar.

A "mere woman" signing herself "Quo Vadis"—which is quite authentic Latin—writes us a nice letter saying she likes the new column, The Office Hound....Which bucks us no end, as they say in English school stories. She embarrasses us strangely, however, by a long discussion to the effect, "When is a bootlegger not a bootlegger?" We have handed the letter to the Vox Pop boys, in whose column you may see it if the gods are kind.

O—H

And as for the question of the bootlegger, we have no desire to tackle that. Many a better man has been known to Perrish in the attempt.

O—H

For the benefit of "Quo Vadis" and other Fundamentalists, we explain that our remark of Friday last anent our readers' deserting The Voice of the People for The Office Hound is not to be taken literally. We crave no tilt with the Advertising Department.

O—H

Little Horace wants to know if our "O——H" stands for "Oh, hell!" ....Oh, Horace! Hell went out of date years ago. We have miniature golf courses now.

Our friend, Casey, whose journalistic efforts have included several thousand obituary notices, has at last turned out the obituary of his dreams, he says. It reads....

The Examiner's make-up man topped The Office Hound yesterday with a picture of Maurice Dupre, new Cabinet Minister....Quite a break for Maurice.

O—H

Still, he did add a bit to our cosmopolitan atmosphere. He combines the best facial features of Adolph Menjou and Grover Whalen. The general effect is one of suavity—and God knows it's hard enough to preserve the sophisticated slant in these days of tree-sitting and miniature golf courses....Thanks, Maurice!

"The Taming of the Shrew' by Wm. Shakespeare with Additional Dialogue by Sam Taylor" was one of last season's squawkies. We don't know whether or not our Hollywood correspondent is correctly informed, but he writes us to say that the coming season will see: "'Lohengrin' by Richard Wagner with Additional Song Hits by Irving Berlin."

O—H

"Who is dis guy Dickie Waggoner, anyways?"

O—H

Our little playmate, Dead Beat, has been seeing things on the Port Hope highway. Yesterday he saw a cow in a kimono....Or a kow in a cimono....Or a kow in a kimono.... Two more drinks, the Hound remarks, and Dead Beat would have beheld the cow doing a red-hot black-bottom, attired in pale silk negligee....Or a pony in pyjamas ....Or a philly in a phedora.

O—H

A street killing, a near-riot at a gangster queen's funeral, and a spectacular bank hold-up were included in Hamilton's program to provide visiting Empire athletes with a little authentic American atmosphere.

False teeth worth $420,000 are exported from the U.S. to Canada annually, according to last night's Examiner....Just an example of the way American propaganda is being thrust down Canadian throats.

TEMPLE TOWER

By CAPTAIN DRUMMOND

He followed them into the hall, and under cover of some desultory conversation with young Scott I took stock of the bearded gentleman. He was a good looking man of his type, but the type was not one that appealed to me. His features were aquiline: his mouth full and red under the carefully trimmed beard. His clothes were perfect—rather too perfect, and though they carried the unmistakable stamp of an english tailor, in some strange way they served to accentuate the fact that the man who wore them was not an Englishman. His hands were beautifully kept: his pearl tie-pin was a little too ostentatious. In fact, the man was overdressed: he didn't fit into the picture. He gave the impression of the exquisite hero in musical comedy.

He looked up suddenly, and found my eyes were fixed on him.

"A very interesting part of your country," he said suavely.

"Most" I answered shortly, feeling a little annoyed at having been discovered staring at him.

"And this inn certainly belies the terrible reputation enjoyed by your country hotels abroad," he went on politely.

"A reputation which I fear is thoroughly deserved," I answered as affably as I could. After all, there was no good showing my feelings, though I found myself disliking his voice even more than his appearance. It was oily and sleek—if a voice can be sleek: and underlying it was another quality which for the moment I could not spot. Then I got it—it was cruelty: I could imagine the man opening his flat gold cigarette case, and extracting one with the utmost deliberation, just in order to keep his victim on the rack a little longer so that he might gloat over him.

We talked on casually, and all the time I was wondering what nationality he was. Italian possibly, though his English was faultless. The girl, in the two quick glimpses I had had of her might well have been Italian. And what was their relationship to one another? I knew that he was studying me also, though our conversation was confined to banalities: studying young Scott too with his heavy lidded eyes.

'Golf," he was saying, "is a game which I unfortunately have never had the opportunity to master."

"Master!" broke in Freckles with a laugh. "You're in the same boat as a good many other people."

"Do I believe," he said politely. "And yet it seems to the outsider that it should not be hard to hit a stationary ball with some degree of precision. Dear me—what's that?"

From outside had come a sudden crash, followed by a loud "Damnation," in Hugh's voice. I rose at once, followed by Scott, and went into the hall. Standing outside the door was Hugh staring upwards; at his feet, smashed to pieces on the cobble, was a heavy chimney-pot.

"Confound it," he exploded when he saw me, "this cursed thing only missed me by about a foot."

Attracted by the noise the boots had appeared, and two or three of the guests were staring out of the window.

"Very sorry, sir, I'm sure," said Boots scratching his head. "Such a thing ain't never happened before, not to my knowledge."

"And if it happens again somebody is going to get a thick ear," said Hugh grimly. He was still staring upwards and his mouth was set in a hard line. Then with a little shrug of his shoulders he entered the hotel.

"I must apologise for my language," he said with a smile to the clergyman.

"My dear sir," said the cleric benignly, "a mild expletive is surely permissible under the circumstances. Why, if that heavy thing had hit on the head you it might have stunned you."

Hugh gave a short laugh.

"As you say, it might have stunned me," he agreed, "But it didn't. I am going to wash, Peter, and then we might have some dinner."

We followed him to the lavatory, and he carefully closed the door.

"Every heard of a chimney-pot falling on a dead calm day?" he said quietly.

"What do you mean?" said Freckles looking startled.

"I strolled down to the bottom of the hill to see John off," went on Hugh. "And also to put him wise to one or two things. Then I came back, and was standing outside the door lighting a cigarette. A sitting target, though I must say it never dawned on me that anything of that sort was likely to happen. But luckily the blighter missed."

"You think someone pushed the thing over deliberately?" cried Freckles.

"I don't think: I know. I saw his shadow move."

"Then why not go and have a look-see," said the boy.

"Because the shadow will have moved a considerable distance by now," answered Hugh dryly. "In other words we'd find nothing, and merely make ourselves look fools. But don't be under any delusions, you fellows: that was a deliberate attempt by someone to lay me out."

"It can't have been the bearded gentleman," I said. "He's been talking to us ever since you left."

"I don't know who it was," said Hugh drying his hands. "But if he, or they, are prepared to go to the length of attempted murder it proves one thing at any rate. We're up against a pretty tough lot. It's all right, young fellow," he went on as Scott's face fell. "This bunch is outside the garden wall: your girl is inside."

But to me privately as we went out, leaving Freckles to the basin, he was not so optimistic.

"We were fools, Peter," he said. "We ought never to have allowed that girl to go inside that house. I'm not frightened of anything happening to her now: what I am afraid of is what is going to take place if this lot, whoever they are, do get inside."

"You think that's the game?" I asked.

"Granger is the game," he said. "And if the mountain won't go to Mahommed, Mahommed must go to the mountain. Granger has gone to ground in his house, and nothing short of an earthquake is going to get him out. Therefore to get him, they've got to get into the house. Voila tout."

"We might send her a letter telling her to leave," I suggested.

He shrugged his shoulders.

"From what I saw of the girl," he laughed, "I think she'd tell us to go to blazes."

Young Scott joined us and we went in to dinner. And though Hugh deliberately kept the conversation on outside topics, I couldn't keep my mind off the problem that confronted us. The whole thing seemed so utterly disconnected: that was the trouble. What link bound the bearded man and his companions with the snorer at Spragge's Farm? What was the signification of the red and blue lights? Above all, if Hugh was right, and he was not a man who made mistakes on matters of that sort, who was it who had deliberately tried to lay him out with the chimney-pot? And why?

The bearded man was eliminated, which left of those we knew the girl and the chauffeur. But even granted it was one of them the second question remained unanswered. Why? Even if we had aroused their suspicions by going back on our tracks in the car, their return for it seemed a little drastic.

Another alternative came into my mind: supposing it wasn't them at all? Supposing we had struck some completely new factor in the situation? Again came the same unanswerable question. Why? What had we done—or rather what had Hugh done—to give any possible reason for trying to kill him? The only person who could legitimately feel that way was Spragge, and it seemed well nigh incredible that that worthy should have secreted himself on the roof on the bare chance of laying him out.

From Spragge my thoughts turned to the snorer. He was a possibility. True he hadn't seen us as far as we know, but Hugh was an easy man to describe. Supposing Spragge had told him what had happened in the afternoon: supposing the man was a criminal and thought detectives were after him, and had determined to try to get rid of them? And then I gave it up: it was obvious that that solution wouldn' hold water. Genuine detectives don't go about the country in racing Bentleys slogging people over the jaw. And further he had no possible means of knowing that we were going to be at the Dolphin.

We were halfway through dinner when the bearded man and the girl entered. She swept past us as if the whole of Rye belonged to her, but her companion paused by our table and nodded to me.

"I must congratulate you, sir," he said turning to Hugh, "on your narrow escape. I was talking to your friends at the time, and the crash was terrific."

"Thank you very much," said Hugh gravely. It's the worst of these old houses: anything might happen."

"Precisely: anything might happen," agreed the other, and with a bow he passed on to his table.

"Unless I am much mistaken," said Hugh thoughtfully, "the time is coming in the very near future when that gentleman's face will disappear through the back of his skull. He is the type of mess I like not: moreover he is undoubtedly one of the players. So here's to hoping."

We finished our dinner in silence, and it was not until the coffee came that any further allusion was made to the subject. Hugh, I could tell, was trying to puzzle things out in his own mind as I had done, and Freckles—the confounded yound scoundrel—couldn't keep his eyes off the girl.

"What's the plan of campaign, Hugh, for to-night?" I asked, after the waiter had left us.

"I've been thinking over it, Peter," he answered, "and I've come to the conclusion that the safest way of tacking it if we want to find out anything, will be to approach the house from the other side—that is from the sea. I figure it out this way. We are obviously under suspicion—it is known that we are taking an interest in Spragge's Farm, in that swab over there all covered with hair, in Granger's house—in fact, in the whole outfit. If, as is more than likely, we are all three seen leaving Rye in the Bentley and taking the road towards Spragge's Farm, the betting is a fiver to a dried pea that we shall be followed. We'll have to leave the car in the road, and that gives us away completely. So my suggestion is this. There is a road—it's pretty bad, but it will serve—that runs past the golf links and goes down to the sea. True we still have to leave Rye in the direction of the farm, but as long as they don't find the car in the road it doesn't matter. In fact it's rather to the good: it may help to put 'em off the scent if they think we've gone on towards Felixstowe. So we'll leave the car on the sea road, which incidentally peters out into nothing, strike inland on foot, and approach Spragge's Farm from the rear. And after that, it's on the lap of the gods. Ever done any night work, Young Scott?"

RAISE TARIFF.

To The Editor of The Examiner.

Dear sir:

Mr. Lillicrap, of Lakefield, does not mention in his able letter on the Trent Valley Canal that Mr. Bennett said that the way to relieve unemployment was to raise the tariff and do all work at home.

Anybody can relieve it by giving away the taxpayers' money in public works.

BEACON LIGHTS.

To The Editor of The Examiner.

Sir:

The Hudson Bay Company's stores are erecting flying lights at Calgary and other western points. The North Monaghan airport is, the surveyor says, eighty odd feet above Chemong and is apparently the highest point in this district.

If anybody wants to encourage fliers to come here as they do to Kingston, Brantford, etc., by erecting a light, we will advance no objection.

J. H. BURNHAM.

WHY BOOTLEG KING?

Editor of The Examiner.

Dear sir:

Being just a "mere woman" and not being expected to know, I would like a little enlightenment.

Under our liquor law, it is illegal to buy spirits of any kind and resel it, or to treat anyone or do anything with it but drink it oneself. All right. Every so often we read in our papers, about bootleg kings, etc. Recently this name has been in every newspaper.

What I'd like to know is: If this man is known as a bootlegger, why isn't he in jail? Are there special laws to cover bootleggers who do it on a grand scale? Can anyone enter the profession, or is it only limited to a few? If a person buys a bottle of whiskey and sells half of it to a friend, and it becomes known, that person is arrested and fined. If he continues, he is jailed. If the same person bought it by the case, or dozen cases, and sold it by the bottle or case, would he then be exempt from fines or jail?

How is it worked?

I confess I am entirely puzzled by one man being jailed and fined for sharing or selling one bottle. Another man who frankly admits he is a bootleg king gets admiring publicity.

Please do not put me off by saying that it is a "quaint Spanish custom." Sincerely hoping that you will be able to explain this to me.

I am,

Yours very truly,

"QUO VADIS."

What To-day Means To You.

If August 19th is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10 a.m. to 11:30 a.m., from 3 p.m. to 4 p.m. and 9 p.m. to 10:15 p.m. The danger periods are from 5:30 a.m. to 7 a.m. and 1 p.m. to 2:30 p.m.

Astrological indications on this date are unfavorable until after 3:30 p.m. Do not take any unnecessary risks and avoid travel. Think twice before you sign your name to important papers. Formative plans for a possible change.

The child born on this August 19th will have an active, and often a little abrupt nature. It will be somewhat liable to vacillation, change and irresolution. Its judgment and memory should both be good. It will be overly excitable and will suffer from "nerves."

Very effeminate women and very manly men (he-men) will be born on an August 19th, and they will display the proper traits and characteristics of their sexes. If you be a man, you will live for your business or career, and a large percentage of your interests will be centred there. You will, however, go in for the ordinary recreations sports and hobbies. You must either be hard at work, or equally engrossed or active in some game or amusement. You fidget when you have nothing to do, or nothing to see. Outside of the daily news, you are not much of a reader. You take a pride in your home, but you are not a handy man therein, and you do not want to be bothered with the details of its care. As a rule you are of a genial nature, although it is generally known that you cannot be run over. You have a naturally compelling manner, and you win respect and admiration without any effort.

If you be a woman you belong in a home as a wife and mother. You have too much intelligence to fail in a career, but your proper place is within a home. You are so loyal and have so much devotion, that you will be married to your job, if not to a man. Your maternal instincts are very strong, and you must "mother" something or somebody. You have dainty, artistic tastes about yourself and surroundings, and you demand cleanliness and neatness. You dislike weak men, and you would expect your husband to be your lord and master. You are extremely affectionate.

FINANCIAL and MINING REVIEWS

SMELTERS GET BIG INTEREST IN SHERITT GORDON

500,000 Shares Are Believed to Have Been Saved By Smelters.

NEW GOLD FIND.

Black Prince Comes Home With the Bacon in Cogama District.

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 19 (Special to The Examiner). — Consolidated Mining and Smelting has secured a substantial interest in Sherritt Gordon, and W. M. Archibald, Smelter's Vice-President in charge of mines, will join the Sherritt board in order to keep in touch with that company's operations. This was intimated some time ago, the understanding at that time being that Smelters had taken over from Underwriters a block of the stock recently offered to Sherritt Gordon shareholders. It was suggested a price of $1.80 was paid for 500,000 shares, which would iinvolve the sum of approximately $1,000,000.

The fact Smelters has become actively interested is generally believed along the street to be a boost for Sherritt Gordon, guaranteeing the latter company the benefit of Smelter's experience and facilities in handling metals, particularly the zinc.

The Trail company's overseas marketing connections as well as its interests in the Copper Cliff refinery and the proposed zinc refinery in Eastern Canada, will be a material help in setting Sherritt Gordon on the righ road when production is commenced.

Discovers Gold

According to word from Gogama, situated on the C.N.R. main line north of Sudbury, Fred Gosselin, known locally as "the Black Prince," has again brought home the bacon. He returned recently to Gogama with his pockets bulging with gold and copper samples which he is said to have discovered only ten miles from the town. Engineer Burrows of the Department of Mines is reported to have made a hurried trip to look over the property, and already several of the exploration companies, including the N.A.M.E., are said to be on their way in to see the find.

In view of the fact the gold was found associated with quartz porphry and green stones, the discovery is regarded as of considerable importance and belief is it may develop a new mining camp. For several years there has been considerable interest shown in Chester township, good showings having been uncovered from time to time, but it remained for Mr. Gosselin to make an important find.

The Black Prince hasn't much to say about it. He merely smiles and remarks, rather sarcastically. That it is just too bad the find was not located several hundred miles from the railway.

Though the price of copper shows little inclination to start upward, curtailment of production is evidently having its effect and will probably leave the industry in fair position to meet any improvement in consumption.

Copper production of the world in July as computed by the American Bureau of Metal Statistics totalled 143,615 short tons compared with 145,797 tons in June and 174,507 tons in July 1929.

Old Time Bulls Once Again Try Their Hand at Managing Market.

ADVANCE GENERAL.

NEW YORK, N. Y., Aug. 19.—The old time bulls once more tried their hand in managing the balky stock market today, hoping for better success than they had in July.

The market made a broad advance running from 2 to 4 points in a long list of important stocks as Bears retired their short contracts, but there was no repetition of the Bear panic of Friday. The advance embraced practically all prominent groups, with the Tobaccos and Utilities notably strong.

U. S. Steel, American Can, Radio, Liggett and Myers issues, the American Tobacco Stocks, North American, American Water Works, Stone and Webster, Dupont, Westinghouse Electric, Fox and New York Central gained about 2 to 4, while such wide movers as Allied Chemical, Atchison, Case and Columbian Carbon mounted about 5 points.

Bankers and statistical services have been pointing out for some time that consumption was running ahead of production, thus paving the way for a fresh start, but speculators have found it difficult to interpret slack industrial operations bullishly, healthful as they may be economically.

Money remained easy, with funds plentifully available outside at 2 per cent.

NICKEL STRIKES NEW LOW MARK

Home Oil Makes a 14-point Recovery—Other Oils Do Little.

NORANDA UNCHANGED.

TORONTO, Ont., August 19 (C.P.) —A slight increase in volume accompanied mixed price changes on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange during the early session today.

International Nickel, after selling at a new low mark for the year $20 and where it was off about 1b from the previous close, recovered substantially to sell a $20.50. Noranda held unchanged at $20.75 throughout while Hudson Bay figured in a 20-point advance to $7.55.

Lindsleys were dull, only two issues in the group being traded in. Sherritt-Gordon was up 2 at $1.30, after having sold as high as $1.35 and Falconbridge was unchanged at $2.10.

A 14-point recovery in Home Oil was the outstanding price movement of the morning. The stock sold up to $2.25, as with the previous closing price of $2.11.

The issue had finished up yesterday displaying a 24-point loss, after having set a new low price for the year at $2.00. Other oils did little. Ajax losing 5c to $1.95, Mayland 10 to 40, and East Crest 1 to 24. Nordon went up 4 to 90, and Chemical Research and Calmond held unchanged.

Wright-Hargreaves was strong today, advancing 7 to $1.82, while Hollingers held unchanged, and Teck Hughes and Lakeshire each had a 5-cent decline. Howey improved by 1½ to 44, while Vapond went up 1, and Big Missouri 2, Kirkland Lake lost 1 to 57.

Pend Oreille set another new low mark for the year to-day, dropping 8 points to 80, Kootenay Florence gained 1 to sell at 2 cents.

The high-priced industrials displayed weakness. C.P.R. fell a full point to 174, while Bell Telephone followed suit on the decline, losing ¾ to sell at 150½. Consolidated Smelters were unchanged.

City Dairy sold up a point to 66. E. Ford was up fractionally at 31¼. Durant and Noranda were also up fractionally selling at 5¼ and 20.95 respectively. Canada Canners was up ¾ at 18. This is its first appearance for quite some time. Massey-Harris, Dominion Stores, Page-Hersey, and Seagrams were all unchanged.

FINANCIAL BRIEFS

Canadian investments in foreign securities illustrate Canadian enterprise in cultivating profitable foreign ventures when Canada itself is still drawing foreign capital to a large extent for its own needs, says a bulletin issued by the Finance and Investment Division of the United States Department of Commerce. Canadian investments in Great Britain have actually diminished while overseas investments increased at a more rapid rate than the investment in the United States. The bulk of Canadian investments abroad, particularly in the United States, appear to be in the form of securities holdings which do not necessarily carry control. Canadian investments in Latin America have been encouraged and facilitated through the large number of foreign branches of the Canadian chartered banks operating particularly in Latin America. Canadian investments in foreign utilities have been initiated by Canadian controlled corporations unaided by banks. Of the total investments of the Dominion abroad, 75.4 per cent. is in the United States, 5.8 per cent. in Great Britain, and 22.86 per cent. in other countries, chiefly Latin America.

New Issue Sold.

International Nickel sold at 20 at the opening to-day, the price at which shareholders are being asked to subscribe for the new shares. The company is assured of its money, however, as the entire issue has been underwritten by Hayden Stone and Company of New York and nickel will not lack for money with which to carry on its development program. The depreciation in the market value of the stock is due to lower earnings for the second quarter of the year when profit fell 5 cents short of meeting the dividend disbursement or the period earnings for the first six months just met the dividend, the surplus making up for the first three months making up for the deficiency in the second quarter of the year. International Nickel is suffering from a decreased demand for nickel owing to the business recession and from the low price of copper and this has made speculation in the stock unattractive for those who would purchase for a short hold. Wall Street showed improvement in early trading to-day but the local market was very quiet and one or two lows were established in the first few minutes of trading. Volume on the Toronto Stock Exchange Monday and in the closing days of last week fell off and outside of a few of the popular leaders there is no activity whatever. The trend here is not following very closely that of the big board and individual stocks are selling off on news concerning the company or industry itself rather than in sympathy with New York.

Arbitrising sales between Toronto, Montreal and New York are contributing largely to the day's transactions with the public playing only a small part.

Brazilian Traction broke through its hold low for the year in the first few minutes of trading on the Toronto Stock Exchange today when the share sold below 33⅛. The Exchange value of the Milreis is at the lowest point in two years and in this connection a well posted banker does not expect to see immediate improvement.

The decline in the currency is attributed to withdrawal of Government support which has been necessary due to the falling off in the revenue of the country. This is of interest to Canadians in view of its effect on the earnings of the Canadian controlled Brazilian Utility. Earnings for the month of July will make an appearance within the next few days and no serious drop in earnings is looked for. In the month of June gross earnings were slightly below the total for the corresponding month of 1929 but the company experienced a reduction on operating costs that more than compensated for the loss in gross and this may be equally true of July.

CIVIC STADIUM, Hamilton, Ont., Aug. 19 (By W. R. Wheatley, Canadian Press Staff Writer).—A threat of rain and the many other attractions on to-day's program of the British Empire Games held this afternoon's attendance down to 2,000 as the Women's Canadian Track and Field Championships got under way.

The noon showers had halted with no damage to the track or field and the cinder runway was in fast shape. A light wind drifted diagonally across the field from the southeast.

A goodly number of the Empire's male competitors housed in the Prince of Wales School adjoining the Stadium were on hand as spectators for the events.

Scenes From The Murder of Mrs. Bessie Perri

The murder of Bessie Perri, wife of Rocco Perri, self-styled bootleg king, who filled news columns not so long ago in well-known liquor disputes, as she stepped from her garage on the night of August 13, at Hamilton, Ont., shows the touch of the gangster hand, according to authorities. Here are shown: (1) Perri home at 166 Bay Street, Hamilton, scene of murder. (2) Two guns used in shooting, found later by police near garage. (3) Garage doors. Cross marks spot near which Mrs. Perri was shot, and (4) left to right, Assistant Crown Attorney Ed. Murphy and Rocco and Mrs. Perri, during an investigation some time ago.

OIL WELL CONTROLLED

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla, Aug. 19. (C.P.)— The latest wild oil well to shower Oklahoma city's south suburbs with petroleum, thereby creating a fire hazard, has been placed under control after it had gushed unbridled for 25 hours.

Cement pumped into the well, known as the C. C., Julian Oil and Royalty Company's No. 2 Houser, stopped the flow of oil and gas. The cement was forced into the hole under high pressure.

MERMAIDS IN THE GREAT ANNUAL SWIMMING CONTEST

About fifty women and girls will plunge into the chilly waters of Lake Ontario on Friday, August 22, in the Canadian National Exhibition Marathon for the swimming championship of the world. The women's event is for a distance of ten miles with total prizes of $10,000, of which the winner gets $5,000 and the first six to finish may swim in the 15-mile men's event on August 27, for which the prizes total $15,000. Several of the fair swimmers shown in this group should finish within the money. No. 1 is Mary Carter of Cohoes, N.Y., who finished seventh in the last Lake George swim; No. 2 is Mrs. Ruth Tower Corsan, who won second prize in the Exhibition Marathon last year; No. 3, Olive Gatterdam of Toronto, formerly of Seattle, whose spectacular performance last year as a 17-year-old made her famous; No. 4, Leah Riley of Keansburg, N.J., only 17 years old and winner of fourth prize last year; No. 5, Mrs. Ethel Hertle Cary, of Bronx, N.Y., winner in 1926 and fifth last year; No. 6, Anne Benoit of Holyoke, Mass., who has made a splendid showing in previous years at Toronto; No. 7, Violet Page of Philadelphia, a newcomer this year with a formidable record across the line.

Over three hundred entries have been received for the Canadian National Exhibition Marathon for the swimming championship of the world with total prizes of $35,000. The floats are all in readiness for the take-off and weather conditions seem to be shaping up favorably for water well above the minimum temperature requirements. The Men's Open Event is scheduled for Wednesday, August 27th, in Lake Ontario in front of the Exhibition Grounds at Toronto, and the prize winners in the Women's ten-mile event are eligible for entry into the 15-mile grind. There are many new names on the entry lists, but a great number of those who made swimming history in former years are ready for the plunge: This group shows: No. 1—Ernst Vierkoetter, formerly of Germany, but now of Toronto who won the second Wrigley Marathon. On his entry form he gave his nationality as "Canadian." No. 2—Mendell Burdett of Toronto, who finished fifth last year and is now in fine shape. No. 3—Sam Shields of Miami, Florida, who a few weeks ago defeated George Young in a two-mile swim and later established a new record for swimming 27½ miles around Manhattan Island. No. 4—Bill Sadlo of Seattle, who finished within the money in last year's Consolation Swim. No. 5—Isador Sponder of Port Colborne, Ont., who won fourth place last year. No. 6—Marvin Nelson of Fort Dodge, Iowa, who was swimming fifth last year, but sank 50 yards from the finish.

PICKARD HAS GOOD CHANCE TO WIN HONORS

The Canadian vaulting champion is Victor Pickard of Hamilton, who scored points for Canada at the 1928 Olympic games. This year Pickard will be the Dominion representative in the pole vaulting at the British Empire games. He is expected to win. Pickard has a splendid style and has devoted years to perfecting it. He had a good chance of being up with the leaders at the 1928 Olympics but dropped back to fourth place after arriving late at the grounds and having difficulty in getting his official number and then being refused an opportunity to take a trial jump.

MYSTERIOUS MISS DOLLAR GOES SHOPPING ON TWIN DOLLAR DAYS

Ten Dollars Will Be Given to the Person Discovering the Elusive Lady as She Visits the Stores

Next Friday and Saturday the merchants of Peterborough are holding their annual Summer Community Dollar Day. Between eighty and ninety of the best business houses in the city are presenting a simultaneous array of bargains, never surpassed and probably never equalled, on any previous event of the kind. The aim of the merchants each Dollar Day is to beat the former record, and the thrifty buying public can confidently expect to see a few dollars do better buying on this occasion than ever before. To add to the interest of the two big days, Mysterious Miss Dollar will mingle with the shopping crowds until some one discovers and captures her, thereby earning the Examiner's special prize of $10 in cash.

The elusive lady will be out on her shopping rounds on Friday between 9 a.m. and 5.30 p.m. and on Saturday, if not captured before, will be out during the same hours, with the addition of an evening trip from 8 to 9 o'clock.

As soon as Miss Dollar is captured a bulletin will be posted in front of The Examiner to end the chase, but the lady is going to be hard to catch.

Miss Dollar will go from store to store and must be captured in one of the Dollar Day stores, not on the street. Also to make her admit that you are right, you must show her this story about her, cut out of The Examiner. Just say, 'You are The Examiner's Mysterious Miss Dollar, and here's the story about you from the paper." That's all—find the lady; she may be shopping right beside you, because, of course, she is just as anxious to profit by the bargains as you are. But be sure and clip this story from The Examiner, and have it in your purse or pocket. It's worth $10 in cash to the one that finds her but all conditions must be complied with.

Take her right along to The Examiner office and claim the reward.

From time to time bulletins will be posted in front of The Examiner telling of some distinguishing feature of dress or outfit Miss Dollar is wearing.

SOCIETY RE-ELECTS OFFICERS FOR YEAR

Warsaw Branch of Upper Canada Bible Society Holds Annual Meeting.

WARSAW, Aug. 19 (Examiner Correspondence)—The annual meeting of the Warsaw Branch of the Upper Canada Bible Society was held in the Presbyterial Church on Thursday evening with the president, J. A. Crowe presiding.

The officers of last year were all re-elected and consist of J. A. Crowe, president, William Pyne, vice-president, and David Miller, secretary-treasurer.

Mr. Millman in his address did not enter into the details of statistics but gave a history of the Bible Society and its work. The last Bible house was opened in Jerusalem about two weeks ago. Wherever there is a Bible House there is an interesting collection of Bibles in all languages especially in those languages spoken by the people in the country where it is and in near-by countries.

"In London, England there is a wonderful collection of old Bibles in the Bible House museum. The Toronto House also has a good museum.

These centres employ colporteurs who carry Bibles for sale and distribution. Everyone can procure a Bible in his own language. In a way these Colporteurs have an advantage over missionaries as they are natives and understand the language, while missionaries usually spend sometime learning the language. They may know little of theology but they do understand the story of the Bible."

He spoke of Gandhi and said it is not evangelism that is needed but Christ.

"In Canada there is work among the immigrants. Boats are met. Sometimes the Bibles are destroyed but on the whole great good is done, for in spiritual matters material arithmetic cannot be used. We are told to cast our bread upon the waters and the promise is given that after many days it will return again.

People are not all of the same type and cannot all be reached the same way. Last year in face of adverse circumstances more Bibles were distributed than ever before. People need the Bible and it gives answer to the eternal problems.

HASTINGS

Mr. W. H. Chapman of Toronto spent the week-end at his home here.

The engagement is announced of John Joseph Cleary, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. Cleary of Hastings, to Eva Marie Doherty, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Doherty of Peterborough.

Former Indian Chief Adventurer Now Sells Herb Medicines to Tourists in Tweed District

TWEED, Aug. 19 (Examiner Staff Correspondent) — Chief Lone Wolf of the Mohawk tribe, picturesque and sturdy figure of Indian blood-man of action and adventure in various parts of the world, when sought by an Examiner reporter for an interview, modestly declined to go into details.

The Chief who is incidentally town constable, is at present living on the site of the tourist camp here. Making use of the various formulaes handed down by the medicine men of his tribe, the Chief dispenses medicines which are in great demand by the townspeople and tourists. His prescriptions call for the use of herbs and barks, and their beneficial effects are eloquently emphasised in the insistent repeat orders which he receives.

While residing on the lake shore in his commodious tent, the chief has been commissioned to keep watch on the Government sea-plane, which is at present working out of this town on survey and forestry work. The machine is piloted by Thos. Woodside, who is accompanied by a photographer and mechanic.

Native of Deseronto

It was learned that Chief Lone Wolfe is a native of Deseronto. He is about fifty-three years old and along with several other members of his tribe was educated in England and France.

From 1906 to 1908 inclusive, he toured Europe as an interpreter and rough rider with Buffalo Bill Wild West Show.

Returning to Canada, he served for ten years out West with the Royal North West Mounted Police and on the outbreak of war was transferred to Lord Strathcona's Horse, with which unit he served overseas for four years and three months.

W. M. S. MEETING AT QUEENSBORO

Seventy-five Members From Neighboring Auxiliaries Attend Gathering in United Church.

QUEENSBORO, Aug. 19 (Examiner Correspondence)—The open meeting of the W.M.S. held in the United Church on Wednesday afternoon was quite a success. Seventy-five ladies were present from the neighboring auxiliaries, including, Madoc, Cooper, Eldorado, Hazzards and the Anglican Guild. At the request of the president of the Queensboro society the program was in charge of the Rev. J. F. Everson. The meeting opened with hymn, "Bless be the tie that Binds." Mr. Everson read a scripture lesson from St. John chapter ten. Prayer was offered by Mrs. Comerford, of Eldorado. Mr. Everson extended a welcome to the ladies after which the following program was given. The Hymnwriters, part one and two was given by members of the Hazzards society. Mrs. Philo Harris sang accompanied by Miss Alma Keen parts of the following hymns and then some member of the society explained the circumstances under which the hymn was written, "Tell Me the Old, Old Story," "Just as I am," "From Greenlands Icy Mountain," and Jesus Lover of My Soul."

Mrs. Empey, of Eldorado gave a reading on "Tithing." A reading by Mrs. George Love; solo, Miss Freda Sager; paper, Mrs. Everson, on "The Hindu Religion." Two readings were given by members of the Madoc auxiliary; Miss Thompson, of Queensboro gave a talk on "The first Missionary to the Heathen World;" a paper by Mrs. Comerford, of Eldorado on "Good Intentions." Two ladies from Cooper sang a duet; A lady from Cooper gave a reading entitled, "Teach Me to Live." The offering amounted to nine dollars. Three men were present including Rev. I. N. Beckstead, of Eldorado. A delicious lunch was served at the close of the meeting.

INSTITUTE MEETS IN WARSAW SCHOOL

Members Discuss Alterations for Domestic Science Class at Meeting.

WARSAW, Aug. 19 (Examiner Correspondence)—The regular meeting of the Women's Institute was held in the old school on Thursday afternoon. Mrs. Weller, the president presided and thanked those who had helped with the work of cleaning the school. In the absence of the secretary, Miss Valetta Drain, was appointed. Two small tables were reported having been bought, also a sofa loaned and Mrs. Choate offered to donate a large work table.

As most of the branches are contributing towards the fund to send one girl from the county to Guelph for two weeks it was decided to donate $5 if needed.

Warsaw School Fair is being held on September 22, and the Institute, if asked will provide dinner. Mrs. Crowe had a stock-judging shield to be exhibited and a little discussion took place regarding alterations for the domestic science class. It was left in the hands of Mrs. T. H. Crowe and J. B. Nelson.

There was an appeal from a family at the Lake who are in need of many things. Janitor work for the new school was brought up by a former president who thought that it was often impossible for the president to be responsible for the care of the room.

Mrs. George Taylor lead the community singing and Mrs. Henry Batten gave an interesting paper on education. Miss Anna McMurray gave a violin selection, Minuet in G.

Mrs. Fred Crowe, who has recently come to the community became a member and there were three visitors, one of them, Miss Young, a former teacher at Warsaw.

The Japanese Government will hold exhibits of home products.

Christmas novelties have just been placed on sale in London.

Fine Weather and Good Crowd Combine to Make Event a Real Success

LIST OF WINNERS

McCRACKEN'S LANDING, August 19 (Examiner Correspondence). — Good weather and a good crowd combined to make McCracken's Junior Regatta one of the most successful aquatic events of the season. The committee which so successfully managed the senior regatta was again on the job with just as much enthusiasm, and made August 16 a red letter day to the children of Stoney Lake. The blue and white has been adopted as the McCracken's flag hung in a place of honor near the judges' stand. The starting gun, which is a regular regatta veteran, was again to the fore and did splendid service, although a fearsome looking weapon. One of the committee remarked early in the afternoon that he feared the entry list would be small, but time proved that he was in error, for there were more entries than boats in many of the races, and several had to be run off in heats. There were so many urgent entreaties for races for children of twelve years and under that the judges promised to consider their claims for next year's regatta. Fifteen boys entered in the boys' single skiff race open to boys of 16 years and under, and in the boys' tandem canoe race open to boys of the same age brought out twenty entries, and was run in three heats and a final.

The swimming races were well contested and every boy and girl apparently had a party of fans who urged them on by shouting encouragement. The fact that everyone shouted at once made the individual encouragement rather ineffective, but the general result was very satisfactory.

Age Limit Set.

The races were open only to boys and girls of 14 and under and 16 and under, but several enterprising young people far below the twelve-year-old class presented themselves as competitors, and showed skill and sportsmanship which promise well for future events of this kind. Perhaps the premier event of the day in point of interest was the cushion fight, which brought out ten entries. While the greater interest centres in the boy who stands in the bow of the canoe and wields the cushion as a weapon, there is a great responsibility resting on the paddler who can manipulate his boat into the best strategic position. It was a gallantly fought event and finally became a three-cornered contest between Ronald Emmett and Brian Wood, Jack Black and John Bunting, and Charlie Tanner and Jimmie Bilkey. Black and Tanner fought a decisive battle which ended in favor of the latter, and he then eliminated Wood and his partner after a hard fight. Tanner and his partner Bilkey were the smallest boys in the final. While the boys engaged in spirited combat an urgent request backed by four bona-fide entries was made to the judges to give the girls a chance, and the kindly gentlemen, recognizing women's equal status in our national life, gracefully yielded the point, but added the remark that there was no prize. "We don't care," said the girls, and prepared to enter as soon as the boys were finished, and they put up such a splendid exhibition that the judges felt prizes were deserved and provided them as the girls provided one of the best events of the whole program. Ruth Gouinlock paddled by Louise Hall met Betty Howard paddled by Eleanor Morris, and after a hard fought contest the two latter were declared winners. Marie Thompson paddled by Velva Woodhall entered the lists with Joy Nasmith paddled by Mary Acton. The latter won fairly easily, and then the Waterloo of the whole regatta was fought when Joy Nasmith and Betty Howard clashed in the finals, which were lengthy, as both girls showed skill and strength. Finally the judges called it a draw and were prepared to reward both equally, but the girls would have none of it, so the ruling called for their finishing it out standing on the gunwales of the canoes, and there it ended finally when Joy Nasmith overbalanced and Betty Howard was acclaimed as the winner.

Following the regatta the crowd adjourned to the lawn of Wantasa Inn, where the prizes were distributed by Mrs. H. E. Ringel, Mrs. W. J. Hall, and Mrs. C. A. Case. The prizes were handsome silver cups suitably engraved. Doug. Hall, the youthful but efficient president of the association made a few remarks congratulating the contestants on their sportsmanship and enthusiasm which had helped to make the regatta so successful. The Junior Regatta surpassed the Senior Regatta by a great deal. Mr. Hall concluded by calling on W. C. Ackerman, the vice-president of the association, who stated that he was getting a great kick out of this his first year, and realized as never before just what it means to the contestants.

Highly Successful Regatta.

Judge O'Connell, the secretary-treasurer, spoke last of all and said that the co-operation of the officers and subscribers had resulted in a highly successful regatta. Some people feel that McCracken's should not have a regatta, but no one could feel that way who was present today, continued the Judge. It is an incentive to healthy competition in the young people and helps their physical and intellectual development and when we see these fine young men and women and splendid children we need have no fear for the future of the country in which we live. The regatta at McCracken's is a permanent institution, and next year will see a special event in a cushion fight between H. E. Ringel and the speaker.

District Crop Report

MILLBROOK, Aug. 19 (Examiner Correspondence) — A crop report, comprehensive to date, for this vicinity includes the following:

Fall wheat—Some fields have yielded as high as fifty bushels to the acre, while other odd fields will not give more than twenty; a safe average might be thirty to thirty-five bushels to the acre for the whole crop.

Early Peas—Early peas made from twenty-five to thirty bushels to the acre; late peas will run about the same, but not enough are yet threshed to predict the average with any certainty.

Spring Wheat—Not enough threshed to state accurately the yield, but one ten-acre field gave two hundred and tweny bushels.

Barley—Some barley has been threshed, and one small field where the land is wet returned not more than fifteen bushels to the acre. Strange to say, another field on the same farm, had a yield of forty bushels per acre.

Oats—A definite statement can hardly be made as some farmers are still cutting their oats, and no great quantity has yet been threshed; there are many fields cut and yet to be drawn in. Oats, on the whole, are turning out better than was anticipated; a load here and there has been threshed to use for feed, and it is apparently safe to predict an average of from forty to fifty bushels to the acre.

OBITUARY

EFFIE CAMERON

(Examiner Correspondence)

KEENE, Aug. 19.—The funeral services of little Effie Cameron, twelve-year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Will Cameron was held on Monday afternoon at the family residence on the Norwood road and burial was in the Cameron cemetery. Mr. Hamilton of the Westwood Presbyterian church and Rev. Mr. Simpson of the Baptist Church at Indian River conducted the ceremony, the former being Effie's pastor and the latter a close friend. The bearers were John Cameron, John and Harry Boswell, cousins, with Stuart Connal, Charles Nevins and Stuart Harrison.

The death was surrounded by circumstances which made it particularly sad. Effie passed away on Saturday, the anniversary of her birthday for which she had planned a happy party. She was the only living child of her parents. Very quaint and old-fashioned she had a charm that made her a favorite not only in the neighborhood of her home but with casual acquaintances. The funeral was very large and the floral tributes beautiful, one, a "Gates Ajar", being an expression of sympathy from the small school friends.

BELMONT PROPERTY OWNED BY BROTHERS

Stevens Brothers Whose Ages Total 211 Years Have Lived on Property for Many Years

(Examiner Correspondence)

MARMORA, Aug. 19.—About halfway on the highway between Marmora and Havelock there is a farm unlike any for miles for its occupancy. It is occupied by three bachelor brothers whose joint ages total 211 years. George Stevens is the oldest of the three his age being 73. Then there is Mark, aged 70 and Emmanuel aged 68 years.

For over fifty years this property in Belmont Township has been their home and though they look robust and healthy today, they will tell you that it was in the interests of their health that farm life was rigidly followed by them. George has travelled by railroad and steamship whereby he has visited every State in the Union, the Island of Cuba and England, but it was in the further interests of health that these trips were taken.

William Stevens, their father was born in Somersetshire, England close to the city of Bristol. After coming to Canada he married and settled down in Camden East, near Napanee but later moved to Healey Falls. His sons were practically grown-up men when he bought the Brown place, which is now their abode.

Twelve years ago fire demolished the original dwelling and destroyed, besides its furniture many family treasures. This did not in the least tempt the brothers to dissolve partnership. They still held together and erected their present home.

When asked as to what they thought of Daylight Saving, one of the trio replied "We have use for every bit of daylight that there is."

Since the death last fall of a sister who had resided with them for several years, George has through recently impaired health taken over the kitchen duties. Busy as they are in their own little commonwealth the three find time to be students of nature and religion.

MARMORA

Mr. J. Skelcher, of Belleville, lay reader took the service at St. Paul's Anglican Church on Sunday morning. The Rector, the Rev. A. B. Caldwell was in charge of the services in Christ Church Parish, Belleville throughout the day.

The Misses Vera Wright and Mabel Mumby, of Harold were week-end guests of Miss Hilda Phillips.

The A.Y.P.A. held a sale of home cooking on Saturday afternoon at Mrs. T. S. Pearce's cottage, Crowe Lake.

Miss Annie Johnson, of Watertown, N.Y., is visiting her sister, Mrs. W. Leonard.

Mrs. John Baskin, of Norwood, visited Deloro on Saturday afternoon.

Mr. Hugh Jones is home from Nichll's Hospital, Peterborough, but it will be some weeks before he is able to be around again.

WEDDING BELLS

MILLER—MASSEY.

Morganston United Church was the scene of an interesting event on Saturday, August 16, when Miss Stella Vivian Massey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Massey, of Morganston, was united in marriage to Mr. Walter Samuel Miller of Niagara Falls, N.Y., son of Mr. and Mrs. James Miller, of Fenwick, Ontario, Rev. C .W. Barrett, of Brighton, officiating.

The church, tastefully decorated in green, mauve, and white, presented a pleasing appearance. The bride, wearing a dress of ivory chantilly lace and chiffon, with plain net veil, carrying a shower bouquet of pale pink roses, lily of the valley, and maidenhair fern, entered the church to the strains of Lohengrin's Wedding March, played by Miss Myrtle Hardy of Morganston, and was escorted to the altar by her father. Miss Geraldine Gould, of Stratford, wearing a dress of mauve and yellow chiffon, with picture hat and flowers to match, was the bride's attendant, and the groom was supported by Mr. Ray Bissell, of Joliet, Quebec. After the ceremony the wedding party of thirty-five guests motored to the bride's home, where a reception was held on the lawn, and afterward the guests partook of a dainty luncheon served by four of the bride's cousins. The toast to the bride was proposed by Rev. Mr. Barrett and responded to by the groom.

The groom's gift to the bride was a white gold wrist watch set with sapphires, to the bridesmaid a crystal necklace, to the groomsman a gold stickpin, and to the pianist a silk purse. Shortly after the luncheon Mr. and Mrs. Miller, the latter wearing a rose and beige ensemble, with hat, gloves, and shoes to match, left by motor for Hotel Britannia, Lake of Bays, Muskoka, where they will spend two weeks, and afterwards at home at 200 80th Street, Niagara Falls, N.Y.

A few days previous to the wedding the bride's friends tendered her a shower at her home. Many beautiful gifts were received, among them a rose elderdown and an electric table lamp.

GORDON--TENNYSON.

Marshall in the Presbyterian manse on Wednesday, August 6, when Irene, the eldest daughter of Mr. William Tennyson, and the late Mrs. Tennyson, was united in marriage to Kenneth Roy, youngest son of Mr. Edward Gordon and the late Mrs. Gordon, all of Madoc.

The bride wore a becoming gown of white satin and lace with shoes and hose to match. Miss Mabel Tennyson, sister of the bride, attended her. She was attired in a yellow dress with shoes and hose to match. The groom was supported by Mr. Durland Adams of Madoc.

After the ceremony the wedding party motored to the bride's home, where a bountiful dinner awaited them. Later the happy couple left amid showers of confetti for a motor trip to Youngstown and other points in New York State.

On their return Mr. and Mrs. Gordon will reside on Livingstone avenue, Madoc.

COVERT CLOTH FOR BUSINESS SUITS

Very feminine is this tailleur at the LEFT above, for the season in town or especially for the smartly dressed business woman. It is of gray covert cloth with flares and godets forming the skirt, while the double-breasted jacket lends interest. At the RIGHT is seen organdie in all its sophistication as a dinner dress or a bridesmaid's frock according to suggestions by Vogue. The frock at the left of the group is a one piece dress of pale green organdy with circular fullness introduced at the sides. Shaped bretels ripple over the shoulder and form a low-placed cape effect in back. At the RIGHT is a pale blue organdy with youthful frills of narrow lace edging the bolero and finished with a long even hemline. The neck-line features a bow at the LEFT. (Sketch is by Vogue.)

THIRTY ORPHANS IN COBOURG HOME

Orphanage Under Charge of Sisters of St. Joseph—Archbishop O'Brien Founder.

Under the gentle ministry of the Sisters of St. Joseph in the Catholic Orphanage of Cobourg, thirty motherless little tots are being trained for lives of Christian usefulness. The institution known as "St. Joseph's Orphanage," occupied the building which was the summer home of Mrs. Nellie Grant Sartoris, a daughter of General U. S. Grant, a president of the United States.

It was here that Mrs. Grant widow of the famous Civil War hero spent many summers with her daughters, boating on the lake which the verandah faces, and making the beautiful rose gardens which now produce a bewildering variety of blooms each year, mute evidence of her love of flowers.

Arch Bishop O'Brien Founder

It was Bishop O'Brien, now Archbishop of Kingston, who first conceived the idea that the house, which had been left vacant for a number of years, would be an ideal place for an orphanage and he purchased the property for the Sisters of St. Joseph in 1921. The house was then changed into an orphange, few alterations being necessary and since that time the institution has been the means of placing nearly three hundred children in Christian homes, while others, so inclined have continued their education at St. Joseph's Academy, at Lindsay.

For it is possible after they have finished the course in the local convent school, to pursue that branch of learning for which they feel themselves most suited.

And today grounds which have almost forgotten the social activities of former years now resound to the laughter of little children who race merrily about or, quietly in some remote corner, play games, the hidden mysteries of which are known only to childhood. The beach too, is the scene of happy activities for there, under the watchful eye of an accompanying Sister, they often go paddling.

Al Fresco Meals

During the summer months when the days are fine, tables are set beneath the trees and the meals are served outside on the lawn. Picnics are the rule rather than the exception built in the summer house and now it is fully expected that all meals will be served in the open.

Early this spring Miss Annie Simmons, of Peterborough, donated a small oratory to the orphanage and it was built on the lawn beside the summer house. It is surrounded by flowering shrubs which as the years pass by will make the spot ever more beautiful.

WHEN YOU CAN'T GET FRESH MILK—TAKE KLIM

Because KLIM will give you as much or as little milk as you want, whenever you want it. Simply mix KLIM with water, and you have milk, not a makeshift but real, fresh, dairy milk with ALL THE CREAM, all the nourishment and all the delicious flavour that you long for when you're miles away from the nearest dairy.

KLIM keeps without ice and is most economical to use. Take it along on your camping, boating or motoring trip. Keep a few tins at the summer cottage. Because it's in powdered form, KLIM weighs only about one-fifth as much as the milk it makes. Send 10c for a trial tin.

MADOC WOMEN ARE GUESTS OF MARMORA

Pleasant Time is Spent at Crowe Lake by Two Institutes

MADOC, Aug. 19. (Examiner Correspondence)—On Tuesday afternoon August 12th, Madoc Women's Institute were invited to meet at Crowe Lake, Marmora, as guests of the Marmora Institute. Four cars went from Madoc and one from Bronson's making an attendance of 26.

A pleasant time was spent while the guests were assembling. Mrs. Sabine of Marmora conducted the opening exercises and a short business meeting, after which Mrs. C. N. Whytock presided. An address by Dr. Margaret Patterson on "Women's Work" was read by Mrs. T. L. Nickle, after which Mr. Pickering addressed the combined Institutes in behalf of the Toronto Institute for the Blind.

Mr. Pickering gave a most interesting synopsis of the work undertaken by that Institute. He explained that besides providing work suitable for a number of blind people, they keep an accurate list of all the cases reported in the Dominion, of which there are over eight hundred and are constantly finding more cases which have never before been reported. In these cases, record is kept of the cause of the blindness, the means used to relieve and remedy, and the progress of the case. If necessary, they pay all the expenses of treatment.

In many cases, information is given as to remedial and preventive measures, such as better lighting and better food, and advice is given as to defective lighting of schools, and other causes that help to produce blindness.

A vehicle contest put on by Mrs. A. Smith and Mrs. George Hill of Madoc was enjoyed by all, the winners being Mrs. Prentice of Marmora and Mrs. N. Bronson of Madoc.

A delightful buffet luncheon of hot beans, salads, jellies, thin bread and butter, cake and coffee was served by the Marmora ladies and a pleasant social hour was spent at the close of the programme.

Mrs. J. E. Morrison and Mrs. R. P. Wellman, Past Noble Grands, attended the District meeting of the Rebekah Lodge in Stirling on Tuesday afternoon and evening. Miss Sylvia Richmond and Mrs. J. M. Reid attended the evening meeting.

Just Between Us Women

A daily chat with Examiner neighbors conducted by Anne Wilcox

I wonder how many of you housewives have ever made crusty berry pudding?

• • • • • • •

I never even heard of it until recently and I was so interested that I succeeded in finding out how it is made. This pudding is a delicious dessert to serve now while berries of one sort or another are in season.

• • • • • • •

The fact that it is an economical dessert will make its appeal to the housewife who has to consider pennies when calculating the menu budget.

• • • • • • •

The quantities of ingredients vary according to the number of persons to be served and this is done without altering the nature of the pudding.

• • • • • • •

If there are few berries they can be made to do. If there are plenty of berles to be had, then the pudding will be much better.

• • • • • • •

Two ore more kinds of berries can be combined, or another fruit such as apples, or peaches, can supplement an insufficient quantity. The pudding as given will serve four persons.

• • • • • • •

The recipe is as follows:

1 egg
1 cup of milk
1 tablespoon butter
¾ cup berries
¼ cup sugar (more if berries are sour)
Enough bread slices to line the pudding dish.

• • • • • • •

Beat the egg and add the sugar and continue beating until well mixed. Add the milk. Butter each bread slice and dip it in the liquid mixture, allowing it to remain until the next slice is spread so that it gets well moistened, but not enough to break.

• • • • • • •

Butter the pudding dish. Spread the bread slices with the butter and line the dish with the bread slices fitted closely together. Cover with the berries and then cover the berries with a second layer of the buttered bread.

• • • • • • •

Over all pour the remainder of the liquid mixture. Bake in a hot oven until the top is brown and the bread crispy.

• • • • • • •

Serve the pudding with cream and sugar. Or if you wish you might make a sauce of berries and sugar boiled down with a little water to the consistency of a thin sauce.

• • • • • • •

The pudding may have a meringue of the beaten whites of two eggs and sugar. Allow one tablespoon of sugar to each egg. When the meringue is used, omit the white of the eggs in the pudding itself and use the yolks of both.

• • • • • • •

Marshmallow whip may be used for a topping.

• • • • • • •

Put is under the flame of a gas range to lightly brown the unevenly spread marshmallow.

• • • • • • •

It is important that the toppings be put on after the crispy crust has formed on the top of the pudding as the crustiness adds quality to the dish.

That Body of Yours

By James W. R[illegible], M.D.

YOU MUST HAVE SLEEP.

You are shocked when you read that some prominent individual, some one that is doing real things in the world, dies from an overdose of some sleeping tablets or powders.

Now you must have sleep, because sleep is as important to life as food, and if it does not come to your tired brain and body it seems only natural to reach for something that will bring it.

And yet a moment's thought and you must realize that anything that can dull your nervous system to the point of inducing sleep must have some real effect upon the nervous system.

I don't want to talk about sick people, who for the time being must be lulled to sleep for a number of hours in the twenty-four, if their mind is to be free from care and fears, and their bodies to get a relaxation essential to life itself. These individuals are going to need tablets or powders to induce sleep.

But for the individual who is not sick, and yet will take drugs regularly, night after night, to induce sleep, I can only say that he is on the right road to form the drug habit.

I had the opportunity to inspect an institution for idiots—people who were not insane, but simply did not have enough brains to enable them to mix with normal people, or earn a living in the world.

There was no trouble about sleeplessness here, because these poor creatures did not have enough brains to think.

The reason that the average individual cannot sleep is simply because he can think, and as he thinks of his finances, of his own health, of the illness of some members of his family, of something he should or should not have done, his thinking is really worry, and worry is sleep's greatest enemy.

Now, I can't suggest how this worry can be removed. Each individual must work out his own salvation as far as the causes of worry are concerned. It's a matter of mind training.

However, the only thing that will help you withstand worry, and help you to think clearly is to get that body of yours into its best possible shape.

This means a few days' holidays if possible, and enough regular outdoor exercise or work, that your physical processes—digestion, heart and lung action, intestinal movement will be at their best to give you strength of body and mind.

Further, this physical tiredness from outdoor air and exercise, will induce natural sleep.

Of course, the well-ventilated room, the comfortable mattress, and quietness are great aids to sleep.

Grief over the sale of his cab-horse caused Harry Powderhill, an old Smethwick, England, cabman, to take his life recently.

Mr. Waller has been in this region of work for six years, through the board of the Church of England and now he is transferred to another mission north of Winnipeg, Manitoba.

Generals Break Even In E.P.L. Title Series

VETERAN ABBIE ROSE HURLS ELECTRICS TO 4-1 TRIUMPH; HOLDS CRESCENTS TO 3 HITS

Good Pitching Backed By Airtight Support Enables Generals to Stay in Running.

HAS 10 STRIKE-OUTS.

Hardill Pitches Good Game But is Backed By Wobbly Support.

Abbie Rose, that veteran of the ball diamond and hockey arena, once more displayed his ability to come through ace high when called upon, by pitching the C.G.E. team to a 4-1 victory over the Crescents at Exhibition Park last evening.

Manager Art Primeau judged that it was about time that the Crescent sluggers had a change of fare and in his dire emergency he turned to his stocky second sacker. How well the versatile Abbie answered that call can be judged by the fact that he turned the Brioux clan back with but three hits, two being of the scratchiest variety. Not content with that he succeeded in fanning an even ten.

It was Rose's great pitching performance backed by airtight support that gave the Electrics the win that keeps them in the E.P.L. sweepstakes, and makes them favorites to win the deciding game on Wednesday evening. A victory for the Crescents last night would have given them the flag. But the result puts the teams back on even terms after a five-game series with two wins each and a tie game.

Opposing Rose on the mound was Jeff Hardill, the big threat of the Crescent outfit, and the tall fellow turned in a game that deserved a different result. Hardill unlimbered plenty of stuff and gave a demonstration that rivalled his first effort in the series. Five hits were the most the Electrics could secure from his elusive hooks, but his support wobbled badly at times and this added to three walks and two batters whom he hit were contributing factors to the four runs which crossed the plate.

Not only did Abbie Rose twirl the C. G. E. to victory, but it was his trusty bat that poled out the three-base hit in the sixth frame that sent their first two runs scampering in.

Break In the Game

That hit was the break in the game. It went over the stretching arms of Joe Jones, who had been slow to move back for it in centre field. Jones had been covering acres of ground in the outer pastures. It was he who had torn in fast to rob Stan Jones of a hit in the second innings and turned a similar trick on H. Hollingsworth in the third. But he faltered on that clout by Rose and it proved the turning point.

Up until that stage the teams had been on even terms, the hitters on both nines being smothered completely by the clever twirling Ash got a single for the Electrics in the second and the same player had gathered another safety in the fourth. These had been the only hits for the C.G.E.

The Crescents had fared even worse. Joe Jones in the third had bounced a grounder at Shiner Johnston, who was filling Rose's place at second, which got away from the oldster and went down as a hit. Collins had swung hard on one of Roses hooks' and succeeded in hitting it right on the end of the bat. The ball popped back of third.

The Fateful Sixth

Then came the fateful sixth. It opened up with Red Hollingsworth getting on when Hardill hit him with a pitched ball. Hollingsworth was forced out at second on Utronki's rolled to Hardill. Swanston raised a foul fly to Heard, but Utronki stole second. Ash drew a walk. Rose crashed out his long fly into centre scoring both runners. Hatton rolled to Hardill for the third out.

In the next frame the C.G.E. returned to add another pair. Stan Jones watched four balls go past. Johnston followed with a triple into centre, scoring Jones. Shiner countered when Hardill tossed out Smith on an infield rap. Hollingsworth's fly into deep centre was taken on the gallop by J. Jones and Utronki whiffed.

It looked as though the winners were going to enjoy a shutout as darkness gathered over the field and the final frame swung around. However, in the ninth the Crescents pushed their single tally over. After Crary had raised a long fly into Utronki's glove. Hickey was walked. Collins rolled to second, but Hickey stole that sack. Then Hardill plugged a single into centre, scoring the runner. F. Jones took three strikes to end the game.

TORONTO DRIVES BREAM OFF HILL IN 4TH INNING

Leafs Score Three Successive Triples in Seventh Frame.

BIRDS UP A HALF.

Orioles Automatically Advance When Red Wings Suffer 7-6 Defeat.

The Baltimore Orioles took the day off yesterday but picked up half a game on the Rochester Redwings in the International League pennant race just the same.

The Redwings, who have been staggering around a bit for the last week took a 7-6 beating from the Newark Bears in a spectacular game and the Reds saw their advantage over the rest of the field sprink to a game and a half.

The game was closely fought all the way, the final play of the game finding Brown tossed out at the plate as he sought to score the tying run. Newark battered Foreman for four runs in the fifth inning and then added three more at the expense of Littlejohn and Berly in the sixth and seventh innings. The Redwings, after scoring two runs in the fifth and one in the sixth, added two more in the eighth and then put on a rousing rally in the ninth that almost turned the trick. With one run in and only one out, Jim Faulkner went to the rescue of Al. Harvin who was weakening fast. Faulkner pitched to only one man, George Topoccer, who lifted a fly to Jordan in right field. Brown, who was on third, tried to score, but Jordan's perfect throw to Catcher Charley Hargreaves, nipped him at the plate.

Toronto easily whipped Jersey City 10-3. The Leafs opened up with a fierce attack on Maurice Bream, who was driven out of the box in the fourth inning after four runs had been scored. Bob Walsh then went into the box for the Skeeters, and got by without being scored upon until the seventh, when successive triples by Cote, Phillips, and Gibson, a walk and error, and Joe Rabbitt's home run gave the Leafs six more runs. Hoot Gibson pitched effectively for the Leafs, giving up only eight hits.

In a night game the Buffalo Bisons buried Reading under a 24-2 count, thanks to 19 hits and seven Reading errors. Dave Danforth pitched brilliantly for the Bisons after he was touched for home runs by Whitman and Scott in the first inning. After that outburst Reading got only one hit, a single by Whitney. The Bisons really won the game in the first inning when they tallied six times. They followed up with single runs in the second and third innings, nine in the fourth, six in the seventh, and one in the eighth. Shinners led the attack with a double and three singles.

Bowlrites and Grocers In Loop Final To-night

Harrison's and Sugar Bowl will meet tonight in the first game of the City Softball League play-offs. Both teams are right on edge for the game and rarin' to go.

The reason for the teams going into action tonight is caused by the fact that the City League winner plays Trenton in Trenton on Friday night.

With the chance to represent Peterborough in the Ontario series and the city championship at stake both teams will be out battling hard for a win.

A bumper crowd should be on hand at Central School grounds when the game gest away. It will start at 6.30 sharp.

TOWNSEND VICTOR IN SPARKLING BOUT

Click Extends Canadian Champion to Limit to Gain Decision.

TORONTO, Aug. 19.—When last night's terrific, thrilling battle was over, the judges unanimously ruled that Billy Townsend, the Vancouver Tiger, had earned the decision over Joe Glick, the canny New York veteran. All others did not agree. It was close, very close, and the Glick followers were under the impression that a rapier-like left, delivered often and fast, had put the New Yorker in the lead.

This Glick is a tough "hombre." He has been around and he knows just about all the tricks there are in the boxing calendar. Opposing him was a man who knows no fear, a rip-tearing, "game" boxer, who ceaselessly treaded in to trade punches with the smarter veteran. Townsend, with his left eye bleeding profusely, was accidentally hit low in the tenth round, but right there his remarkable courage manifested itself. With head lowered, he waded into the fray, and, irrespective of the decision, its merits or demerits, the Vancouver slugger certainly earned brackets in that torrid session.

The main bout and in fact the show was the best ever staged in Toronto, and the fans were kept in a continuous uproar. They had seen one of the best tilts in history in the second bout when Tommy McBeigh of Vancouver slugged out a victory against Johnny Moran, the hardy and clever little Pittsburger, but when the Townsend-Glick fracas got under way the excitement knew no bounds.

English Tennis Star Wins Matches Easily

Miss Betty Nuthall Leads Favorites in U. S. National Tourney.

FOREST HILLS, Aug. 19—Betty Nuthall, with a bright red band around her head and all her stroke in beautiful control, led a parade of the favorites through the opening round of the 43rd national women's tennis championship on the turf of the West Side Stadium yesterday.

Playing her first match in the United States since she was upset by Mrs. Molla Mallory in the quarter-finals last year, the English challenger turned back Louise McFarland of Passadena, Cal., by scores of 6—0, 6—1, in a one-sided encounter that lasted less than half an hour.

CHICAGO CUBS BEAT PHILLIES

Windy City Club Increases Lead to Three and One-half Games.

TWO GAMES SCHEDULED.

NEW YORK, August 19 (C.P.).—A few short days ago the Brooklyn Robins were fighting to keep a foothold on first place in the National League pennant race. They failed in that "crucial" series at Chicago, and now they are batting to stave off the mad rush of the Giants as John McGraw applies the lash to the fast-stepping New York aggregation.

The Robins dropped a game further out of first place and a half game nearer the idle Giants in third position yesterday when they lost a hard fought 4 to 3 decision to the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Ready to take advantage of any break along the eastern front the Cubs pounced on two Phillies' pitchers for 17 hits, a sufficient number of safeties to win 17 to 3 and increase their lead over the Robins to three and one-half games. It was the champions' eleventh victory in the last 13 starts, with one tie. Big Pat Malone held the Phillies to eight hits and accounted for his fifteenth game of the season while Hack Wilson connected with his forty-second homer, just one short of the league record set last season by Chuck Lein, who saw the ball sail into the bleachers from his position in the Phillies' outfield.

Hastings To Meet Kingston Wednesday

HASTINGS, Aug. 19.—(Examiner Correspondence).—The local baseball team are indulging in some strenuous workouts for the first of the play offs here on Wednesday afternoon with Kingston.

The local team are also in the play-offs in the Northumberland League with the winners of the Bailieboro-Alderville series for the Sam Clarke trophy. The fans are quite confident of bringing the Clarke trophy back to Hastings after an absence of a number of years. Hastings won ten and lost one, which was the last game of schedule, played in Bailieboro. The diamond in Bailieboro had a lot to do with the loss as the boys all complained of its roughness. On the diamond here Hastings took Bailieboro into camp by box car figures and on a good diamond any place are sure of being able to repeat in case they meet in the play-offs.

SOFTBALL WINNERS TO MEET TRENTON

Sugar Bowl and Harrisons Must Finish City Play-offs By Thursday.

Word was received yesterday by Secretary Leether of the Peterborough Softball Association that the local league winners were drawn with Trenton and will play the first game of the series in Trenton on Friday evening.

This necessitates having the local plays-off finished by Thursday, with the result that Sugar Bowl and Harrison's will play Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday if a third game is necessary.

The local league are grouped with Trenton, Kingston and Belleville. The winner of the Trenton-Peterborough series meet the winner of the Belleville-Kingston series. A winner of the Trenton-Peterborough series must be ready by August twenty-seventh.

The return game of the Trenton series will be played in Peterborough on Wednesday, August twenty-seventh.

BOWLRITES TO MEET GROCERS IN THE FINALS

Harrison's Take 18-10 Victory Over Westclox to Win Second Half of Schedule.

HEAVY SLUGGING.

Clockmakers Go Down in Fighting Finish, Stage Four Runs in Ninth.

Harrison's, by their 18-10 win over Westclox, won the second half of the City Softball League and the right to meet Sugar Bowl in the finals. The game was not as fast as most of the play-off games, but it afforded the large crowd a chance to witness some heavy slugging.

The game was viewed by the largest crowd to attend a softball game in the city for several seasons.

Westclox staged a fighting finish which netted them four runs in the ninth. White started the session with a single, Fowler came through with his fifth hit of the game, a single to right. Foley beat out a bunt and the bases were loaded. R. Kitchen single, White scoring. Bob Kitchen cut a double to right, Fowley and R. Kitchen registering. Then came the break. Bob Kitchen was called out for failure to touch first. Goodson singled to centre, but Curry grounded out to Calladine and Darling struck out.

Twirls Good Ball

Montgomery twirled for the Harrison aggregation and had an easy time of it. His team spotted him fourteen runs to work on in the first four innings. He was touched for sixteen hits, and fanned four. He issued two walks.

Darling tossed them up for the Westclox, and although hit hard, his support was none too good. Numerous hits were secured on misjudged flies by the outfield. He fanned five and issued five walks. Nineteen hits were secured off his delivery.

Heavy slugging was a feature of the fray. Fowler led the teams with five hits in five trips to the plate. Playford collected four, including two homers; Dobson four, with one double; Smith four, with one triple; Darling three, and Clarke three.

It was Playford's first homer that started the Clockmakers on the down grade. Playford started the game going, and the second ball pitched by Darling he laced it far into centre field for a home run. Two more hits and a couple of errors gave the Grocers two more, and a three-run lead to start.

Feature Play

The feature play of the evening was supplied by Curry. Going back far for Calladine's hard drive, Curry just managed to touch the ball with his left hand. He knocked it up in the air, and then stabbed it with left hand. It was a circus catch and the best that has been made this season. That catch came in the ninth inning and completed a good season for the Westclox right fielder, who has played sterling ball all year.

MACKS RALLY IN EIGHTH TO WIN

Stewart, on the Mound for Browns, is Outpitched By Earnshaw.

SENATORS ALSO WIN.

NEW YORK, Aug. 19 (C.P.)—The three leaders in the American League furnished evidence of why they are fighting for the pennant by Philadelphia downing St. Louis, 6—4, Washington turning back Detroit, 5—4, and the Yankees beating the Chicago White Sox 11—4.

An uprising in the eighth inning gave the Athletics the decision over the Browns, four runs crossed the plate during that lively session while Walter Stewart took an early trip to the showers. George Earnshaw, who went the route for the world champions, hung up his nineteenth victory of the season as Mickey Cochrane blasted out his eighth home run during the eighth inning rally.

Irving Haddey was the hero of the Senators' triumph over the Tigers. He handed out just six hits, although enough of them were bunched in the sixth to allow the Tigers to count three times. Hogsett was touched for nine safeties including a triple and four doubles, over five innings.

Herb Pennock turned in another one of his sterling performances in the White Sox downfall. The 38-year-old southpaw was hit hard at times, but was stingy in pitches while not issuing a base on balls. Meanwhile the Yankees in general and Chapman, Gehrig and Byrd in particular, were doing some steady hitting. Chapman collected four hits, Gehrig three, including his thirty-fifth home run, and Byrd the same number.

Cleveland and Boston were rained out, while only two games were scheduled in the National circuit.

RECORD CATCHES OVER WEEK-END

Disciples of Izaak Walton Land Two Big Muskies in Marmora District.

ONE 21-POUNDER

MARMORA, Aug. 19.—(Examiner Corresopndence).—Most of the big catches of fish in local waters this summer have been credited to tourists but this week end there has been a change. The record of the transients has been eclipsed by two local disciples of Izaak Walton.

Robert Nayler, noted guide, attracted considerable attention at the Royal Hotel at the supper hour on Saturday when he arrived with a twenty-one pound maskinonge, which he had taken from Crowe Lake that afternoon. He was alone in the boat at the time and the usual struggle preceding the conquest is reported by him.

Mr. Nayler used a fly rod with a twelve pound test line and a pikey minnow. When later measured the fish was found to be three feet seven inches in length.

Scarcely had the fish been consigned to a cooler clime, than Phil Wright of Marmora Township arrived and although he had no luck before, was able to boast that on Friday afternoon his efforts had been rewarded by the capture of the largest fish of the season, a twenty-three pound muskie.

Mr. Wright secured his fine specimen while fishing in Beaver Creek near Albert Bartlett's home with a Buffalo spool.

Women's Relay Honors Goes to England—Divide Bowling Totals.

(By Emler Dulmage C. P. Staff Writer)

HAMILTON, Ont., Aug. 19.—Canada's Maple Leaf and the little Union Jack of England borne by skilled, hardy athletes from the proud mother country and her full grown Dominion today flared across British Empire Games accomplishments. Canada yesterday held her own with canny, brawny Britons as the Empire athletic fete drifted triumphantly through it's second day.

Ottawa and Montreal contributed Empire champions to the swimming competition, Canadian lawn bowlers fought a winning duel with trundling experts from four British countries, high-diving supremcy in both men and women classes fell to Canucks, Empire nations, scattered around the Globe, garnered a scant few points as a full week of athletic activity got underway.

Upholds Laurels

Munro Bourne of Montreal, peer of Canada's sprint swimmers, climaxed the Dominion drive with a spectacular victory last night in the men's 100 yards free style dash. As more than fifteen hundred fans that jammed into Hamilton's municipal pool, stood up and roared, Bourne splashed over four lengths of the tank to win by inches from Norman Brooks, England's hope in the dash event. The pair drove through the green-tinted water side by side with lightning strokes that left the entire field behind with the exception of Bert Gibson, Toronto swimmer. Gibson clung desperately to the leaders from start to finish, but his last length spurt could not match the finale that Bourne and Brooks produced. He was less than two feet behind at the finish.

A few minutes before Jack Aubin of Toronto, had won the 200 yards back stroke title, defeating Sam Bell, of England in a two man struggle. The rest of the field was outclassed by the Canadian star and his British rival R. Flint, of England was third.

Miss M. J. Cooper overcame a 3½ yard lead held by the Canadian to give victory in the 400 yard women's relay to England and split swimming wins evenly between Canada and England.

Split Bowling Honors

Likewise, in lawn bowling, the Britons and Canucks divided feature honors. Wins in singles and doubles fell to the English, while Canada annexed points in doubles and rink events. The only meeting between the two countries brought a triumph to Canada, Harry Allen's Hamilton quartet defeating the English four skipped by J. Frieth, 27 to 19.

South Africa accounted for the Canadian singles representative, A. S. Reid of Vancouver, in a one-sided match, and England's individual champion, Robert Colquhoun, was an easy winner over J. C. Thoms of South Africa.

Canadian girls—two of them—had the field to themselves in the women's high diving competition. Pearl Stoneham, of Montreal, outpointed her lone rival, Helen McCormack of Toronto. Valerie Davies, of Wales, and Olive Whitsett, of England, withdrew the last minute.

Alfie Phillips, Toronto diving star, won the high diving for men; his clubmate, Cyril Kennett, placing second.

A crowd estimated at 15,000 swarmed over Hamilton's waterfront for the Canadian racing canoe championships, held in conjunction with the Empire sports. Lachine club, of Montreal, sent out four winning crews and amassed a total of 26 points to easily outscore 19 competing clubs. Winning crews will take part in the International Canoe Regatta.

RETURNS ABOARD THE QUEST

Reg Dixon, member of R. C. Y. C. Toronto and well-known sportsman of this city has returned from Rochester where he had witnessed the series of races for the international yachting honors aboard the defeated Canadian challenger, the Quest. In writing of his trip across Lake Ontario, Mr. Dixon says "the Quest left Rochester amid the blowing of whistles and salutes early Saturday morning at 7 a.m. There were four aboard the sailing vessel, Walter Windeyer, Jr. of the racing crew, a paid hand, Mr. Denham of England and Reg Dixon. Mr. Denham is an authority on sail making and is foreman of the firm of Patsey and Lapthorne, master sailmakers of the world He accompanied Mr. and Mrs. Patsey to see the races for the Canada's cup and also expects to witness the series for the America's trophy. Windeyer skipped the boat for the first five miles and then turned it over to Dixon who was at the tiller for the greater part of the journey. During the night a storm arose and it was necessary to drop the mainsail and sail by jib alone for almost an hour. The spray covered the whole boat as she ploughed over the waves with her lee rail buried and leaning at a 45 degree angle. It was necessary to sail with the aid of compass and by the stars.

In describing the ship he said, "The racing craft is not weighed down any more than possible and accomodation for living quarters is not all that it might be. The ship has a hollow mast 65 feet high and it consists of two pieces of wood glued together. The boat itself was designed and assembled in Scotland and finished in Canada at a cost of approximately $15,000.

In the races, the Quest proved to be the best in moderate winds but the Thisbe had a slight edge in both light and very heavy winds. The boats were very evenly matched and provided a most interesting series of races. The above cut shows the Quest with Skipper Commodore Gooderham in the insert.

Mr. Dixon will enter his 14 foot dinghy in the British Empire games at Hamilton on Friday and Saturday of this week.

Canada's Lady Swimming Star Bows to England in Aquatic Events.

HAMILTON, Ont., Aug. 19 (By W. R. Wheatley, Canadian Press Staff Writer). — Swimming competitions last night topped off a full day's program of the British Empire Games that included Canadian canoe championships, Empire lawn bowling and Empire high diving.

Canada's lady swimming stars bowed to those from England, but the men representatives of the Dominion annexed for Canada the other two events. England relay team opened the evening with a victory in the 400 yards event, and Miss Joyce Cooper scored the Old Country's second victory in the 100 yards event for women. Munro Bourne, Canada's sprint star from Montreal and J. Aubing of Ottawa placed Canada on an equal footing with the Mother Country by winning respectively, the 100 yards free style and the 200 yards breast stroke.

The lawn bowling events, which will be continued to-day, found Canada and England occupying leading positions as a result of the singles and doubles competitions.

Lachine canoeists from the Province of Quebec made a runaway in the points score for the first day of the Dominion canoe championship struggles, and are away to an unbeatable lead.

PLAY FINAL GAME WEDNESDAY NIGHT

Utronki and Masterson Are Scheduled to do the Pitching.

The East Peterborough League will wind up in a blaze of glory for one team tomorrow evening when Crescents and Canadian Generals meet in the final contest for Tip Top Tailors trophy, emblematic of the league championship and the right to enter the O.B.A.A. semi-finals with the strong Point Anne club as the opposition next Saturday. The teams have been notified to be on the grounds to permit the game starting at six o'clock. As Alex Kay has been called out of town, the umpires will be Ed. LeBarr at the plate and Jack McCarney and Bob Ross at the bases.

Casey Masterson and Vin Utronki are announced as the pitching selections. Masterson dropped a hard luck game with Utronki, the second of the series, when he lost control in the ninth, the Generals putting over three runs to win by 6 to 5.

Hardill for Crescents and Crary, Ross and Frost for Canadian Generals will be ready for the relieving act if necessary.

CHAMPION MERMAID OF U. S. LIKELY TO ENTER MARATHON

Ethel McGarry is Mystery—Will Not Divulge Plans But is in Training.

ACTIONS ADD ZEST.

(Special to The Examiner)

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 19.—None of these classic crawls for thousands in cash and world titles seem to be complete without a dash of mystery.

Once there was a starter from Dutch Guiana who refused to reveal his name till the day of the race. For all he did, he might have kept it secret for ever. In 1929, another marathoner announced he had made a marvellous eel-proof grease which he was guarding jealously. That year, there were no eels worth mentioning.

Now, with the 10-mile dash for mermaids at the Canadian National Exhibition all set for Friday, one of the most powerful and unexpected contenders has been discovered in a Toronto training camp. She will not admit her ambitions and Exhibition authorities refuse to affirm or deny the rumor that she is officially in.

This is Ethel McGarry, famous U. S. Olympic star and holder of a bevy of titles. The story is that she is turning pro, as Martha Norelius did last year and Ethel Hertle for Catalina, determined to make her first appearance in money ranks, a world title effort.

Miss McGarry, tall blonde and smiling, is uncommunicative. Her home is in Buffalo. She has been on Toronto's beaches for some days. She likes Canada, finds the weather fine, enjoys her daily swims and thinks the Canadian National Exhibition is a great institution. But she can't, for publication, think of any reason for being here.

The blonde distance queen is the most learned of aquatic stars for she has both her B. A. and M. A. from Columbia University.

With her is one of America's best-known coaches, Capt. Charles B. Scully, the man who made Eddie Keating, present world's champion, a swimmer and pulled him through the gruelling Lake George grind—only starter to finish. Mr. Scully has no news for the reporters. He is well and happy and sends greetings to his Canadian friends.

"Is Miss McGarry deserting the amateurs for the Toronto classic?" He knows, no doubt, but he doesn't say. If you telephone the training camp, you are likely to learn that neither are in Toronto.

OVER The KITTY By "Newsie"

Daily Happenings on Peterborough Bowling Club's Greens.

The doubles competition advanced a step last night, and how the mighty did fall! Chief Gimblett took a good slide, Bob Martin handing him a 25-15 trimming Jack Sedgewick appeared to be very subdued after the games, and a scrutiny of the score cards showed him in the discard by a 20-13 count at the hands of Jim Skinner. It was a bad night for dentists, Drs. Long, Allan and Fulford all going down to defeat.

Alex. Anderson rolled his R's to advantage and beat Bill Fletcher after a close game 17-15. It might be some consolation to Bill to gnow that the Hamilton "Spectator" says that a Scotch rink is hard to beat at any time as they "give no quarter."

A summary of the night play showed:

Skinner	20	Sedgewick	13
Anderson	17	Fletcher	15
Sexsmith	20	Johnston	17
Barton	26	Fulford	13
Fox	23	Routly	8
Wood	32	Penrose	7
R. Martin	25	Gimblett	15
Disney	23	Dr. Allan	14
Coleman	15	Gillies	10

"Newsie' hears that Oshawa Club has invited six mixed rinks to Oshawa next Thursday. As this is the night of our dance we will have to leave that trip to a few of the fellows who throw a mean bowl but can't shake a leg.

Some of the boys are going to Cannington on Wednesday afternoon and have been promised a good time.

"On with the Dance" is still the cry around the club house and members are asked to rally to the support of the House Committee who are very anxious to make Thursday night's entertainment a big success.

If it's club news you will find it here daily.

Chicago Cubs Secure Former Giant Player

CHICAGO, Aug. 19. — Long George Kelly, former New York Giant and Cincinnati first baseman, has returned to the National League—as a member of the Chicago Cubs.

President William L. Veeck of the Cubs yesterday said that Kelly, who was released by Cincinnati more than a month ago, had been obtained from the Minneapolis Club of the American Association, for Malcolm Moss, young left-handed pitcher, and one other player to be named this week.

Kelly will report for work today and will play first base, while Charlie Grimm recovers from a spike wound, suffered Saturday when Frank O'Doul of the Phillies slid into him.

MAYNEOARD LOSES IN FIRST ROUND

Local Man Eliminated By E. H. Hooper 17-10 in Competition For Dominion Trophy.

TORONTO, Aug. 19.—Battles of wits and strategy, cleverly placed guards and deep set back bowls and keen competition, seasoned with ideal weather conditions, marked the opening yesterday of the 38th annual Dominion lawn bowling tournament being played on the lawns of the Victoria, St. Matthew's, Oakwood, Rusholme and High Park clubs' lawns. While there were nine defaults in the primary round of the Dominion Gold Cup competition, the closeness of the scores and the interesting struggles of the most efficient bowlers in the province for the right to continue into the ensuing round more than made up for the few defaults.

Reach Second Round

In the Dominion event the second round was completed and in most cases in the early events the games smacked strongly of fine contests to come when play nears the finals. F. C. Wilson and his three experts from London, who took the trophy last season, have been successful so far and seemingly are capable of making a great bid for the major rink honors again.

Toronto bowlers suffered a loss when T. J. Simpson and his mates, who won the event in 1927 for Balmy Beach, were eliminated in the first round.

In the Ontario Cup, which is the consolation event for the rinks, play was carried through the first round and part way through the second.

In the preliminary round for the Dominion trophy J. W. Mayneord defeated G. Hall of Dentonia 24-16 but lost out in first round of the competition to E. H. Hooper of Parkdale club Toronto, 17-10.

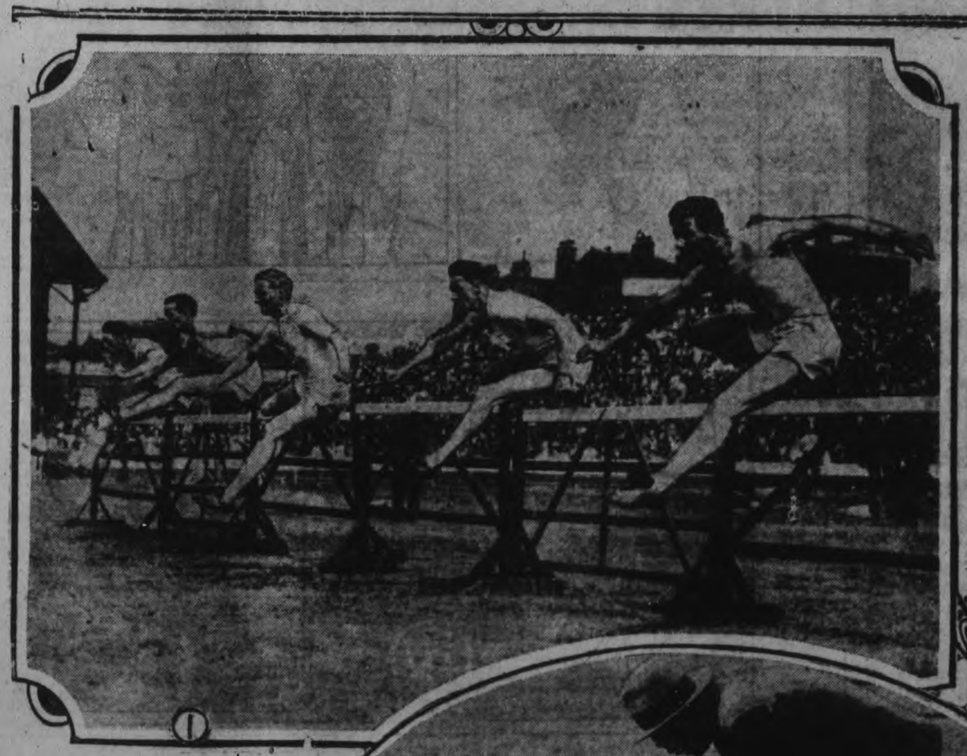
LORD BURGHLEY LOWERS CANADIAN RECORD IN 440 YARD HURDLE RACE



eKen interest is always shown in the appearance of David, Lord Burghley, England's champion hurdler, at track meets, but Canadians this week have a chance to see for the first time this fair-haired Englishman, who won for England the 440-yard hurdles, lowering the Canadian mark . Like Englishmen—of the right type — Lord Burghley is somewhat shy and reticent, and a splendid sportsman. No. 1 shows Lord Burghley after winning the 120 yards hurdles and 440 yards hurdles at the recent A.A.A. championships. No. 2 H. G. Davies of South Africa, who is considered Lord Burghley's chief competitor in the British Empire hurdles event. No. 3, another photo of Lord Burghley, who carries with him his Olympic panama hat.

A BEDTIME STORY

by Howard R. Garis

UNCLE WIGGILY'S PRUNE JUICE.

"Here, Wiggy, please feed this to the baby, will you?"

Mrs. Longears held out a dish to her rabbit husband. She was in the kitchen of the hollow stump bungalow with Nurse Jane Fuzzy Wuzzy, who was getting breakfast for the many little rabbit boys and girls who called Uncle Wiggily by the name of "Daddicums."

"Feed what to which baby?" asked Uncle Wiggily, who had hopped out of bed early to twinkle his pink nose and get ready for the day's adventure. "What to which baby, my dear?"

Well might the bunny gentleman ask that question, for there were so many little rabbits in the hollow stump bungalow that some of them had no

'Goo!' murmured Baby Wopsie

names, as yet, but were given a number like the pages of a story book. Uncle Wiggily said if many more rabbits came to live with him he was afraid there would not be names enough for all, and some of them would have to go through life with nothing but a number.

"Give this to the baby in the high chair out on the porch," said Mrs. Longears, putting into her husband's paw a dish filled with something brown. "There's only one baby in a high chair on the porch, so you can't make any mistake," went on the rabbit lady with a laugh.

Once she had told Uncle Wiggily to give a baby the bottle of milk, but as there were then about ten little rabbit babies, all taking the bottle, Mr. Longears didn't know which one to feed, and he tried to divide one bottle of milk among ten little bunnies so that none of them had enough and they all cried and you should have heard them! Ten little rabbit babies all crying at once! My goodness! Don't you say so yourself? I thought so.

But this time Uncle Wiggily could make no mistake for there was but one baby for him to feed.

Taking the dish of brown stuff which his wife handed him, Uncle Wiggily went out on the porch where his baby rabbit was sitting in her high chair and he smiled at her and said:

"Good morning, my dear! I am glad to see you, but I can't remember, at this moment, what your name is. Perhaps you have a number."

"No, this one has a name. She is Wopsie," explained Jingle, who was one of the older rabbit girls. This is Baby Wopsie Daddicums."

"Glad to meet you, I'm sure," said Uncle Wiggily, sitting down near his own little baby bunny. Jingle ran in the bungalow to get some carrot oatmeal for breakfast before it should be all gone. "And I wonder what it is Mother has given me to feed you?" went on Mr. Longears. "What's this, my dear?" he asked Baby Wopsie, holding the dish of brown stuff under her little pink nose.

"Goo!" murmured Baby Wopsie.

"Oh, this is goo, is it?" asked Uncle Wiggily, peeking at the brown stuff in the dish. "Well, it looks like it and I hope you like it. Sit up pretty, now, and take your goo."

"That isn't goo, Daddicums!" said Jangle, who was Jingle's twin sister. "That's prune juice for the baby."

"Oh, prune juice? Very good!" spoke Mr. Longears. "I thought it didn't look like goo. Well now, Wopsie, sit up and take your prune juice. I'm sure it's good for you."

There was a tiny spoon in the dish and, filling it with the brown prune juice, Uncle Wiggily held it in front of Baby Wopsie.

"Open your mouth!" said Uncle Wiggily, kindly.

Wopsie opened her mouth, but instead of taking in the prune juice she let out a sneeze and blew the juice from the spoon all over her Daddicums.

"Oh! Oh!" cried Uncle Wiggily, setting the dish down on the shelf of the high chair and taking out his handkerchief to wipe the prune juice off his pink, twinkling nose. "Something wrong here! But I know you didn't mean to do it, Wopsie, so I'll forgive you. Now, are you all through sneezing? If you are we'll start on the prune juice again."

Once more Uncle Wiggily reached for the dish and the spoon, but when he looked in the dish not a drop of the sweet, brown juice was there. It was all gone!

"My goodness, Wopsie!" cried the rabbit gentleman. "What's this? Did you reach out and get the prune juice and eat it all yourself when I was wiping my pink nose? If you did you are very clever and I don't need to feed you with a spoon. Did you do that, Wopsie?"

There was a laugh behind Wopsie's high chair and out came the head of Teeter, one of the older boy rabbits. Around Teeter's mouth was something brown and Uncle Wiggily said:

"Oh, Teeter! Did you reach around and get Wopsie's prune juice?"

"Yes, Daddicums, I did," answered Teeter. "I was so hungry I couldn't help it. But I'll get you more prune juice for Wopsie." And when Teeter came out with another dish of prunes, Wopsie ate it nicely.

CATTLE RUSTLERS ARE PROVING MENACE OVER WESTERN CANADA

Shades of Ancient Frontier Stories Only Modern Edition Use Trucks.

GOV'T TAKES HAND.

By Frank Steele

(Special to Examiner, Copyright 1930)

LETHBRIDGE, Alta., August 19.—Stockmen of the western provinces of Canada and those of the cattle states of the West, including Montana and Wyoming are making a determined effort to stamp out cattle rustling and the livestock organizations of Alberta and Saskatchewan and the northwestern states are urging that all hides and carcasses be marked by government officials, that the ears be left on the hides and that stock inspection areas be enlarged to include recognized range areas.

During the past year, there has been an epidemic of cattle stealing and these twentieth century rustlers lack nothing in boldness. Many of those apprehended have proved to be mere boys, but tender years seemingly had no bearing on the daring of the offenders. Not a few from the range country of Southern Alberta sentenced during the past 12 months are serving terms in jail and the police are continuing the crusade against this form of lawlessness.

In the so-called good old days, cattle rustling was pretty much of a slow and cumbersome practice, but this is all changed for the modern edition of the old frontier outlaw drives a truck, places his four-footed loot on the machine and whisks the animals hundreds of miles away to be disposed of. It may be only an overnight matter, but once the calves are "taken for a ride" these days, it is just too bad for the stockman for only a small percentage of the stock lost is recovered.

Work in Red Deer Country.

In this immediate area and in the High River country where the Prince of Wales has his ranch, cattle rustling is not so easy as rustlers have to keep pretty close to the marked trails. However, in the Red Deer country on the Goose Lake line where there are large areas of unfenced land, and in the sparsely settled areas of border states, the loss to rustlers is more than that attributed to timber wolves and other menaces combined. In commenting recently on cattle rustling in the province, Supt. Bryan, head of the Alberta provincial police, stated that it would require 200 trained patrolmen to properly cope with the situation. As it is the police are bending every effort to stamp out the menace.

Senator Dan Riley, of High River, president of the Western Canada Stock Growers Association, admits the widespread activity of these range rascals and admits the stockmen's inability to cope with the outbreak. Years ago the bold, bad men of the plains shifted a brand or drove a handful of stock to a new pasture and from there disposed of them. To-day the rustlers swoop down upon the range country with all the fury of the "Four Horsemen" except that the horses are high-powered trucks. Spotting some choice animals, the pirates load on to their trucks bodily and in a trice they are lost in the night.

The old cattle thief ran a sporting chance of being caught, but the new-fangled outlaws leave nothing behind them, but the fading rumble of their trucks. And by the sun up, when the boys on the ranch are sampling Ling Singsham and—the truck-driving cattle thief is peddling his beef in some other part of the province.

It's a new racket and not without its glamor, and the ghosts of the old be-whiskered ranchers who used to line the bars of the frontier cow towns must sigh at this latest outbreak of an ancient if dishonorable pastime. Truly the West is not what it used to be.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE PLANS DRIVE FOR NEW MEMBERS

Circulars Are Now Being Sent Out to the Old Members.

LEADERS IN PROGRESS

Present members of the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce are being circularised, as the initial step, in the launching of an intensive drive for new members, which is now under way.

"Have you a prospective member in mind? The membership committee is asking that each member endeavour to bring in one new member within the next week or so, and accordingly members are being asked to think of some business associate, competitor, friend or neighbour, who they could interest by pointing out the good work which the Chamber is always performing in striving for social, material and business progress in this city.

The Chamber of Commerce is a voluntary organization and membership is entirely a matter of goodwill toward Peterborough City and County and an expression of desire that efforts to remain in the front ranks of progress shall be made.

The Chamber of Commerce offers every good citizen in this city and county an opportunity to combine his community goodwill with that of his fellow, whether that good will be only in the form of finances or whether it be moral and active support.

The circulars are being sent out in the form of a personal appeal from James Dutton, the President from the office of the manager-secretary, Frank G. Stinson.

COPP IS MADE NEW INSPECTOR

Old Peterborough Boy Will Take Inspectorate Left Vacant By Richard Lees.

START SEPTEMBER 1.

The departure for Peterborough of Leo Copp, who is leaving Temiskaming, where he has resided for the past four years, during which time he has been Public School Inspector for Northern Temiskaming and part of Cochrane, is much regretted there, according to the New Liskeard Speaker. Mr. Copp, who is a native of this district, is returning here to fill the post of Rural School Inspector, vacated this year by Richard Lees, who has served in that capacity for many years. Thirty schools in Peterborough County will be under Mr. Copp's charge.

"New Liskeard, although not in Mr. Copp's inspectorate," says the New Liskeard Speaker, "will be a big loser through his departure, as he was a citizen who never thought of himself when it came to a question of being of service to the community. His work with the boys has been especially helpful to them, and they will miss him greatly. We know of no worker amongst the young people whose departure will be more generally regretted."

Mr. Copp will take up his new duties here in September.

FORESEE NEW RADIO SYSTEM

Use Ultra-Sonic Beams Projected Through Water to Ships.

RADIO TELEPHONY USED.

TORONTO, August 19. (C.P.) — Secret communication between ships by means of ultra-sonic beams, projected through water, was suggested as a future development of radiation by Dr. R. W. Boyle, of the National Research Laboratory, Ottawa, addressing the fifth annual convention of the Institute of Radio Engineers in session here.

Lt.-Colonel G. A. G. Lee, of the engineering department of the general post office, London, told the delegates a radio receiving set was not necessary to receive radio programs in his country—all that was needed, he said, was a loud speaker, if one is a member of a system of radio-telephony that has been established.

By turning a dial, he explained, which is similar to one on an ordinary radio, the householder locates whatever station he desires, and that station immediately sends him by wire whatever broadcast is on the air.

TRADE DETERIORATION CONTINUES IN INDIA

LONDON, Eng., Aug. 19. (C.P.)—The continued deterioration of India's business and trade was reported in an official communique summing up conditions to August 16.

"The continued boycott of British goods, especially cloth, threatens imminent ruin to a large number of small Indian dealers who are unable to resist the pressure of social boycott and other methods of coercion."

The statement was issued by the Government of India.

Complete Dredging Of Oshawa Harbor

Dredge Owned By Toronto Company to Start Work in the Near Future.

OSHAWA, Aug. 19.—To complete dredging operations in the harbour channel the dredge Baxter Dick owned by the Sand and Material Company of Toronto, arrived at Oshawa harbour yesterday. The work will be carried out largely in the turning basin which must be dredged from its present depth to a minimum of 19 feet.

Arriving at the harbor at 1.30 o'clock yesterday morning, the Tree Line Company steamer Oakbay docked with the first inward shipment consisting of canned goods for an Oshawa wholesale company from Montreal.

An endeavor will be made by the city of Oshawa to purchase a tract of land adjacent to the harbour to give direct access, the city council decided last night.

INDIA'S PROBLEM REQUIRES STUDY

English Literature Developed Nationalist Movement Says Sir John Simon.

AFFECTS CANADA.

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 19.— "The growth in Indian minds of a belief in self-government is an achievement brought about by the power of an idea which Britain has spread throughout the world, an idea which is Britain's greatest contribution to the art of Government," declared the Rt. Hon. Sir John Simon, lawyer, statesman and head of the famous Simon Commission in a radio address delivered here last night over a C.P.R. network ranging from coast to coast.

Sir John emphasized that it was the teachings of British political philosophy and the spread of English literature which had developed the Nationalist movement in India. He called upon the British people to contribute their experience and constructive statesmanship to the progress of India toward the goal of self-government that had been set before her, but he warned that its attaining could only be the work of time.

"It is my deep conviction," said Sir John, "that the future of the world as a whole—the new world as well as the old—will be profoundly affected by the handling of this Asian problem and that it is the duty of all of us to learn more about it and to study it with sympathy and understanding. It is the duty of Canadian people no less than of British people, for Canada has now entered world politics.

NEW USE FOUND FOR LIGHT BEAMS

Radio Engineers Told Inventions Will Remove Many Burdens.

VACUUM TUBE INVOLVED.

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 19. (C.P.)—Beams of light, for centuries used by man only as weapon against darkness, are destined in the future to lift great burdens from the shoulders of mankind in the process of industrial production, stated Keith Henney, associate editor of electronics in a paper presented before the fifth annual and first international convention of the Institute of Radio Engineers here to-day.

Modern miracles in manufacture, with beams of light and beams of electrons playing the principal roles, will come through development of the use of the electron or vacuum tube and the photo-electric cell, delicate mechanisms which make possible both radio and sound motion pictures, he stated.

TARZAN OF THE APES No. 40 (Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.) By Edgar Rice Burroughs

The sailors also saw that smoke. The ship came about and headed for land. There was a great scurrying about on deck. A boat was lowered; in it a great chest was placed. Men bent to the oars, pulled rapidly to the very point where Tarzan crouched, hidden in a tree.

Beaching the boat, the men lifted out the great chest. They argued angrily—they quarreled, and a sailor buried his pick in the brain of the rat-faced man. Digging a deep trench, they buried the treasure with the corpse, obliterating all signs. Then they pulled rapidly back to the "Arrow."

The smoke on the horizon increased, and the sailors lost no time in getting under full sail. Tarzan, an interested spectator, sat speculating on the strange actions. He wondered what the chest contained. Dropping to the ground he found a spade and began digging until he uncovered the body.

He dragged it from the grave, then unearthed the chest, replacing the body and the earth. Four sailors had sweated beneath the burden of that chest. Tarzan of the Apes picked it up easily and carried it into the densest part of the jungle. He travelled for several hours.

His brain told him the chest contained valuables. He desired to open it, but the iron lock and bands baffled even his strength. So he buried it. Darkness settled before he was back in the cabin's vicinity. Astonished, he saw the interior of the cabin appeared as bright as day.

brought before Magistrate Langley and it was learned from Provincial Constable Sommerville that his name may be Warrington and that he hails from Charlbot Lake.

During the time that court officials pondered his identification the man smiled from ear to ear and seemed to consider it all a huge joke.

"Why, he's got a perpetual smile" declared the magistrate.

He was remanded until Friday to allow police more time to secure conclusive identification.

Moses Amoyette, charged with criminal negligence as a result of an accident on Saturday evening in which Miss Aileen Milloy was injured, obtained bail this morning. J. K. Hughes and the accused's solicitor, J. A. O'Brien, posted $2,000 necessary for his freedom. The case will be tried to-morrow.

Only $16,000 will be spent on putting the film into marketable condition, Mr. Brownbridge said last night. "Carry On Sergeant" is 11,000 feet in length. At a special meeting of the Peterborough and District Football Association, last night, the Canadian Packing club requested that the game scheduled for this evening with the Brinton Athletic be postponed until Saturday afternoon. After hearing the legitimate claims of their representative, the excecutive acceded to their request, although they stated that they would play the game if the board so decided.

There was no objection to the rearrangement until the game was scheduled for Saturday, then the Brinton Representative lodged his complaint and stated that they would not play Saturday, while the captain, Tom Westwood assured the fans that the Brinton would field a team as usual.

CANADIAN CLUBS LEAD AMERICANS IN CANOE SPRINTS

Canucks Show Marked Superiority in Single Blade Events.

SCORE 21 POINTS TO 8.

Weather Conditions Against Paddlers—Rain Halts Program.

HAMILTON STADIUM, Ontario, Aug. 19. (By. W. R. Wheatley, Canadian Press Staff Writer)—Rain brought a temporary halt to aquatic and bowling events on the third day of the British Empire Games, but the heaviest showers luckily came just before the noon adjournments and little harm was done to the morning programmes.

Canadian conceists were far in the lead over their United States opponents. The Dominion had counted in the victory column in only one of three lawn bowling events.

Canada's canoeists opened their morning schedule on the choppy waters of Hamilton Bay with a victory by Quakenbush of Parkdale Canoe Club, Toronto in the junior single blade singles. Canadians placed both second and third in the person of Sales of Island Aquatic and Wing of Gananoque. They scored all points again in the junior fours, single blade, the O'Neill crew of St. Lamberts' Montreal, outraching the Redpath crew of Parkdale and the Scott quartet of Sudbury to the finish line. The visitors from across the line took first place in both the double blade events—the senior tandem doubles and the senior single doubles Riedel of New York was their star paddler winning the singles and teaming with Robinson of New York to capture the tandem event.

The Hamilton Victoria's rink entered in the Empire bowling contest kept up its good work of yesterday by defeating the South African quartet this morning, 29—14 in a 20 end match that was halted by rain. England also figured in the rink victories by defeating Scotland, 19—16. W. Fielding of South Africa offered a definite setback to Arthur S. Reid of Vancouver, one of the Dominion's best trundlers, by winning the singles event this morning on the 28th end after a great rally.

Canoeists and bowlers will again be in action this afternoon with yachting events, also in the program at the waterfront. At mid-afternoon and early this evening the rowing entrants will have their first competitions since inception of the games.

The Canadian women's track championships are being held at the Civic Stadium this afternoon, and the swimming contingent will see action again to-night at the Municipal Bathing Pool.

HAMILTON, Ont., Aug. 19 (C.P.)—Canadian crews were well out in front of the International Canoe Regatta with 21 points as compared with the America's 8, when rain forced temporarily postponement of the regatta early this afternoon.

The Canadian crews show marked superiority in the single blade events and were also surprisingly strong in the double-bladed races which were considered the strong point of the United States crews.

Lead Junior Singles

Canadian clubs made a clean sweep of the junior single blade singles event; placed second in the senior tandem doubles; came one-two-three in the junior four single blade; and second and third in the senior single double blade. The Americans, however, certainly were good at the double blade paddling; Riedel of New York, paired with Robinsion, won their tandem, while he scored an impressing win in the senior single double blades.

Weather conditions were against the paddlers again to-day. The water was very choppy, while rain had been threatening all morning. Finally, just as the senior single ended, a heavy downpour began and everyone promptly sought shelter.

NEW ZEALANDER DEFEATS REID

Canada's Chances Are Good to Capture Rink Honors.

ENGLAND WINS.

GAGE PARK, Hamilton, August 19 (By Elmer Dulmage, Canadian Press Staff Writer). — Arthur S. Reid, who last week came to the East and conquered the pick of Dominion lawn bowlers to-day has his challenge for Empire trundling supremacy definitely blocked in a late game rally by New Zealand's individual champion. The Vancouver Star, an easy victim yesterday to the deadly draw shots of a South Africa opponent, lost a commanding lead early as W. Fielding staged a remarkable comeback to win on the 28th end.

With both players canny, running when an end seemed lost, and bunching bowls around the kitty at both ends of the green, the only singles event of the morning became a close battle that attracted a large gallery. Reid went into an early lead with a three and two on the first two ends. He led by 10 to 6 at the 10th and by 16 to 7 at the 14th. Fielding's rally started here, but he was still four shots in arrears when the Vancouverite was within a point of the match.

Scoring on three consecutive ends, the New Zealander tied the match. He won it on the 28th with a draw on his third bowl that nestled inches away from the kitty. Reid's desperate runner was a fraction wide and went clear through to the ditch.

Canada Looks a Winner

Canada loomed shortly after noon as the most serious threat for rink honors. While England was defeating Scotland, Harry Allen's Hamilton Victorias marked up their second victory of the tournament. They defeated South Africa 29 to 14 in a 20-end match that was stopped by a sudden shower of rain. The Hamilton quartet were winners over England yesterday.

South Africa never threatened to upset the triumphant Canadian string. Not until the fifth end did they even break into the score column. At the ninth the Allen forces had mounted their lead to 17 shots. At the sixteenth the count was 25 to 4. The Africans got in a five-end on the 20th that brought their total into double figures.

England's win over Scotland placed Canada in a good position to capture the rinks championship of the Empire. The Scots worked valiantly to stave off defeat, scoring six shots on the final three ends. They were losers by 19 to 6.

PILOT IN BURNING PLANE SAVES 4

Passengers Fight Off Flames With Extinguishers Till Landing Made.

EXPLOSION FOLLOWS.

PONTIAC, Mich., Aug. 19.—(CP)—While his four passengers—one of them a woman—protected him and themselves with fire extinguishers, Bernard Rawson 22, a Bay City, Mich., pilot, yesterday safely landed a burning airplane from a height of 3,000 feet.

Rawson, handling a cabin monoplane for the Aircraft Corporation was taking the passengers from Cleveland to Bay City. Near here, Cleo Slagle and Miss Florence Davis on the front, discovered the fire and called to Rawson.

While the pilot dropped looking for a landing place, Slagle, Miss Davis and the other passengers, George Commons and Bousfield Ward, seized fire extinguishers and kept the flames out of the cabin.

After dropping 2,500 feet, Rawson saw that the blaze was growing more serious and landed at once, barely missing a hedge fence. A few minutes after the five left the plane, it was wrecked by a gasoline explosion. Except for scratches due to their hurried exit the occupants of the plane were unhurt.

MORAND URGES BAN ON FINISHED CARS BE SET UP

Plan is Sanctioned By Border Cities Municipalities Conference.

RELIEVE UNEMPLOYMENT.

Windsor Alderman Opposed Fearing U. S. May Retaliate Making Matters Worse.

WINDSOR, Ont., August 19. (C.P.)—The placing of a ban on the importation of all completely finished automobiles as a measure of relief in the unemployment situation, was urged by Hon. Dr. Raymond D. Morand, M.P.-elect, at a conference of officers of Border Cities municipalities, members of the House of Commons, and Ontario Legislature, and labor organization executives to-day.

Dr. Morand urged that this was one way of increasing manufacturing in Canada, and the proposal received the approval of the meeting. It was decided to forward a resolution to the Dominion Government asking for immediate action.

Another resolution emphasized that there is plenty of labor available in the Border communities, and that outsiders would not be given favorable consideration in employment. It was stated that 5000 men were out of work at the border. The government will be urged to proceed with the Federal building plans for a postoffice and customs building.

Sharp criticism of Dr. Morand's proposal came from Frank Mitchell, Windsor alderman, and head of a truck manufacturing concern, who declared that if Canada took the action suggested retaliation might be expected and then some 5,000 men employed in Detroit plants, and living in Windsor, might find themselves in Windsor, might find themselves employment would be increased rather than cut down.

Reports of Blindness, Face Lifting and Fist Fights All Unanswered.

MOTHER ISSUES CHALLENGE

Congregation of Famous Evangelist Continue Prayers For Her Recovery.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 20. — (C.P.) — The mystery shrouding Aimee Semple McPherson's isolation at a Malibu Beach cottage remained unsolved to-day, as conflicting reports of illness, blindness, a face lifting operation, and a fistic encounter with her mother, went unanswered by the evangelist.

Guards were stationed at the windows and doors of the cottage and Mrs. McPherson denied herself to all but a few, while from numerous purported official sources emanated statements about her condition.

Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, mother of the evangelist, undergoing treatment for a broken nose, which she says her daughter gave her, issued a demand that Mrs. McPherson return to her pulpit at Angelus Temple and show her congregation "the effects of the face lifting operation" she says the noted pastor underwent recently.

Resting Easily.

Late last night an official at the Temple announced Mrs. McPherson "was resting easily." Earlier she had been reported in a serious condition from a nervous breakdown, and the board of directors of Angelus Temple asserted "it is true physicians are greatly concerned for her recovery."

Mrs. Harriet Jordan, chairman of the Temple board of directors, posted a bulletin in the church yard which read: "Sister McPherson is still blind. No marked improvement. Suffering greatly. Please continue earnest prayer." A few hours previously Mrs. Jordan had posted a bulletin stating her leader had suffered "A sinking spell and is near death."

Meanwhile in the watch tower of Angelus Temple where Mrs. McPherson often has led her flock to pray for the ill and dying, many of her followers prayer for her recovery.

AUSTRALIA IS BAD BOY OF EMPIRE

Noted Actor States All People Think of is Sport—Business Neglected.

NEEDS CLEANING UP.

MONTREAL, Que., Aug. 20— (CP) —"Australia is the bad boy of the British Empire and only a social revolution can save her from complete bankruptcy and ruin", declared William Faversham, noted actor, who arrived in Montreal last night from Vancouver, on his return journey from an extended tour of the Antipodes.

"All the people seem to care about is King Sport", continued Mr. Faversham, "football, cricket and horse racing flourish at the expense of business and industry.

"What I feel Australia needs is a group of shrewed capitalists say three from Canada and three from England, to go in and clean the country up, start things all over again and put her upon an altogether new footing."

Asked about theater conditions in Australia Mr. Faversham said. "It is sad to see a country which once had a fine theatrical tradition, losing complete interest in any form of theatrical entertainment, even movies".

177 BRANCHES SEND MEN.

HAMILTON, Ont., Aug. 20.—(CP) —With over three hundred delegates in attendance at the opening session the Fifth Annual Convention of the Ontario Provincial Command of the Canadian Legion was opened here this morning with appropriate ceremonies. Addresses of welcome to the delegates, who represented 177 branches of the Canadian Legion in Ontario, were delivered by Mayor John Peebles and other civic dignatories of Hamilton.

The presidential address of Lt. Col. C. H. Ackerman, Peterborough, Provincial President stressed the appropriateness of holding the convention in Hamilton while the sportsmen of the whole Empire were assembled in the city, and said he felt this augured well for the success of the convention.

Organization he said, was still the greatest problem of the future and while there had been an increase from 135 branches to 177 branches since the 1929 convention, there was still ample room for further increase through active work by the representatives.

AUSSIES SCORE 595 RUNS FOR FIRST INNINGS

Australians Surpass English Total For First Innings of Test Match.

NEW DOUBLE MARK SET.

Don Bradman Runs His Personal Total to 232 Runs For Seven Wickets.

(Canadian Press Cable)

LONDON, Eng., Aug. 20.—Australia entrenched themselves in a strong position in the cricket test match with England today when they scored 695 runs in their reply to the homeland's first innings total of 405.

The match is for the Anglo-Australian championship and is being played to a finish. Australia batted for most of today leaving England to open their second innings in the waning light of the late afternoon.

LONDON, Eng., Aug. 20 (Canadian Press Cable) Australia went on their way towards a great first inning score in the cricket test match with England at the Kennington Oval today. At the lunch interval they had put on 551 for four wickets as compared with England's first innings total of 405.

Don Bradman, Australia's youthful cricket master, was again in rare form and personal total of runs at the interval stood at 228, not out. During the morning with A. Jackson he set up a new record partnership for a test match for fourth wicket. They made 243 which figures displaced the 221 made by S. Gregory and G. H. Trott at Lord's in 1896.

Bradman during play to-day also surpassed the best aggregate number of runs in test matches, beating the 905 made by Wally Hammond in Australia in 1928-29.

McCabe had a narrow escape when he snicked Larwood near the slips. Hammond leaped at the ball, but just touched it with his fingers. McCabe then brilliantly boundaried on a cut off one of Larwood's fastest. Bradman was not so fortunate in dealing with Larwood and was caught at the wicket by George Duckworth when he touched a fast one which had the wind behind it.

Scores 232 Runs.

Bradman received a memorable demonstration as he came back to the clubhouse, the twenty thousand spectators present rising and acclaiming him. While his inning in this test match had been at times subdued, it was an eminently correct display under the circumstances. In his 232 runs were sixteen fours.

McCabe straight drove Hammond to the boundary to get his fifty, but immediately afterwards he was brilliantly caught at the wicket by Duckworth, who was at top form to-day after a poor showing in the earlier days of the match. McCabe scored 54, and left at 594.

COMPANION MAY LIVE.

Empty Wine Jug on Edge of Precipice Blamed For Tragedy.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Aug. 20 (C.P.)—The elder of the two unidentified men who fell over the Niagara Falls River Gorge last night, died in hospital early to-day.

The other, though in a critical condition, is expected to recover. He managed to tell a nurse his name was George Wilson, but could not say where he came from.

The men, suffering from fractured skulls and numerous other injuries, were found at the bottom of the 100-foot cliff by a water gauge inspector, William Hoshel, who heard their groans in the darkness.

It was believed the two, after emptying a gallon container of native wine, had fallen asleep on the brink of the Gorge and had rolled over. It was necessary to take the injured men back to the river road along the top of the cliff.

In the shirt band of the man who died from his injuries to-day was sewn the name "G. Ross."

Sydney Celebrates as Final Sections of Harbor Bridge Are Joined.

LARGEST IN WORLD.

SYDNEY, Australia, Aug. 20.—(C P Cable via Reuters)—Union Jacks and Australian colors flew from the tops of cranes and water-side buildings and the shrieking of whistles and sirens today informed the people of Sydney that the two sections of the arch of the great harbor bridge had actually been joined. The bridge the largest in the world, will be illuminated to-night with flood lights to commemorate the event.

The bridge, from Dawes Point, on the south side of the harbor, to Nelson's Point on the north, is 3,770 feet long. In width it stretches 1,675 feet while its headway is 170 feet to allow the passage, even at high tide, of the largest vessels.

The span, which is not entirely completed although the two great steel sections have been closed, will carry a roadway 57 feet wide, four railway lines and two foot walks. The cost of the undertaking has been about six million pounds sterling, or approximately $29,220,000. It will be open to traffic within a month or so.

CAR HITS TRUCK 2 TORONTO MEN LIE NEAR DEATH

Light Coupe Crashes Into Parked Machine on Kingston Highway.

BLINDED BY LIGHTS.

No Driving License Found on Victims — Car Had Michigan Markers.

TORONTO, Ont., August 20 (C.P.) —Crashing at full speed into the rear of a parked truck on the Kingston Road at Stop 27, early to-day, two men in a light coupe sustained serious injuries which may prove fatal. They are in Toronto East General Hospital, and neither has regained consciousness sufficiently to tell his identity.

From papers found in the men's pockets, Provincial Constable J. Kay tentatively identified them as George F. Sparham, 260 Sherbourne Street, Toronto, and F. Hinde, 15 Lennox Avenue, Toronto. Sparham was the driver of the car which bore a Michigan license.

Truck Going West.

The truck was standing on the Highway facing west when the light car crashed into the left rear end of it.

According to the driver of the truck and witnesses the rear light was lit, while witnesses attribute the crash to the fact that Sparham was driving into the lights of an eastbound car.

Hinde, who was on the side of the car which received the impact, suffered chest and head injuries, a fractured collar bone, fractured leg, and severe lacerations on both legs and arms. Sparham has a possible fractured skull. Both injured men were taken to the hospital by passing motorists.

Constable Kay, who investigated, was unable to find a driving license in the pockets of either man, and as a result the ownership of the car is not known.

TARBORO, N.C., Aug. 20.—A mob which yesterday lynched Oliver Moore, 29, negro, confronted to-day the expressed determination of Governor O. Max Gardner to see that its members are prosecuted.

The Governor, who is on a vacation in the western part of the State, characterized the lynching as a "disgrace to North Carolina." He was undetermined whether the State would make an investigation independent of that of Sheriff W. E. Bardon of Edgecombe county, but said the sheriff had "the State back of his county forces."

FRIEND OF WHITE DOES NOT BELIEVE LOVE AFFAIR WAS CAUSE OF DEATH

"Trouble" With Mother Never Amounted to Anything Declares R. Blackadder.

CORNEYEA NOT CALLED.

TWEED, August 20 (Examiner Staff Reporter).—The verdict returned by the Coroner's jury at yesterday's proceedings in the Town Hall, that George Graham White came to his death by drowning, still leaves many aspects of the case shrouded in complete mystery.

Despite the fact that evidence was produced which suggested a possible motive for suicide, close friends of the dead man hold no belief in such a theory, and still suspect that White was the victim of foul play.

Robert Blackadder, a close friend of the deceased, in an interview with The Examiner, following the inquiry, said that the evidence produced concerning White's unsuccessful love affairs and the trouble with his mother had, he was certain, never caused the dead man any undue concern. The "trouble" with his mother never amounted to anything, he stated, adding that it merely hinged on the return of a shawl. As for his love affairs, he used to laugh about them." Asked who the girl referred to in the correspondence as "Joan," Blackadder said he thought she was Joan Cam-

Staff Writer). — England went into undisputed possession of first place for the bowling doubles championship, one of the features of the British Empire Games, by scoring 36-8 win over South Africa, while the Canadian pair met their first defeat and fell bacwk into a tie with New Zealand, their conquerors in this morning's round. The clever draw shots of Skip G. Wright of England figured largely in the one-sided defeat of the South Africans, and it was his final bowl in the sixth end that brought the record single end score ofr the tournament, a seven.

Canada, represented by the Vancouver pair, A. S. Reid and W. W. Moore, lost to the New Zealanders, S. P. McWhannell and W. Fielding by a close 19-16. They were somewhat off form in the early ends and by the time they found the feel of the green they faced a deficit of nine shots. From the twelfth end on, however, with the score at that stage 15-6 against them, the Pacific Coast trundlers amde Canada's great bid, scoring three in the 14th and four in the 17th.

Their comeback brought them to within a single point of their opponents with only four ends to go, but they again faltered and the New Zealanders counted single shots in the 18th, 19th, and 21st ends.

HEAPS ADVISES LARGER WAGES

Tariff Cannot Cure Unemployment Says Winnipeg Member.

6-HOUR DAY.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Aug. 20—"A Made-in-Canada, or a Made-in-Vancouver, or a Made-in-Winnipeg campaign, is no solution of the Canadian unemployment condition," declared A. A. Heaps, Member of Parliment-elect, North Winnipeg, at the Vancouver and New Wastminster District Trades and Labor Council meeting last night.

"The solution," he continued, "is the 6-hour day and larger wages. What the people are suffering from is lack of purchasing power, because, as producer, they receive but a small share of the return from their product. So we must increase their purchasing power. And we must absorb surplus labor. The only way to absorb this surplus is to lessen the hours of work per day.

"The old parties at Ottawa," he said, "have been offering a quack cure-all for years. No matter which party is in power, the remedy for unemployment or any other economic trouble is the tariff. But we members of the Labor Party know the remedy is not effective. All countries are suffering from unemployment today, and tariffs cannot cure it."

CONSTABLE IDENTIFIES HIS TWO ASSAILANTS

HAMILTON, Ont., August 20 (C. P.). — Provincial Police allege that Albert McDonald and Claude Anderson of London, who were arrested here last week on a charge of assaulting two young nurses in an automobile on the outskirts of the city, were the men who injured Provincial Constable Robbie of Queenston, two months ago, when he attempted to arrest them. Constable Robbie is stated to have identified them as his assailants, and they have been charged with the crime. He attempted to place them in custody, as he suspected them of running drugs into this country. McDonald and Anderson have not yet been tried on the charge of assaulting the young women.

LIGHTNING TAKES 4 LIVES IN WEST

Three Men and Five Horses Perish as Alberta Barn is Wrecked.

GIRL IS VICTIM.

CALGARY, Alta., Aug. 20.— Four persons were struck dead yesterday, when violent storms streaked thunder, rain an dlightning across Eastern Alberta. When a barn in the sand dune area of Hanna crumbled under the shock of a lightning bolt, three men were killed and burned in the resultant fire. A girl was killed by lightning near Youngstown, only 50 miles east of Hanna. The victims are:

John Engle, 60.
Sam Engle, his son, 18.
Alex Derr, 35.
Violet Witt, 22.

Miss Witt, who resided on a farm five miles north-west of Youngstown, was hurrying to shelter as she was knocked down by the lightning blast. The two Engles and Derr were cowering in a barn as a bolt shattered the building, stunned them, and left them prey to flames which levelled the barn. Five horses were found dead in the wreckage.

The rain accompanying the lightning storms terminated a dry spell which had extended for three weeks in some parts. Harvesting will be resumed within a few days, it is stated.

Non-Committal Verdict at White Inquest

Suicide Suggested In Letters Seizea

Little or No Evidence in Support of the Suicide Theory Was Forthcoming at the Inquest Held Into the Death of George White Yesterday.

YOUNG MAN IS BELIEVED TO HAVE MET HIS DEATH BY DROWNING IN THE MOIRA RIVER AT TWEED

TWEED, August 20 (Examiner Staff Reporter). — Letters which had been taken possession of by the police, and from which extracts were read suggesting a possible motive for suicide, were the only new features disclosed at the inquest touching on the death of George Graham White, twenty-three-year-old Scottish farm hand, whose body was recovered from the Moira River on Wednesday, August 13.

Little or no evidence in support of the suicide theory was forthcoming from any of the witnesses. After a deliberation of twenty-five minutes, the Coroner's jury filed in with a non-committal verdict as follows:

The Verdict.

"We, the jury empanelled to inquire concerning the death of George Graham White, find that he came to his death by drowning on or about the 10th day of August, A.D. 1930, in the waters of the River Moira in the Township of Hungerford, in the County of Hastings."

Coroner Dr. W. M. Mather conducted the inquest in the little Town Hall, which was filled with interested citizens and witnesses. Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., of Belleville, acted for the Crown.

Forgive and Forget.

Provincial Police-Sergeant H. Storey, of Belleville, in evidence stated he had examined the deceased man's room at John Countryman's farm home, and found several letters. One dated Greenock, Scotland, June 6, contained the following passage, in reference to some slight trouble between White and his mother: "I know she is worrying about you. You were always her son, so George do write and forget all misunderstandings. Forgive and forget." The letter was signed Lizzie Morgan. It is believed she was a former sweetheart of White's.

Extracts from another letter signed Joan, said: "I have been unable to answer your letter owing to illness. I had to leave my place, but your letters got to me alright. . . I am married and happy. Hope you will get someone better than me. You deserve the best."

Police Chief Wallace Moon of Tweed testified to having seen White's body in the Moira River near the west branch bridge of the C.N.R. and about two miles from Tweed in the Township of Hungerford on August 13. He stated the river at that point is four feet deep, while above and below the bridge the depth of water is from six to ten feet. Describing the structure of the bridge, the Chief said: "It is an ordinary railway bridge with no particular protection. The drop from the bridge is about eighteen feet, with a rock bottom immediately below."

Crown Attorney: From correspondence found in White's room, can you ascertain that he had reason to be despondent?

Witness: No! I can't say I can.

Did you observe evidence of violence on the body?

I thought so. There were cuts on the face and head.

The cuts could probably have been caused from falling off the bridge, thought witness.

Medical Testimony.

Dr. A. C. Locke, who conducted the post-mortem examination, said he came to the conclusion that death was caused by drowning. He saw evidence of external violence. There were cuts about the face and the nose was badly bruisd. The nose and mouth appeared to have had violence before death. The injuries could have been caused by falling from the bridge.

Crown Attorney: Could injuries be

MAY CONTINUE HUNT FOR PILOT LOST LAST FALL

Note in Bottle on Saguenay River Signed By Leonce Lizotte.

HOLDS LITTLE HOPE.

Cannon's Parents Believe Message Signed By Their Son.

MONTREAL, August 20.— The recent finding in the Saguenay River of a message in a bottle has caused the family of Pilot William H. Cannon to entertain slight hopes that he will be found alive, and a request will be made to Hon. C. H. Cahan, Secretary of State, to have the Canadian Government resume the search for the lost flier.

While the note was signed by the name of Cannon's companion, it was not in his writing, and Cannon's parents believe their son wrote the note in French and signed Leonce Lizotte's name, as the French mechanic was much better known in the district. The message said that one of the men was dead.

Cannon and Lizotte left St. Felicien on October 9, 1929, to fly with prospectors' supplies to Chibougamau. A blinding rainstorm, with fog, apparently forced them down in the wilderness. A search was carried on by Canadian Government aviators and other fliers, but it was unsuccessful.

The note, dated October twenty-something (the second figure was blurred), 1929, read: "Cannot locate ourselves. Fog. Stream near us. Companion dead. Await rescue. If not within twenty-four hours, are lost. In sky. (Signed) Lizotte."

Cannon's parents interpret the note as meaning that Lizotte was killed during the forced landing, and that Cannon managed to get the plane into the air again, but could not fly to civilization. They stated they were certain the writing was by their son's hand.

CHINESE REBELS DENY VICTORIES

Northern War Lord States Fighting Hampered By Rain.

ATTACKS RENEWED.

SHANGHAI, China, August 20 (C.P.). — General Feng Yu-Hsiang, commanding the northern rebels along the Haichow-Tungkwan Railway in Honan Province, last night sharply contradicted Nationalist claims to important advances in that sector.

In a communique from Kaifeng, capital of Honan Province, the rebel war lord said, fighting in Honan had been greatly hampered during the past ten days on account of torrential rains, which transformed battle fields into rivers and bogs.

Despite the rain handicap, the communique said 5,000 picked soldiers of the Kuominchun, or People's Army, supporting the northern rebels, made a desperate attack on Saturday night on Nationalist positions fifty miles east of Lanfeng.

BELIEVE FAMOUS FLYER DROWNED OFF NEW YORK

Von Lear Black Thought to Have Fallen Off Yacht.

SEARCH IN VAIN.

Navy Dirigible, Planes and Fleet of Yachts Join Search.

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—Van Lear Black of Baltimore, publisher and capitalist, and one of the country's most famous aviation enthusiasts, is believed to have been drowned late on Monday evening. It was discovered that he was missing from his yacht, the Sabalo, when it was steaming just outside the outer New York Harbor—some eight miles southwest of the Shrewsbury Rock Buoy, off the Jersey coast.

Last night, after a day of extensive search, his body had not been found. His own boat led a fleet of Coast Guard and other craft in slow circles about the spot where he disappeared. Overhead droned the motors of four amphibian planes, flying low over the water as their pilots scanned the white-caps. In mid-afternoon the navy dirigible Los Angeles joined the search, drifting slowly along over a ten-mile course. But they found nothing.

Was Famous Flier

The man who had successfully flown some 125,000 miles over the jungles, deserts and forests, of four continents is believed to have perished through a boyish habit of sitting on the railing of his boat. A handkerchief was found on the after-deck, and it was supposed he had dropped it as a sudden swell caused the vessel to lurch and so rocked him from his precarious seat. No clues to any other possibility were discovered. Mr. Black was 54 years old.

EVANGELIST IS REPORTED BLIND

Mother of Aimee McPherson Suffers Broken Nose in Fight With Daughter.

BLINDNESS DOUBTED.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., August 20. — (C.P.)—Aime Semple McPherson, the evangelist, was reported by her secretary to have lost her sight as the result of a nervous ailment, but other associates of the woman religious leader, including her mother, Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, openly expressed doubt that she had become blind or is seriously ill.

The announcement that the evangelist had gone blind two days ago was made by her secretary, Emma Scaeffer.

Mrs. Kennedy, who has had many stormy scenes with the evangelist, revealed that she had had a fistic encounter with Mrs. McPherson, who since has been in seclusion. The mother said she was undergoing treatment for a broken nose received in the fracas with her daughter.

WAKEFUL NIGHTS FROM INDIGESTION

Nothing wears you out more quickly than a period of wakeful, restless nights or fitful slumber marred by unpleasant dreams. The cause is often digestive disturbance and the remedy is a little "Bisurated" Magnesia after the last meal or before going to bed. This calms the stomach, neutralizes excess acid, banishes the fermenting unrest and induces healthy, restful slumber by the sensible means of producing peaceful normal digestion. "Bisurated" Magnesia is obtainable at any good drug store in either powder or tablet form and a simple trial will prove its value beyond question.

Bernard Bedford Is Seriously Injured

HAVELOCK, August 20 (Examiner Correspondence). — Little Bernard Bedford, the eleven-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Bedford, had the misfortune of having his right arm broken and wrist dislocated while cranking the car for his brother on Mondoy morning. The little fellow had given the crank a twist, and when the motor did not respond immediately, cranked again. He did not wait until the spark had been shoved up, and when he cranked the second time he was hurled up in the air, and fell violently to the ground. The fracture was reduced by Dr. Donald Holdcroft and Dr. O'Brien.

It was a clean break, and a quick recovery is looked for.

MOTHERS SWITCH BABIES TO CLOSE FAMOUS TANGLE

Bamberger and Watkins Families Decide to Accept Experts Decision.

TWO WITNESSES ON HAND.

Mother Watkins Smiles—Says She Always Wanted Other Child.

CHICAGO, Ill., August 20. (C.P.)—The Bamberger-Watkins babies have been switched again, the parents agreeing to exchange the infants given them at Englewood hospital, where they were born, and where their identity labels were mixed.

Suddenly deciding they did not possess their own baby, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bamberger took the infant boy to the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Watkins, to make an exchange, which heretofore Mr. Bamberger has ruled against. With that decision they called their attorney Joseph H. Powers, who asked Dr. Arnold Kegel, the City Health Commissioner to accompany them, and officially witness the exchange.

Arriving at the Watkins' home Mrs. Bamburger bearing the infant which was christened as a 'Bamberger,' said she wanted to exchange the babies.

"Oh, I've always wanted that baby. It's mine," smiled Mrs. Watkins, "but now we'll do it!"

The problem was solved when Mrs. Bamberger picked up the child lying peacefully in the Watkins' crib and exchanged its clothing for that worn the one heretofore possessed by the Bambergers.

LONDON WOMAN KILLED BY DEBRIS

Victim Buried as Wall, on Building Being Torn Down, Crashes.

WORKMAN INJURED.

LONDON, Ont., Aug. 20.—Trapped yesterday afternoon by tons of debris that crashed into the street from the pediment of the main entrance of the old Tecumseh Hotel, Mrs. S. McDougall, an employee of Westminster Hospital, whose home is at 41 Boullie street, suffered injuries from which she died at 10 o'clock last night.

Jake Zabo of 507 Adelaide West, Toronto, an employee of the T. E. Herman Wrecking Company, which is engaged in the demolition of the old hotel, was also injured, but at Victoria Hospital it was stated that his condition is not critical. Both injured persons were extricated by fellow workers, police, and an emergency square from fire headquarters, directed by Chief S. Scott.

For a time it was believed another man had been trapped by the falling debris and firemen worked feverishly removing tons of heavy stones, masonry and timber before the sidewalk could be cleared.

Men working on the razing of the hotel for the past month have left only a remnant of the old hostelry building. Yesterday they reached the main Richmond street entrance which was built in a board arch surmounting a row of heavy pillars. Without warning the great arch fell forward into Richmond street, carrying down Zabo and falling upon Mrs. McDougall, who was passing along the narrow, temporary board sidewalk built outside a board barricade designed to protect pedestrians.

The barricade was smashed down by the huge stones. Taxi men parked by the C.N.R. depot tried vainly to move one of the stones to release Mrs. McDougall before other help arrived.

"THIS SILLY DEPRESSION."

Why there should be adversity for so many people in the midst of plenty, if not actual prosperity, is a paradox of business that baffles the ordinary man who knows little of political economy and perhaps less of crowd psychology.

We have been wandering through a period of trade depression and unemployment for months, almost a year, and we can all observe the fact that this slump is not a result of any scarcity of things. We know there is a super-abundance of things and our markets are clogging with supplies, of wheat and oil and minerals and cotton and rubber. They seem to have overwhelmed us with their very plenitude.

Of course, there are explanations. We have even been told that the temporary stagnation has but a psychological cause; that if we would renew faith in ourselves and our country and its natural wealth and the courage and initiative of our people we would soon begin to feel a quickening of our commercial and industrial pace.

In this connection, Herbert N. Casson, a native Canadian, now editor of Efficiency Magazine, published in London, England, writing in the mid-August number of Forbes' Magazine, offers the advice "Buy During Slump" in a timely and constructive article. It is directed to American readers, but it applies in a large measure to Canadians. The following are excerpts from it:

"The prices that were forced too high had to come down. To-day all the prices are too low.

"There is now a golden opportunity for every man who has eyes to see it.

"Dollars are now being sold for thirty cents. Practically every security in the United States is now being sold at less than its value.

"The way to create a fortune is to buy from pessimists. Pay your money and take the risk.

"Frick started his career by buying coke ovens in the slump of 1873. Carnegie made $300,000,000 by buying steel plants in slumps.

"Hundreds of fortunes have been made by buying from pessimists. Ye gods! What a chance there is at the moment!

"In five years from now, most American business men will belong to the 'I-wish-I-had Club.'

"Then, it will be too late to buy a dollar for thirty cents. The opportunities will be gone.

"When a horse balks, the balk is in his head, not in his legs. He moves on when he thinks he will.

"And when an American business man is depressed, the slump is in his head. There is nothing serious to prevent him from making money if he thinks he will.

"When Fear rules the will, nothing can be done, but when a man casts Fear out of his mind, the world becomes his oyster.

"To lose a bit of money is nothing, but to lose hope—to lose nerve and ambition—that is what makes men cripples.

"This silly depression has gone on long enough. Get rid of it. It is inside of you.

"Rise and walk!"

SWIFT JUSTICE.

If there is any menace of an increase in banditry in our larger cities in the months ahead as a consequence of unemployment, our primary courts in Toronto and Hamilton yesterday imposed exemplary penalties upon three gunmen with a swiftness that should have a deterrent effect on any others who have a distaste for the lash and imprisonment.

Eight years in the penitentiary and thirty lashes each was the punishment which a Hamilton police magistrate imposed upon two bank robbers a scant twenty-one hours after they had held up the staff of a bank and made away with $3,000.

Justice was just as severe and more fleet-footed in Toronto where an armed man who on Monday night robbed a druggist of $21 was sentenced eleven hours later, Tuesday morning, to three years in prison with ten lashes. Our courts are not squeamish about giving felons a short shrift when the police capture them, and these cases should discourage others who may be tempted to resort to armed robbery in their lust for easy money. Society cannot prevent such crimes, but it can make them painfully unprofitable.

Although the police received valuable assistance in both these hold-ups, their own work was highly creditable. If we could clear up the Rombold and Perri murders our recent score with criminals would be balanced.

AUSTRALIAN DIFFICULTIES.

Australia is nearing the end of a winter of industrial discontent with unemployment a problem that is apparently far from a hopeful solution.

The number of persons out of work was recently computed at 180,000, roughly one tenth of the total number employed last year. This is only another facet of the universal disturbance in industry and of declining international trade.

Australia's financial difficulties are heightened by the country's social obligations. For instance, it is estimated that half the people who have reached the age of 60—approximately another 180,000—are living on government charity at an annual cost of $57,000,000, while the bill for war pensioners is mounting to $5,000,000 a year. The external credits of the country which were worth $993,000,000 two years ago had decreased in value to $785,000,000 two years ago, and this year they are expected to total less than $275,000,000.

The financial conditions of Australia have approached so near to a crisis that Sir Otto Niemayer, financial expert of the Bank of England, as gone from London to advise the federal government on the problem of restoring its budget to a parity of revenues and expenditures. He has also agreed to assist an advisory committee which is endeavoring to straighten out the affairs of the State of Victoria, whose budget is expected to show a deficit of more than $7,000,000.

By comparison with our sister dominion Canada is in a thoroughly sound and comfortable position financially, according to the last review of the defeated King Government, and our industrial and commercial conditions, while affected by the current decline in trade and manufacturing activity, may be described as favorable.

Recent news from both Australia and New Zealand suggest that their paramount concern and quest at next month's Imperial Conference will be markets for their products, trade arrangements and preferences.

Prior to leaving Canberra a few days ago, to attend the Conference in London, Premier J. H. Scullin said:

"A good deal is expected of my mission, and probably no other country has such a wonderful future, but we must find markets for our surplus production. We want to get closer relationship with the other members of the British Commonwealth. Any interests based upon mere exchange of goods may have a sordid basis, but it is a practical one."

Behind her high tariff Australia has been neglecting such an essential factor of domestic prosperity and foreign trade as that of low cost of production.

Australia has evidently learned by embarrassing experience the fallacies of some of the labor and fiscal theories which have led her into the critical position which she so freely admitted today. Our sister dominions under the Southern Cross need help, especially buyers of their goods, and they are frankly looking forward to the Imperial Conference for some measure of assistance that might be expected of their kith and kin.

A SUMMER'S CRICKET.

Canadian newspaper men who made the return trip on the R-100 referred in their cabled dispatches to the seeming indifference of the British press and public to this transatlantic flight over new imperial airways.

C. H. J. Snider, the Toronto Telegram's representative mentions some of the Englishman's current preoccupations, and at the top of the list he places the England vs. Australia cricket matches for the Empire championship. Naturally this must be a most interesting and important diversion, especially to the several millions of men who need a pleasant distraction from their prolonged and unfruitful search for work.

We have followed with more than ordinary attention the marvellous batting of Bradman, who is somewhat of an Australian Babe Ruth and probably then some, but lately in our ignorance of the Englishman's national game we have been wondering whether the boys are "to be got out of the trenches before Christmas" or at least before the Imperial Conference.

The teams appear to have been battling all summer with no relaxing of the thrall of the game upon the British millions. Recently looking through an old London paper that was weeks old, back in July or June, we were reminded by the pictures of the first memorable engagement at Lord's, was it, with long queues of "fans" strung along a street and around a corner. And here they are with August waning and the youthful and redoubtable Bradman still at it.

Those Englishmen must be a leisurely and patient people; but it must be just as well for their nerves and business that only two teams are engaged.

TASTING REAL LIFE NOW.

Ex-President Coolidge has taken a contract to write a 200-word article each day for a United States newspaper. That paper in turn peddles it for a price to a good many other papers, so in this way Mr. Coolidge has a good-sized audience by the time the day's work is through.

The other day he was discussing airplane engines and ventured the remark that the best of these were manufactured in countries outside United States.

He didn't get very far away with that remark, because some patriot in the States jumped on his back at once with a claim for the home-made article.

When Coolidge was President he said very little, and for that reason no person could pick a quarrel with him.

When he is writing for the newspapers he simply has to say something every day otherwise there would be no market for his stuff. Having entered the newspaper columns the ex-President can have the supreme joy of going home in the evening and showing his wife a letter where some reader has written to call him a pin head.—Stratford Beacon-Herald.

SITUATION IN AUSTRALIA.

It is cause for much regret that the domestic affairs of Australia would seem to be rapidly approaching a crisis. Two years ago the external credits of the country were $995,000,000. Last year they declined to $785,000,000, and for the current year are expected to reach a still further low of $275,000,000. For some time the banks have refused the lending of funds and the spending power of the people has been considerably reduced. A forty-hour week for labor is one of the causes blamed, and in connection with one large factory it is related that a comparison has disclosed that the operatives were paid twice as much to produce half the amount of similar goods manufactured in Europe by half the number of operators.

No one desires to see Old Country standards of pay exist in the British Dominions, but this disparity is certainly altogether too great. One-tenth of the population is reported to be out of work, and the cost of maintaining unemployed has mounted to $57,000,000 annually. As one effort to remedy things the Labor Government not long ago recommended that the 40-hour working week should be extended to 48 hours and adopted this plan in connection with its own departments and operations. One Cabinet Minister in recently discussing the situation said: "We have been living like Eastern potentates and are all equally to blame." He probably had reference, among other things, to the fact that our antipodean cousins maintain and patronize large racing associations to the extent it is said of having races for every day in the year and that various other sports flourish at great national cost and loss of time in business. However, people of British stock can generally be counted upon, when they recognize wrong conditions to speedily apply the remedy, and it is to be sincerely hoped that the residents "down under" will take the necessary steps to restore matters to a condition of normality.—Brantford Expositor.

EMBARRASSING MOMENTS

Ten Dollars Will Be Given to the Person Discovering the Elusive Lady as She Visits the Stores

Next Friday and Saturday the merchants of Peterborough are holding their annual Summer Community Dollar Day. Between eighty and ninety of the best business houses in the city are presenting a simultaneous array of bargains, never surpassed and probably never equalled, on any previous event of the kind. The aim of the merchants each Dollar Day is to beat the former record, and the thrifty buying public can confidently expect to see a few dollars do better buying on this occasion than ever before. To add to the interest of the two big days, Mysterious Miss Dollar will mingle with the shopping crowds until some one discovers and captures her, thereby earning the Examiner's special prize of $10 in cash.

The elusive lady will be out on her shopping rounds on Friday between 9 a.m. and 5.30 p.m. and on Saturday, if not captured before, will be out during the same hours, with the addition of an evening trip from 8 to 9 o'clock.

As soon as Miss Dollar is captured a bulletin will be posted in front of The Examiner to end the chase, but the lady is going to be hard to catch.

Miss Dollar will go from store to store and must be captured in one of the Dollar Day stores, not on the street. Also to make her admit that you are right, you must show her this story about her, cut out of The Examiner. Just say, 'You are The Examiner's Mysterious Miss Dollar, and here's the story about you from the paper." That's all—find the lady; she may be shopping right beside you, because, of course, she is just as anxious to profit by the bargains as you are. But be sure and clip this story from The Examiner, and have it in your purse or pocket. It's worth $10 in cash to the one that finds her but all conditions must be complied with.

Take her right along to The Examiner office and claim the reward.

From time to time bulletins will be posted in front of The Examiner telling of some distinguishing feature of dress or outfit Miss Dollar is wearing.

TEMPLE TOWER

By CAPTAIN DRUMMOND

"What sort of night work?" demanded Freckles.

"Moving about country at night, of course."

"Can't say I have," admitted the youngster.

"Well, keep close to me, and do exactly as you are told," said Hugh. "And pay attention to where you put your clumsy great feet. We'll want silence, and don't forget it."

"Do you think there is a chance of a scrap?" he asked eagerly.

"I haven't the faintest idea," said Hugh. "But I want to avoid one if possible. We want to find out all we can, and not be discovered doing so.'

"What time do you suggest starting?" I asked him.

"Let's see," he calculated. "It will be a good hour's walk—perhaps more. Allowing for the car journey—say an hour and a half. So if we leave here as soon as we've finished dinner, we ought to strike the farm about eleven thirty."

He finished his coffee and got up. And for the first time to my knowledge the girl showed herself aware of our existence. Her glance rested on Hugh—cooly and thoughtfully then "I was honoured and after that young Scott. Then she returned to her dinner as if we had been summed up and dismissed, for all the world like a man turning down three horses that had been brought out for his inspection. I said as much to Hugh as we left the coffee-room, and he smiled slightly.

"Bless her heart," he laughed. "I wonder if it was she who tried to anoint my head with the chimney-pot. Incidentally, I wonder what their names are. Presumably they are always staying here since she has changed for dinner."

We opened the hotel register, and looked at the last three entries

Paul Vandali.
Madame Vandali.
Jean Picot.

"H'm," grunted Hugh. "If the names are genuine, they mark the chauffeur down as French, and the other two as Southerners of sorts. Possibly Italian. However, we shall doubtless find out in time. Now you fellows, smoke if you want to, because once we start walking it will be cease of no lights."

We strolled down the hill, and I noticed that Hugh was glancing from side to side. But the road seemed deserted, and we got into the car without having seen a soul.

"One hour at this time of night, ought to be enough to make Folkestone," he said as we got in.

"Did you see him, Peter?" he asked me as we drove off.

"Not a sign," I said surprised. "Where was he?"

"In the shadow of that big warehouse place. Mr. Jean Picot for a tozzy. I couldn't make out his face, but there was someone there crouching against the wall."

"Then let's hope you put him off," I remarked.

The night was a perfect one for our purpose. Already dark, it would be darker still, as the moon was not due to rise till three o'clock. A faint breeze was blowing, and in the distance the light of a signal gleamed like a great red star. For the first half mile the road ran dead straight then came a T bend. To the left lay the road to Folkestone and to the proper entrance to Sprague's Farm; to the right lay our route to the sea. And so it was with some surprise, after what he had said at dinner, that I found Hugh swing left-handed when we got there.

"There are no flies on those birds," he said briefly. "And on these marshes you can see the headlights of a car for miles."

He drove on for perhaps another mile until he came to a small track leading off the road. Then he switched off the headlights, and turned the car.

"I'm taking no chances, Peter," he said as we drove slowly back with only the small side lamps alight. "We're up against brains this trip."

We got back to the bend without having met anyone, and took our proper road. He was still driving without headlights and so our progress was slow. Gradually the road got worse and worse, until the murmur of the sea on the shore to our right told us we had struck the coast. To our left lay the sand dunes, and Hugh continually peered in that direction as if looking for some landmark.

"There's a path somewhere about here which leads a little way into the dunes," he explained. "It will give us a bit of cover for the bus. Here it is."

We swung along it, and after going about twenty yards he pulled up. The car was almost hidden from the road: certainly at night no one passing along would be likely to spot it. And there we left it, and struck inland on foot. Hugh leading. At first the going was bad: the low sandhills so beloved of golfers exercise no attraction for the mere pedestrian. But after a while it got better, and the loose-shifting soil gave place to firm reclaimed ground.

We walked in silence; only the harsh cry of a stray night bird broke the stillness of the night. In the distance the lights of Rye glittered from the hill: in front of us darkness save for an occasional gleam from some cottage.

Suddenly Hugh paused, and we came up with him. He was standing on the edge of a dyke—one of the many which intersect the Marsh in all directions. But for some reason or other this one seemed to interest him.

"I've never seen one so broad," he explained. "This is more like a miniature canal. However, it seems to be leading in the right direction. We may as well follow it up."

We walked on once more, sticking to the bank, until once again he paused, this time with a low whistle of surprise. A boat was in the water completely covered with a tarpaulin, and even in the darkness it was easy to see that it was no ordinary row-boat. He scrambled down and lifted up the covering: then he came up and joined us again.

"A motor-boat and a powerful one," he said thoughtfully. "Now I wonder if that is also part of the jigsaw. Or is it just a perfectly harmless machine belonging to some perfectly harmless individual?"

"Useful for smuggling," I suggested.

"Quite," he answered. "Or as a line of escape. Do you notice, Peter, that the dyke narrows and becomes congested with weeds from here inland? Whereas the other way presumably it is clear right down to the sea. However, there is no good wasting time. We'll just make a mental note of the fact that it is here."

We pushed on again still keeping to the edge of the dyke. And now there were more signs of life. We saw sheep in a field to our left, and also a few cows.

"This is probably Sprague's ground," said Hugh. 'We must begin to go warily. Hullo! Is that our friends, I wonder?"

In front of us about a mile away we could see the headlights of a car. It was moving fast in the Folkestone direction, and for a while we stopped and looked at it. At one moment it seemed to be coming straight towards us then as the road jinked we saw only the reflection of the lights travelling sideways across our front. And so we stood until the glare had almost faded away to our right almost but not quite. For Hugh had been correct in his tactics it was our friends as he had predicted. The reflection became stationary in the sky shifted as the car turned, and then became again the headlights returning on the same road. And to me there seemed something strangely ominous in that powerful silent light searching the country for us, with people who we even now knew would stick at nothing, in the car behind it. Was the girl driving again, with Paul Vandali sitting beside her, or were other unknown people on the trail too?

"Let's hope that has put 'em off the scent anyway," said Hugh as the light disappeared in the direction of Rye. "It's lucky we took the sea road."

Once more we struck out along the bank of the dyke. We walked in single file with Hugh leading and young Scott in the centre. Sheep were becoming more plentiful now, and suddenly Hugh came to an abrupt halt.

"There's the house," he said in a low voice as we joined him. "Straight in front of us."

It lay there black and silent. No chink of light came from any window no sound broke the stillness save the faint creaking of the branches of a tree. A little to one side lay the outhouse we had noticed that afternoon and suddenly Hugh clutched my arm.

"There's a light filtering through a crack in the wall, Peter. In the outhouse. Don't you see it? And, by Jove!" his grip tightened. "we're not the only prowlers abroad to-night. Somebody passed across the light just then."

We stood there motionless, scarcely breathing, staring into the darkness. I could see the light distinctly now, shining probably through the hinge of the door. But no further shadow blotted it out, the other nocturnal wanderer, whoever he was, was lying up in the darkness now like us.

"It is the possibility of a dog that I'm afraid of," whispered Hugh. "It might have been one of the household who is walking about."

Cautiously, a step at a time, we crept nearer. And after a while I became conscious of a curious noise. It would last for perhaps ten seconds then cease abruptly. And after a pause it would be repeated. Hugh heard it too I could just see the outline of his face beside me peering ahead trying to locate it.

For the third time it came but on this occasion an unmistakable sound of splintering occurred in the middle, and one part of the problem was solved. Someone was sawing wood, and I almost laughed. If after all our elaborate precautions we were to find old man Sprague cutting up to-morrow's firewood the jest would be rather rich.

What To-day Means To You.

If August 20th is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8:30 a.m. to 9:30 a.m., from 1 p.m. to 2 p.m. and 11 p.m. to midnight. The danger periods are from 11 a.m. to noon, and 6 p.m. to 7 p.m.

Adverse influences on this date for females—man's world seems more favored and protected. An important business deal—secret and heated discussions. Be careful of partnerships and false friends! Nervous anxiety!

Children born on this August 20th will have fruitful, imaginative minds, and will be eager students—a delight to their teachers. They will be mischief-loving and up to innocent pranks. If they be boys, they will be typical "boy scouters." If they be girls, they will be clever with the needle.

You are what is known as an "out-of-door" man or woman, and it would be the height of folly for you to attempt a sedentary career, imprisoned within four walls. Such an act would be courting disaster. You are never physically or mentally fit without plenty of exercise and fresh air. You do not crave constant companionship. You would rather be by yourself than submit to the companionship of an uncongenial second party. A certain amount of solitude is restful to you—you enjoy silent contemplation. You do not have to be part of a herd to be happy, and you are not afraid without its protection.

You do not fear work, and you do not try to shedyour responsibilities—the more you have, the happier you seem to be. You seem to be able to get fun out of everything you are obliged to do. Your pleasures are cheap. A very big thing about you is that you dare be unconventional. You are not easily tempted to spend more than your income. You do not do things just because they are "smart," unless backed by better reasons. You do not set such a high value on money, that you miss the things which money cannot buy. You have a grown-up intellect, but you will always have the heart of a child. It often hurts you to do the things which hard, cold reason makes you do. You hate any form of cruelty and you loathe the injustices of the world. You pray for love and kindness to all.

LOW POOL PRICE MUST BRING MUCH GRAIN BOOTLEGGING

Pool Members Can Sell Under Night's Cover—Work With Non-members.

EXPECT MANY CASES.

(By J. H. McCulloch)

WINNIPEG, Aug. 19 (Special to The Examiner, Copyright, 1930).— That there will be attempts to bootleg pooled grain to the open market in western Canada this fall, as a result of the low initial prices paid by the pools, is the view held by farmers with whom I discussed the question recently. The pools have an enormous membership scattered over three prairie provinces, and it is hardly to be expected that there will be no pool members who will be tempted to take a short cut to more ready cash by loading their grain, or portions of it at least, into non-pool elevators.

The bootlegging is expected to apply to coarse grains particularly, for the coarse grain initial pool prices are to be very low. Moreover, there is a feeling among many farmers that the pool is not likely to insist upon the strict enforcement of the contracts in coarse grains this fall, conditions being what they are. Farmers who take this view may find themselves very badly mistaken. The pool may decide top lay a strong hand through the courts, but, if it does, it is almost certain to have some cases on its hands before the snow flies.

Detection Difficult

Detecting bootlegging of grain is an easy matter. Nowadays many farmers use trucks to get the threshed grain to elevators. Quantities are large. No farmer knows exactly how much grain his neighbor has threshed. By using trucks and working after dark a farmer could take his grain to a non-pool elevator without running much chance of being detected. It is easily possible for him to take the bootlegged stuff to an elevator at a point beyond his customary loading place. And if the back sliding pool members do not wish to deal directly with the elevator what is there to hinder them selling to farmers who are not in the pools, if these are willing.

Receiver is Affected.

The man who is on the receiving end of a bootlegging deal is taken care of by Chapter 50 of the Saskatchewan statutes of 1930, for instance, which must have made lawyers rub their eyes. For this is how this section reads: "Every person, who, having knowledge of the marketing contract between a member of the association, wilfully either induces, aids or abets anyone to deliver or sell, or accepts or receives for sale or for auction or for display for sale, any agricultural product which is the subject matter of such contract, shall be liable, on summary conviction to a penalty of not less than $50 nor more than $200. The burden of proof shall be upon the accused."

Note the sting n the style of this weird ruling, "the burden of proof shall be upon the accused." One would almost fancy that a committee of hard-boiled United States detectives, had framed it, for undoubtedly it violates the fundamental principle upon which British justice is based All in all there should be fireworks in the open spaces this fall.

PRICE CHANGES HOLD ABOUT EVEN

VENTURES OFF.

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 20 (C.P.)— It was difficult to ascertain just which way the market was going this morning. Price changes were about even. Volume continued on the level of the past few days.

International Nickel firmed today, selling 75 higher at $21.25; Noranda was stationary at $20.50; while Hudson Bay lost 5 to sell at $7.40.

Ventures was the stumbling block in an otherwise firmer Lindsley group. This stock set a new low mark for the year at 61, where it was off 19 points from the closing price yesterday, before any attempt was made at recovery. At noon the issue was quoted at 64. Sherritt Gordon improved, going up 4 to $1.30, while Sudbury Basin gained 5 to $1.05. Falconbridge set a new low at $1.65, off 10, from the previous close. It came back later, however.

In the miscellaneous group, Central Manitoba, Waite Ackerman, Arno, Granada Rouyn and Mining Corporation were unchanged, while Abana gained 2 and Manitoba Basin 1. Amulet eased off 1 to 49.

Lake Shore was a heavy loser in the gold group, dropping 85 points to $22.50. Wright Hargreaves and Big Missouri were unchanged, Teck Hughes, Holfinger and Vipond went up 5, Kirkland Lake lost 1, and Howey improved fractionally.

Chemical Research had the widest movement in the oils, declining 20 points to $5.30. Ajax also lost, off 9 at $1.72. Albert Pacific gained 2 and Mayland 3. East Crest held unchanged. Calmont lost 1 to sell at 69.

OSHAWA HAS 16 PARALYSIS CASES

OSHAWA, Ont., Aug. 20—Two more cases of infantile paralysis are reported here to-day. This brings the total number of cases during the outbreak to 16, excluding the two that resulted fatally.

DISCUSS FINANCIAL SITUATION

REGINA, Sask., Aug. 20. (C.P.)— For the purpose of discussing the financial situation of Saskatchewan, various measures of relief now in force and any further ideas that might be evolved a conference of all members of the government, provincial creditors and debtors, and various commercial authorities has been called by Premier J. T. M. Anderson. The session will take place Friday morning.

At this meeting the entire financial fabric of the province will be surveyed with the idea of offering the farmers of the dried-out areas as much relief as possible.

LEADING ISSUES REGISTER GAINS

McCOLL LEADS OILS.

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 20 (C.P.)— International Nickel, Steel of Canada and City Dairy were all well to the fore on the Toronto Stock Exchange during the course of the morning session. All three issues registered gains bordering around a point and the volume was well up. The rest of the list followed suit but the gains were less pronounced and the volume not quite so large.

City Dairy sold steadily upward all morning to reach 66¾ nearly. Steel of Canada was up a full point to 42½, after an absence of about a week. Nickel attained a level of 21¼ to show a ¾ points improvement.

McColl took on ¾ to lead the oil list, selling at 16¾. Imperial had a gain of ⅛ at 19¼. British American was off ⅛ to 15¾. International Pete went unchanged.

Brazilian held well all morning around 32¼ to ½. Bakeries advanced ⅜ to 11¾. Ford of Canada was up ½ to 31. Massey Harris, Walkers, Canada Malting and Riverside Silk were all unchanged. Among the higher priced industrials were Bell Phone at 150 unchanged, and C.P.R. went likewise at 175.

DRIVER OF CAR GIVEN 20 DAYS

Amoyette is Found Guilty of Criminal Negligence By Magistrate Langley.

FOUND TO BE SPEEDING.

Twenty days in the common jail was the sentence passed by Police Magistrate Langley this morning upon Moses Amoyette, who was found guilty of criminal negligence. Amoyette was the driver of the car which crashed into a car driven by Miss Aileen Milloy at the corner of Hunter and Aylmer streets on Saturday evening, resulting in injuries to the woman.

With seeming reluctance, S. S. Shaughnessy, brother-in-law of Miss Milloy who was in the crash, stated that he smelled an odour on the breath of Amoyette immediately following the accident. He thought that "possibly the accused may have been drinking something."

"Drinking what—lemonade?" queried the magistrate.

"No, not lemonade. But there was some odour on his breath," replied Shaughnessy, carefully.

Not Intoxicated

Cross-examined by J. A. O'Brien, defence counsel, witness declared emphatically that Amoyette was not intoxicated. He admitted the possibility that what he had smelled was merely chewing tobacco. Later to Crown Attorney McElderry he stated the assumption that it wasn't chewing tobacco but something alcoholic.

Miss Milloy told of stopping at the curb at the corner of Hunter and Aylmer streets before venturing across the intersection. All had appeared clear when she started across, she stated. When more than half way across Amoyette's car had struck her car, turning it around and causing it to upset.

"Amoyette's breach smelled strongly of liquor" declared Constable W R. Piercy, who told of investigating the accident a few minutes after it had occurred. Miss Milloy's car was within four feet of having completed the crossing when struck by the other car, he stated. Amoyette had skidded 54 feet before the impact he said his measurements of the marks on the pavement showed.

Sergeant Thomas, who was on duty at the station when Piercy brought Amoyette in, also said that there was a distinct smell of liquor from Amoyette's breach.

Harrison Wright saw the accident and stated that Amoyette was exceeding twenty miles and hour when he approached the intersection. Miss Milloy was nearly across and had stopped at the stop sign, he said.

Testifying in his own defence, Amoyette stated that he had had a small drink of wine before dinner that day, but that no other alcoholic beverage had passed his lips. He declared that he was driving slowly up Aylmer street and that he had slowed up at Hunter street because there were children playing there. He didn't see the Milloy car until it was right in front of him.

Frank Wiman, who was with the accused in the car, substantiated this evidence, and Mrs. Amoyette stated that her husband had only had one drink of wine all day.

In convicting Amoyette, Magistrate Langley stated that it was clear that he had been driving over the speed limit and had shown wilful neglect in causing the accident. "If there were children on that corner, and we have only the accused's and his witness's word for it, that was all the more reason why he should have shown extra precaution."

FAVORED SHARES UP TWO POINTS

Isolated Weakness Creeps Out in Special Stocks Such as Coppers and Safety Razor Issues.

CALL MONEY REDUCED.

NEW YORK, N. Y., Aug. 20.—(CP) —Speculation for the rise was pressed forward aggressively in to-day's stock market, undaunted by isolated weakness in special stocks such as the coppers and safety razor issues.

A few issues sold up 5 to nearly 10 points, and gains of 1 to 2 or more embraced most of the important shares. Shares gaining 6 or more included International Business Machines and Case. Shares advancing 3 or more included American Water Works, Americanr and Foreign Power, Vanadium, International Harvester, Eastman, Johns-Manville and American Type Founders, while such issues as U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, American Can, Westinghouse Electric, and Public Service of N. J. mounted almost as much. Federal Mining, an inactive issue, sold at 115, 35 points below the last transaction, and the lowest in 3 years.

Call money, after renewing at 2½ per cent, was finally reduced to 2 per cent, the first time it has reached that rate at the loan desk in 10 days, although outside funds have been plentiful at 2 per cent.

AIMEE PLACES GUARDS ABOUT SUMMER HOME

Dr. Edward Huntington Williams, nerve specialist called to attend Mrs. McPherson, said she was not seriously ill and probably would be completely recovered within a few days. Dr. Williams also refuted reports the evangelist had suffered a nervous collapse. He said she needed rest

Mrs. Kennedy told her story of her alleged first fight with her daughter to newspapermen while she rested in a sanitarium. The trouble started, according to Mrs. Kennedy, when her daughter accused her of talking about her and her secretary, Mae Waldron.

"Aimee Was Wild

"Aimee was wild", Mrs. Kennedy said. "We had a few words and then she came right out and accused me of talking about her. I said, 'Honey, I haven't been talking about you, but I have said some things about some of your associates".

"Things happened so quick, I can't remember, anyway when I came to my senses I was on the floor and my nose was almost killing me. They picked me up and dashed water on my wrists and although I was in terrible pain, I decided not to disappoint my friends up in Olimpia, Wash., and I left for the north the next day to dedicate a church.

"But my poor nose kept getting worse. It turned blue and green and I rushed back here realizing I was badly hurt. I had received a face lift and so had Aimee. Sure, I had my face lifted, what of it, so did Aimee —she won't deny it if you ask her".

GOOD SHOWING AMULET REPORT

Word Received Exploring New Property North of Town of Schreiber.

STORY OF FIND.

TORONTO, August 20 (Special to The Examiner). — As has been intimated in well informed circles for some time, the annual report of Amulet Mines, published to-day, makes interesting reading for the company's shareholders and others. Though faced with declining metal prices ever since it came into production, Amulet has been able to show a net profit for the short operating period. The company is therefore in a fair way to pull through any further metal price recessions and to take immediate advantage of any improvement in this direction. Amulet's showing is largely due to the efficient manner in which the mill has been operating and to low mining costs enjoyed. Milling costs during the two and a half months ended June 30 last were $1.66 per ton, mining costs $1.67 per ton, and general expenses about 30 cents per ton, for an unusually low total of $3.63 per ton milled.

Word from Schreiber, on the C. P.R., north-west of Sudbury, is that Smelters is actively exploring a property located about 7 miles from the town on the road to Duck Lake. Latest reports state a drill was recently taken in and should be operating any time now. The property, comprising some six claims, was discovered last year and the vein has been traced by outcroppings for a distance of nearly 3 miles.

The story of the find is that four railway employees, temporarily laid off, decided to do some prospecting in the Schreiber district. After finding the original showing, the men sent samples to a company geologist, who, investigating the claims, stated that of 200 miles he had examined, this was the first real one he had come across.

McDougall the liquidator has upwards of $100,000 for distribution to the stockholders which is equivalent to approximately 80 cents a share and will bring total capital payment to approximately $16.30 a share. In 1924 an initial payment of $110 a share was made, followed by one of $4 and further distribution of $1.50 a share or $116.50 to date against an estimate of $110 a share made by the late R. J. Fleming in 1924.

The total par balue of the outstanding capital of the Toronto Railway Company is $12,000,000 dividend into share of $100 par. On completion of the final disbursement the liquidator will have returned to stockholders a sum approximately $13,956,000. Tpronto railway has been in the process of liquidation for upwards of ten years. In 1920 the suburban lines were disposed of to the Hydro Electric Commission and in September 1921 the City of Toronto took over the railway within the city limits on the expiration of the franchise.

The sale of the subsidiary companies, known as the "clean up deal" brought $32,734,000, the Hydro Commission assuming liabilities of $23,775,177 and paying the balance by delivery of bonds having a par value of $9,458,823. The amount paid for the lines within the city went to arbitration and the company was awarded $11,188,500 in 1924 with interest at the rate of 5 percent. Subsequent appeals to the amount was increases to $11,483,500. Appointment of D. H. McDougall as liquidator was made in 1924 and he has been trying to collect $25,000 deposited with the Queen Victoria Park Commission to guarantee against damage. This money had never been used and with accumulated interest amounted to over $80,000 on being returned to the company. This sum together with odds and ends in the hands of the liquidator will go to make up the final distribution of approximately $100,000.

Winnipeg Review.

WINNIPEG, Man., Aug. 20 (Special to The Examiner).—The wheat market showed a change of front during the first half of yesterday's session and prices after opening ⅝ higher, continued to advance until they were 1⅝ over the close Monday night. Around the noon hour weakness developed, largely in sympathy with a sharp decline in Chicago, and, with early buyers unloading, and all the earlier gains were more than lost. There was some fairly active buying at the start, part of which was for seaboard account, and partly short covering due to Liverpool being considerably stronger than due, but the demand was fairly well satisfied at the close of the first hour, after which the market turned quiet with offerings very light until the liquidation got under way. October was somewhat stronger than the deferred months, probably reflecting the business done, while most of the hedging is being placed in the December. Export sales overnight were placed at 1,500,000 bushels, of which the Pool worked 900,000 bushels.

This is the best business in over a week, but does not mean a great deal There was no particular activity in the cash market, a fair demand for the higher grades which were trading unchanged to 1-4 better, with holders offering sparingly. There was an unconfirmed report that the Pool had decided to pay 60 cents for 1 Nor. basis Fort William. The bulk of the crop this year will be no better than 3 Nor. and with the discount under No. 1, with the cost of handling and freight spells about 35 cents the Pool members will receive as an initial payment if the 60 cent payment is correct. The corn in the United States received more rains the past 24 hours, and conditions are now said to be greatly improved as regards the corn and fodder crops. The weather in the West was mostly clear with some light scattered showers in Sask. and Alta. with the weather cloudy yesterday. European weather is somewhat improved. Liverpool closed 5-8 to 1 1-8 Higher with a somewhat improved demand for wheat in evidence. The market closed nervous and erratic. Oct. being ¼ higher and Dec. and May ¼ to 3-8 lower respectively.

Coarse grains—These markets were erratic. There was a good upturn in prices during the first part of the day but the bulge was not held. There is very little doing in the cash markets only an odd car of low grade cats and barley changing hands. Export sales and inquiry flat. Oats closed 3-8 to 1-4 higher. Barley 1-8 higher to 1-8 lower and rye 1-8 lower to unchanged.

Flax—Continued dull and featureless. Oct. showed a little strength, closing 1 1-2 higher while Dec. closed 3-4 lower. Liverpool cables due 3-4 to 7-8 lower based on Winnipeg.

Mrs. Brown, Executive

Mrs. Brown, housekeeper of scarcely more than a generation ago, was a skilled laborer. The Mrs. Brown of to-day is an executive.

She has turned over much of her work to mechanical appliances. Much of her cooking has been placed in the hands of manufacturers of foods. Most of her sewing is done for her by the makers of clothing and household furnishings. Freed from drudgery by modern inventions, she has become a manager.

The advertisements in her daily newspaper have enabled her to be a better director of the affairs of her home than any woman of any past generation. She is primarily an intelligent buyer. She spends 85% of the family income. The care with which she reads the advertisements and the wisdom with which she acts on them determine the health, happiness and prosperity of her household.

She studies every new and every accepted product that might benefit her in her business of home management. She compares values. She is an expert in getting one hundred cents' worth of comfort, protection and satisfaction for every dollar she spends. She reads the advertisements every day. On them Mrs. Brown's efficiency depends.

43 MERMAIDS IN SWIM LISTS

Entrance of Ethel McGarry, Buffalo, is Surprise of C.N.E. Event.

MARATHON FRIDAY.

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 20.—(CP)—More than two score feminine swimming stars will endeavor to overcome the two-fold handicap provided by Lake Ontario's icy waters and the pestering Lamprey eels therein to win the $5,000 prize offered by the Canadian National Exhibition to the winner of the women's 10-mile marathon, one of the features of the opening day on August 22.

Marking the conclusion of many months faithful training 43 mermaids are expected to take the plunge at the start about noon Friday, providing the water has a temperature of 58 degrees or better four hours prior to starting time. If the water is under the stipulated temperature the swim will be postponed.

The list, which closed last Saturday, was released for publication yesterday. It contained an outstanding surprise. Far down the list is the name of a United States Olympic swimming champion, none other than Miss Ethel McGarry, Buffalo, who will be making her debut into the professional ranks. At first it was not believed the Buffalonian would desert the Simon Pures but her arrival here Tuesday with trainer Captain Charles B. Scully, New York, dispelled all doubts.

Ethel Hertle Gary, New York favorite and winner of the event two years ago, is tapering off her training here, as are most of the other dangerous contenders.

Six nations are represented by the fair natadors. Germany, Denmark, Finland, England, United States and Canada, being the countries from whom entrants have come. Canada and United States of course have by far the most representatives, including the favored ones to annex the money positions.

ORILLA TRADE BOARD SENDS $200 CHEQUE

Proportional Grant to Trent Waterway-Iroquois Trail Association.

An interesting letter was received in Peterborough recently by the Trent Waterway-Iroquois Trail Association, dated Aug. 1. It came from the Orillia Board of Trade and attached to it was a cheque for $200.00, same being the municipal proportion of the grant to the Association.

The letter describes tourist conditions in the Lake Simcoe district and refers in part to a trip made by the Steamer Couchiching, whose crew, it was stated, found it difficult to find the entrance to the Otonabee River from Rice Lake. Letter follows:

I am enclosing a cheque for $200 being the grant from the Town Council of Orillia as per promised you. I am sure you will appreciate this and I will ask you to advise me how things are going.

As these are the dog days we do not have much activity and our Board of Trade is lying low without much action until the weather cools.

Our tourist trade this year is in this condition, our cottages are better filled than ever before and the motor camps likewise, but the hotels and boarding places are not as well filled as last year but on averaging the situation I think we will have a better season than last.

What is doing in the tourist line down your way? I would be pleased to have a line from you.

Harold says on coming up the waterway it was hard to find the entrance of the Otonabee River from Rice Lake.

I have not seen any tourist pleasure cruisers up this way this season, although I hear there has been an odd one gone through.

Yours truly,
GEO. J. OVEREND,
Secretary.

DOUBLE WALLED.

ST. THOMAS, Ont., Aug. 20.—(C.P.)—The official dedication of the famous Southwold Earthworks, twelve miles north-west of this city, which have been acquired by the Dominion Government as part of the National Parks system, will take place on Sept. 15 under the direction of officials of the Historical Sites and Monuments Board of the Dominion.

Dr. J. H. Coyne, local historian, who is arranging the program, said that he has received word from Ottawa to the effect that the work planned by the Government this year will be completed in time for the ceremonies on Sept. 15.

According to Dr. Coyne, the Southwold Earthworks are the only double-walled Indian fort ever discovered on the continent, and the relics are regarded as being of great historical value by archaeologists of Canada and the United States. The old fort is believed to be severa. centuries old; in fact it may antedate the discovery of America. Despite its great age the walls of the fort are clearly defined.

Speckled trout, one year old, ready for distribution.

If you are out fishing with a friend this summer and they're not biting and you can't think up a good fish story, just tell him this: That upwards of eighteen hundred million (1,800,000,000) fish were placed in the lakes and streams of Ontario in the last three years by the Department of Game and Fisheries. Skeptic that he is after several hours of "fishermen's luck," your friend will probably tell you that is the best one he has heard yet.

To convince him that speckled beauties of fabulous size still exist, it would be necessary to take him on a nocturnal expedition such as that staged not long ago by a party of young men living in the vicinity of an Ontario government trout hatchery. Inspired by over-indulgence in the spirits that cheer, they conceived the rather daring though entirely unpraiseworthy plan of casting their bait by night where denizens of the deep were sure to lurk. Two score of handsome, succulent trout came forth to fill their bags. Unfortunately, sleep overtook the men on their return trip and the long arm of the law reached out to make it an expensive trip for these would-be disciples of Izak Walton.

Rather than advise your friend to tempt fate in this manner, have him send for one of those government blue books wherein he will find just where the millions of whitefish, pickerel, salmon trout and speckled trout fry and fingerlings were placed for his particular benefit and that of other thousands of fishermen who each summer saunter forth with hook and line to try their luck.

Or invite him on a motor trip to the nearest government fish hatchery where he can see for himself the long compartments filled with perfect specimens of the finny tribe, from the tiniest fry to some more than a foot in length, and he may also inspect the hundreds of great glass jars filled with fish eggs for distribution throughout the province.

The government has fourteen hatcheries located at various points in the province, some of them devoted to the culture of whitefish, pickerel, salmon trout and herring, others to rainbow trout, speckled trout and black bass, according to the suitability of the environment. From these hatcheries, the millions of fry, fingerlings and yearlings are trucked here and there to streams and lakes, every county receiving its share of the prize, according to the number of its suitable waters.

A typical hatchery is found at Normandale on the north shore of Lake Erie in Norfolk county. It is the site of the most prolific spawning beds for speckled trout in Ontario. Normandale Creek, an ideal stream for propagation of trout, has its origin a mile or two back from the lake. The hatchery and ponds are located near the creek's source in a picturesque shaded ravine where every advantage for the culture of brook trout obtains. The government holding here now embraces a territory of 200 acres.

Walking along the bank of the creek, the visitor can see thousands of tiny fingerlings darting to and fro in their small wooden compartments. Proceeding downstream he will come upon the more fascinating spectacle of hundreds of yearling trout moving leisurely about in shoals. Then come the parent fish.

Spawning Process Simple

WE saw them in all their glory one bright afternoon in late October, which is by far the most interesting time as the parent fish have come upstream for spawning. To the unitiated it seems a singular thing that these fish will come a mile or more against the current for the privilege of handing over their spawn to the expert hands which care for them. But it is the precise truth. About one mile downstream, the waters widen into a huge pond where the parent trout have been permitted to roam throughout the summer. In the fall they head upstream toward the compartments built for them along the creek. No barrier can stop them in their mad rush. We saw scores of them surmount with ease a waterfall more than a foot high.

The spawning process is actually very simple. The female fish, easily distinguishable by its corpulence, is removed from the compartment. A gentle pressure of the hand forces the eggs from the fish into a pan, the bottom of which is barely covered with water. The average female will yield three or four thousand eggs. The milt from the male fish is forced out on top of the eggs. Fertilization is almost instantaneous. The eggs harden very quickly and after being washed several times, are removed in pans to the hatchery to be placed in long troughs, covered with water and permitted to set for a time. Girls are employed to sort these millions of eggs for the purpose of eliminating the non-fertile ones. If an egg is fertile, a tiny streak appears in it, which one day will become a brook trout. When the little fish appears in the egg, it is called an "eyed" egg because it presents the appearance of an eye.

Speckled trout eggs hatch between the middle of December and early January. The tiny fish drops through the sieve-like bottom of the pan into the trough below. A great portion of the fry are shipped to other hatcheries, but many of them are kept until spring to be placed in the upper portion of the creek. We saw more than one hundred thousand of them in the Normandale hatchery this last spring awaiting transfer to the rearing ponds. At that time, however, the yearling trout were in possession there and no transfer could be effected until their removal, because the fry would have no chance in their presence.

Even then, the fry and fingerlings have a difficult time to survive due to lack of space. Whereas the Normandale hatchery had an average of about 85 per cent. success with its eggs, the percentage of fry that survive falls of sadly. The waste, due to insufficient rearing ponds, is enormous. Last spring approximately 7,000,000 speckled trout eggs were secured at the Normandale hatchery, but on the basis of previous records, only about one-third of that number have developed into live, healthy trout. A large part of the eggs spawned at Normandale in the fall are shipped to other hatcheries whence the fry are distributed in the spring.

You may learn many interesting facts about trout at the Normandale hatchery. The superintendent, Charlie Hartman, will tell you that care must be taken to keep the various sizes of trout in their own special compartments for the good reason that they are fond of eating one another. It requires many hours of every day in the summer months to feed the fish. They are very fond of liver and hogs' milt, which are given them in large quantities. However, the stream and pond conditions at Normandale are so natural that the fish reared there have an abundance of natural food at their disposal.

Cautious About Restocking

LAST year in Ontario about three hundred shipments of speckled trout of various sizes were made and most of them had their origin at the Normandale ponds. By no means were all the applications filled, many of them being cancelled, due to unsuitable waters. The department is cautious about restocking streams and will do so only after the most careful investigation. But in spite of the check, about one million speckled trout fingerlings were placed in streams last year. On almost any day in the week the great trucks can be seen with their water tanks waiting to be filled with speckled beauties for consignment to streams in all parts of Ontario. The demand for trout has always far exceeded the available supply, a condition which led to the present departmental policy of concentrating on their propagation at Normandale.

After viewing this fascinating process of raising game fish, costing the province hundreds of thousands of dollars annually, the question naturally arises in one's mind: Is the system achieving the desired results? What happens to the millions of trout fry and fingerlings distributed from the government hatcheries to restock Ontario's streams? Is it true, as many anglers allege, that it is merely an orgy of useless dumping?

Firstly, let us sum up the attitude of the average angler. He has frankly charged that the government is not getting results, particularly in regard to the speckled trout, the gamest fish of them all, and the one sought eagerly every summer by thousands of sportsmen, including an army of tourists. Dissatisfied with the departmental practice of depositing millions of fry and fingerlings in the streams, he has urged the government to raise bigger and better trout and place them in streams in sufficient quantities to ensure good fishing. In response to his importunities, the government in the last two years has set loose many thousands of yearling speckled trout, raised after months of painstaking labor and no little expense. Has any lasting benefit resulted? Is a continuation of this policy possible and will it right existing conditions?

Before the proper solution of this important problem, touching as it does the public purse, can be arrived at, the foregoing questions must have an answer. We sought that answer from superintendent Charlie Hartman of the Normandale hatchery, a man who has had 25 years experience in hatchery work, the greater part of it with the Ontario Government. Particularly well-versed in the culture of brook trout, he has been at Normandale since the inception of that hatchery eleven years ago. Here is a man who does not confuse the scientific aspect of fish culture with the practical problems now besetting one of Ontario's growing industries. Ask him what is the matter with the speckled trout situation, or, better still, question him regarding the indictments penned by many anglers in regard to the causes for scarcity of trout. You won't have to wait long for an answer.

"I'll tell you why we're not getting anywhere at the present time," he will declare. "The anglers are urging the government to fill the streams with yearling trout. They want to be able to sit on the bank and hook them in a steady procession. Every angler is looking out for his own particular stream. Last year the government acceded to their request and distributed 28,860 yearling trout. With what result? I venture to say that the vast majority of these young trout, and mind you not all of legal size either, were pulled out of the streams shortly after they were dumped in."

Demanding More Yearlings

"CAN the department not continue to restock the streams with yearling trout in greater proportions every year?" he was asked.

"That is the sad part of the situation. The department is just building up its organization for the propagation of speckled trout. At present these few ponds at Normandale and one or two at Mount Pleasant are the only rearing ponds available. We are badly handicapped. Last year we shipped altogther about 20,000 yearling trout. That is the limit of our capacity. Meanwhile the anglers are demanding more yearlings. What for? To denude the streams and next year petition for more. If they would leave the government alone for a few years, they would then have all the speckled trout they want."

We were standing on the creek bank watching thousands of small yearling trout moving about in shoals. "Surely, Mr. Hartman, the anglers would not take fish that size?" we asked, pointing to any number of trout just past the fingerling stage of four or five inches in length.

"You'd be surprised. They may be a little under the legal limit of seven inches, but they go into the bag just the same. These thousands of trout are going out shortly to be placed in streams. They are not like the trout which have been roaming at large for months and have had a chance to become "wild." They will bite at the first sign of bait. Place 500 of these trout in a stream and within a few weeks, probably less, they'll have disappeared entirely—in care of anglers."

"What is the remedy for these conditions?" he was asked.

"The only solution in regard to yearling trout is to delay until late in the summer before placing them in the streams. If the season were closed on August 15th instead of September 15th, this could be done and the young trout would have a chance to grow and become 'wild' before the following spring."

"What about the millions of trout fry and fingerlings distributed in the past few years. Is this the wilful waste that the anglers term it?"

"It is certain that a great percentage do not survive," he declared. "One authority has computed that 95 per cent of advanced fry and 50 per cent of fingerlings placed in trout streams die before reaching legal size. It is difficult to estimate the loss in Ontario, but we do know that due to unsuitable waters and lack of food, together with the fact that many of the tiny fish will be eaten by their bigger brothers, the results are not satisfactory.

"So far as the fry are concerned, the department last year discontinued their distribution. In regard to the fingerlings I think a vast improvement would be effected by depositing them in the small tributaries of the main streams where they would live and grow unmolested, until able to come out and take care of themselves."

It is evident that the department has been sadly handicapped in the propagation of speckled trout by lack of facilities. The Normandale operations were in the nature of an experiment and, having proved successful, the department is going ahead with the establishment of trout ponds at other hatcheries.

The Black Bass Problem

AGAIN, the department admits the scarcity of qualified men available for field work, especially in making biological surveys of streams to determine their suitability for trout and other fish. The planting of fish is one which demands painstaking thoroughness in order to secure the best results and avoid waste.

The importance of this work is indicated by figures for 1929, which show that of 1,268 applications made to have streams restocked with all kinds of fish, only 739 of them were filled, the others being cancelled due to unsuitable waters or reserved for further biological study. Recommendations on this phase of the problem are contained in the report, just made public, of the special government committee on the game fish situation. This report covers existing conditions very thoroughly and copies of it are available to any angler upon application to the Department of Game and Fisheries, Parliament Buildings, Toronto.

The culture of speckled trout, a game fish, is carried on for the purpose of restocking streams for the benefit of sportsmen. It is only one part of the operations at government hatcheries. For instance, in 1929 a total of 147 million pickerel fry and 427,000,000 whitefish fry, as well as large quantities of lake trout and herring fry, were distributed from the hatcheries. This is the commercial side of the enterprise. Illustrating its value, Lake Erie fishermen will testify that this propagation of whitefish has practically saved the situation caused by too intensive fishing in the Long Point area.

Every fall when the whitefish spawn, the fishermen co-operate by bringing in the spawn to the hatchery at Normandale where the next spring the tiny fish are hatched by the million and released into Lake Erie. In the spring of this year some twenty millions of whitefish fry were released from each of the hatcheries at Normandale and Kingsville. Last fall a total of 150 millions of whitefish eggs were in process of hatching at the big hatchery at Glenora at one time.

One need only point to the depicted condition of Long Point Bay, long recognized as the choicest bass-fishing grounds in America, to realise the seriousness of the situation. Expressing themselves as convinced that hatchery practice alone cannot satisfy the demand, because of the relatively small output, officials declare that the bass supply of our lakes and streams may be conserved in the following ways: 1. By setting aside natural, spawning areas. 2. By designating lakes in certain districts for propagation purposes. 3. By protecting bass during the spawning period. 4. By further restricting the bag limit.

Altogether it is a very comprehensive and exacting task that the department has undertaken through its fish hatcheries, and one of increasing importance in view of the host of tourist who annually visit Ontario for satisfactory angling.

sufficient to have caused death before drowning?

Witness: No. They could have caused unconsciousness.

Crown Attorney: There was no evidence about the clothes to indicate a struggle?

Witness: No!

Mrs. Albert Countryman described how White had left the farm between eight and nine o'clock on Sunday morning, August 10. He was dressed in his best clothes, and said he would be back for dinner. He was in good health and spirits, said Mrs. Countryman, and was seldom dispirited or downhearted.

Crown Attorney: Did you ever hear him speak of a young lady in Toronto having become married?

Witness: Yes.

In reply to further questioning by the Crown, the witness said he was downhearted about it last winter.

No Signs of Struggle.

John Countryman, by whom White was employed up to the time of his death, last saw the deceased man on Saturday night.

He stated White had once told him he could swim, and he was in the habit of going to the river on Sunday to bathe. "I saw him come from a point on the river farther north than the bridge on one occasion" stated the witness. He said he had seen the body when it was taken from the river and had noticed no signs which would indicate a struggle.

Crown Attorney: Do you think a man falling from the bridge would be likely to receive such injuries to his mouth, as those which White had?

Witness: Well, there are a lot of rocks there.

Says White Was Jilted.

John William Atkinson, an English immigrant boy, employed by James Restrick, had known White ever since he (witness) came to Canada two years ago.

Crown Attorney: Did White confide in you, any trouble he had?

Witness: No!

Crown Attorney: Did he mention having trouble with his mother?

Witness: No! I don't think so.

Crown Attorney (pressing the question): Did he have trouble with his mother? You told the police he did.

Witness: A little.

Atkinson added the trouble had been smoothed out.

He had heard about a girl jilting White, but he stated White was not worrying about it, and had never spoken of committing suicide.

Witness said White was a good swimmer. He did not know if White ever went to the bridge to swim nor whether he ever fished from the railroad bridge.

He explained that he and White had made plans to return home this winter.

Crown Attorney: He didn't have any money saved.

Witness: Well, he told me about going home last spring.

A Good Man.

Murney Robinson, in evidence, said he had employed White for two and a half years. He was a good man, and witness had never had any trouble with him that amounted to anything. At times, he stated White would get a little depressed over small matters. In answer to the Crown as to how White spent his money, witness said he spent most of his money for the first two years on fitting himself out with clothes, and had taken out a life insurance policy. He did not know who the beneficiary was, but thought it was White's mother. Witness described White as a good-natured, mild sort of man.

Describing how the body was discovered, Philip Simmons, C.N.R. section hand said it lay in about four feet of water, 25 yards south of the bridge. He was in company with Amos Clarke and Stanley Ellis when the body was recovered, and did not notice any marks of violence.

Hilbert Compton, farmer, four miles south of Tweed, said White was employed by him in May of last year for a period of two weeks. At times, he said, White acted as if depressed, and one day witness found him crying. Asked what was the matter, White had replied, "I am unlucky." Witness never heard of White having any enemies or disagreements with any person.

The following served on the jury: W. H. Gray, Thomas Beatty, Aleck Geraldi, Henry Sinclair, C. R. Brown, William Grier, S. Rowley, and Albert Sherry.

OBITUARY

ROBERT PATTERSON COULTER.

STIRLING, Aug. 20.— (Examiner Correspondence.)— The death of Mr. Coulter occurred at his home on Monday afternoon at 5 p.m. Aug. 18th, after an illness of two years' duration. The deceased was born at Olden, Camden township, on February 9, 1866, and at the early age of 14 years, left home and went to Parham, where he learned carriage making. Later on he opened a shop at Camden East for the manufacture of wagons, etc., having as a side line a flour and feed store. There he remained for 18 years. In 1905 he came to Stirling and purchased the Conley block, where he started a flour and feed store and a chopping mill. For 20 years he carried on a very successful business. In the meantime he became the owner of the Empire block. He disposed of his business in 1920 to A. D. McIntosh and for two years lived a retired life. His next venture was the purchase of the Elliott block and business which he carried on until his health began to fail. Since then his son, Roswell, has been in charge. In 1907 he was elected a member of the village council and later reeve. He was chairman of the Finance committee of the County Council. During his career as reeve many improvements were made in public utilities. In politics he was a staunch Conservative and during the war was a recruiting officer of this district.

He married Sara Haines, daughter of Simon and Rachael Haines of Newburgh, who were U. E. Loyalists. To this union were born four children, Ethel, wife of E. Leury of Stirling; Aletha, wife of C. Cooke, Toronto; Beatrice, wife of Mr. Farrell of Grimsby, and one son, Rosswell, of town. During his illness he had the care and devotion of a loving wife, to whom the sympathy of the community is extended.

The funeral service will be held in the United church this afternoon at 2 o'clock, burial in Stirling cemetery.

PIANO RECITAL.

Miss M. Sullivan's Pupils Entertain Warsaw Friends in Town Hall.

WARSAW, Aug. 20 (Examiner Correspondence)—Miss Margaret Sullivan's piano pupils entertained their friends to a delightful recital in the town hall recently.

The program which consisted of different styles of musical composition was much enjoyed. Each pupil was introduced by Dr. Munro.

Junior piano pupils included Irene Clifford, Iris Darling, Emily Payne, Aileen and Michael Leahy, Margaret McDonald and Sylvia Clysdale, while the Seniors included, May Payne, Madeline Sullivan, Buelah Russel, Zeta McManus, Mary Borland, Mary Rose, Laura Webster, Jean Munro, Anna McMurray.

Even those of the junior grade played with splendid execution of tone and technique while the more advanced numbers with many difficult passages were rendered with a most graceful and pleasing effect.

A recitation, "The Sleepy Girl," was cleverly enacted by Myla Payne as was "When teacher gets cross" by Sylvia Clysdale. A vocal solo, "The Wasted Crust" sang very sweetly by Jean Munro was much enjoyed.

Others assisting were Misses Betty [illegible] and Orril Clysdale who gave a violin duet, "My Irish Rose," and a violin solo, Beethoven's Minuet by Tom Davis, with piano accompaniment by [illegible]na McMurray.

HOWARD WILSON HELD FOR TRIAL

Omemee Youth to Face Manslaughter Charge in Connection With Death of Helen Johnson.

CONSTABLE'S EVIDENCE.

LINDSAY, August 20 (Special to The Examiner). — As a result of a change in the date of hearing, Howard Wilson, of Omemee, who is charged with manslaughter in connection with the death on the Downeyville Road of Helen Johnston, of the same village, on July 26, came up before Police Magistrate Moore yesterday morning.

Following the preliminary hearing, the youth was sent up for trial before the next Court of Competent Jurisdiction. He afterwards came up before His Honor Judge Ruddy of Whitby, who presided on the local bench, and was released on $5,000 bail, two sureties of $2,500 each. The case will in al probability come up for hearing the latter part of next month.

The witnesses heard in the preliminary hearing were Dr. Hugh Logan of Lindsay, who conducted the autopsy, Miss Violet Duffy of Downeyville, who was an occupant of the car on the night of the accident, W. J. Patrick, who rode in the Elliott car, and Provincial Constable Nelson of Lindsay. The officer in his evidence estimated that the car driven by Wilson was going at least 65 miles an hour at the time of the accident. The car was also on the wrong side of the road when it collided with the car driven by Hugh Elliott, of Emily Township. "The cars," he declared, "did not meet head on. The front left fenders and wheel caps were the first to meet. The rear end of the Elliott car slewed around on the road to the right with the front end turning a little closer to the centre. This car went about a foot and a half after the impact."

Witness further testified that the Wilson car kept on going still on the wrong side of the road. Its front left wheel had dropped off, and some 37 feet south of a gouge made by the Elliott car was another gouge made by the car driven by Wilson. For 41 feet the car continued until it went into the ditch, where the right front wheel was smashed as it gouged the bank. The car then somersaulted and turned over on its left side. According to the odicer's testimony the car travelled 124 feet after the accident.

The evidence of the other witnesses was similar to that given at the inquest.

CAMPBELLFORD CLUB INSPECT PULP MILL

Rotarians Are Guests of Elie Brunelle on Visit to Local Plant.

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 20. (By Examiner Staff Correspondent). — The weekly luncheon of the Campbellford Rotary Club on Monday was featured by a visit of the members after the repast to the Canadian Paperboard Company's mill, when Elis Brunelle, superintendent of the concern, and a members of the club, took his fellow members for an inspection of the plant.

Starting with the peeling of bark from the four feet logs, the club was shown the grinding room, where four grinders press the logs into pulp with a four and a half ton pressure to each stone. This is done with a gradual pressure, which makes a fine pulp, water being used in the process. These grinders are driven with two motors, one a General Electric and the other a Swedish Electric.

From there the fiber is carried to a Save-all machine where the loose fiber is collected and carried to the main body, the whole going to a series of rollers where it is partially dried and rolled, eventually adhering to the rollers and coming out in flat slabs.

These slabs are then taken and put under a press of six hundred tons pressure, driven by water of a capacity of 27,000 pounds to the square inch, and are finished ready for shipment to the paper manufacturers.

This plant is a steady concern and is one of the industries of note that the town of Campbellford possesses.

UNDER THE FLEUR-DE-LYS

Scout Miscellany, by Jim Hawthorne

A WORD WITH SCOUTERS

Dear Friends—I make no apology for addressing this little epistle to you who are leaders of Scouting in Peterborough. I have been a keen observer of Scouting for a good number of years. From the beginning it attracted me, in those days from the boys point of view of having a good time. Later I played the game in many parts of the world, and now in appeals differently. Nowadays it appears as one of the greatest assets towards universal peace and brotherhood that the world possesses.

All this has been said in this column before many times, and it was not my intention to re-hash it when I began this letter. My intention was to draw your attention to the spiritual side of Scouting and to leave the practical ethics of Scouting to my more efficient colleagues.

I have no means of knowing whether Baden Powell had any particular passage of Scripture in mind when he framed the Scout Laws, but I want you to compare them, firstly, with Christs 'sermon on the Mount, and secondly, with I Corinthians, chapter 13. You will find at once that there is a great similarity. In fact the more you think it over, the more apparent it becomes that Scouting is nothing more or less than a practical effort to bring these two great passages into the life of the average boy.

Therefore, my dear Scouters, immediately you have realized this, your responsibilities increase a thousandfold. Not only are you responsible for the actual, physical and material citizenship of your boys, but you are, to a large extent, responsible for their spiritual well being, also.

How are you meeting this responsibility? Loyally, I have no doubt, though, if you will forgive me, a little blindly. Regularly you attend church. You always open your functions, even your weekly meetings with prayer. So far, so good, but—there's a danger! Might I ask a question or two with the assurance that your own hearts will answer them honestly? How many of your boys attend church out of a desire or love to worship God? How many of your boys look upon your evening prayer at meetings as anything but a bore, to be got over with as quickly as possible?

We dont' want a sickly anemic show of religion. But we do need and B.P. intended us to have a reverent and honest love for the hand that gave us life, health, the world in which we live and everything that tends to make it worth living in. Boys and girls are naturally genuine. Therefore if you can inculcate a genuine desire and love of God it is your duty as Scout Masters to do so. But how is this to be accomplished? Easily with a little trouble. Couple Scouting with religion and show your boys that they are brothers and go hand in hand. And this can only be done effectively, as I.H.Q. have realised, by conducting regular Scouts own services. And now you know what "I am getting at".

Church services aren't enough. They don't strike deep into the heart of the boy. Ritual and ceremony don't appeal to him. What he really needs is something different, something that is really his own. And nothing can meet this need except a Scout's own and a Scout's own should really be a Scouts' own, not open to the public.

Some years ago my old troop organized them at regular intervals, and every Scout possessed an "alert", a small booklet of prayers, suggestions for services, and hymns issued by headquarters. These meetings were always well attended and really enjoyed, though some little variety in speakers would have made them more so! Some of the happiest moments of my life were passed there, and some of my greatest lessons learnt. Before I conclude I should like to make a special appeal to Scout Masters in Peterborough, to organize these services in the near future. You owe it to your boys, indeed I say it is a sacred obligation. And if you fail to meet this obligation you are openly breaking your vow to "keep the spirit of the Scout law."

Cheerio and good Scouting is the wish of J. H.

Women were in the majority at an enthusiastic meeting at Stoke Newington, England, when a local branch of the new United Empire Party was formed.

JUNIPER HOLDS MASQUERADE

Children's Program is Big Success at Juniper Island.

HOLD RE-UNION.

LAKEFIELD, Aug 20 (Examiner Correspondence) — The children's masquerade at Juniper Island Pavilion was held on Wednesday afternoon when a capable committee of adults arranged a program which provided real pleasure for the children and gave the adults a good time also.

The affair, which is a social event at the Lake, is primarily arranged for children from two to fourteen years of age, but this year there were as many adults as children.

Two little girls, Eleanor Piper and Mary Annesley won the lucky number prizes. The race for the boys seven years and under was won by Robert Colville with John Ceberan second. David Mackenzie won the race for boys eight to fourteen years of age, with Bill Fountain second. Robert Colville and Lilias Blackwell won the musical chairs contest.

The prize for the most original costume for girls was won by Eleanor Piper, who represented the League of Nations, and was a striking costume, well carried out. A little girl who represented Peter Pan won second prize. An organ grinder and his monkey won the prizes given to the most original boys. Two white daisies won the prizes given to the best all-round girls, while a pair of sunflowers were second.

Janet and Jimmy Collins as a Spanish Dancer and Cavalier respectively won prizes for the best costumes worn by children six years and under.

Among others who were worth mentioning were a Chinese costume, two red Pierrots, Black-eyed Susan, a Japanese and Pied Piper costumes.

Following the presentation of the prizes was an event which was popular with everyone as every child received a prize and an ice cream cone.

LESSON IN HABITS GIVEN TO CHILDREN

Story of Three Horses Told at Sunday Service in Warsaw.

WARSAW, Aug. 20 (Examiner Correspondence)—The Rev. Mr. Hamilton in the Presbyterian Church on Sunday evening gave the children a lesson in habits by telling them the story of three horses, each of which had been trained to one thing.

One had walked around in a circle, one had been on the fire truck and one had delivered milk, and when old and taken off that work kept up the habit. One went from one side of the street to the other, one followed the fire engine, and the other walked around in a circle in the pasture. The text was taken fom Jeremiah 13.

His sermon for the older people was 'At Eventide there shall be light' and the subject 'The glories of old age.'

"Some people dreaded the idea of growing old, or any of its signs. It should not be so. God intended old age to be the best time of life. Then people can look back and see how and why they were led by winding paths which at one time seemed very hard."

He mentioned five glories of old age, enlarged upon and explained each. They are faith, change from ambition to aspiration, sympathy, understanding of the ways of life and a fuller grasp of Christ.

Two officers from the Salvation Army conducted the service in the United Church on Sunday evening. The church was well filled for the occasion.

The Rev. Mr. Simpson was back on duty in the Baptist Church on Sunday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. McNeely, of Trent River, with Orville Watts spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Watts.

Rev. Arthur Pickering Addresses Institute

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LAKEFIELD, August 20. — Rev. Arthur Pickering gave an address on the work of the Canadian Institute for the Blind at the regular meeting of the Woman's Institute on Wednesday last.

Mr. Pickering stated that there are 7000 blind persons in Canada who are known to the Institute, and have been reported and of course there are other cases of which they have no record because they have not been reported. Of the number known there are 1950 in Ontario and 2100 in Quebec. Many of these cases could have been reported if proper measures had been taken. Preventable accidents take a terrible toll, also carelessness; then scarlet fever and measles are causes of many cases.

It is said that this is an age of invention and it might also be said that it is an age of ignorance. He told several anecdotes of the criminal ignorance of many mothers to which many children owe blindness and ill-health. It is time the Women's Institute taught young mothers how to care for their children properly.

Buying spectacles from travelling agents or from the 10 cent stores is a silly practice which brings very often tragic results in the injury of the eyes. Often blindness is caused by some organic trouble that medical care could have helped.

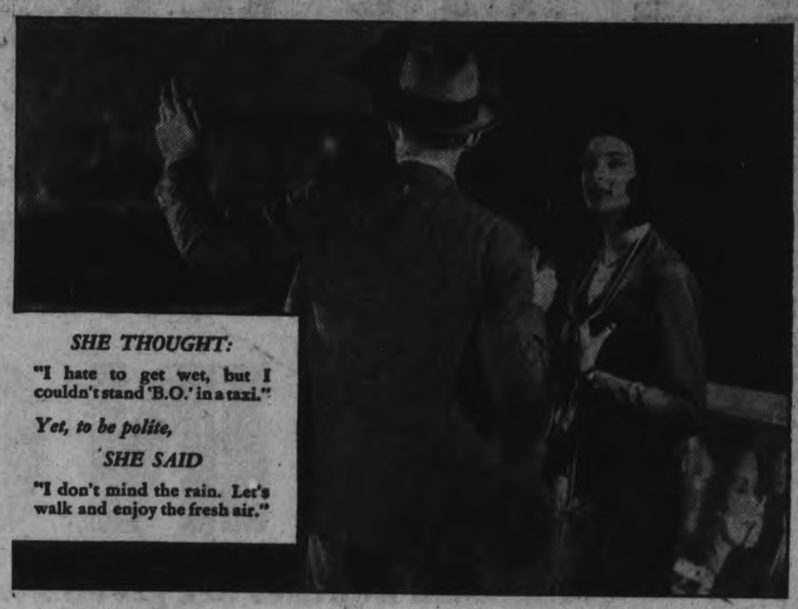
The opticians of Canada met recently in Toronto and they are hoping to influence Parliament to prohibit the promiscuous selling of spectacles.

The Canadian Institute for the Blind supplies free treatment for those unable to pay, and in Halifax, Ottawa, Toronto, Winnipeg and Vancouver, they have factories, where the blind are making various articles, clothing, brooms, etc., and earning a fair living. They have cafeterias operated by the blind, and also canteens, and every effort is made to make the blind independent as far as possible.

On motion it was decided to hold a Tag Day for the Canadian Institute for the blind.

Mrs. J. H. Moore gave a very interesting reading which was much enjoyed.

A hearty vote of thanks was given to Miss Emma Elliott for the delightful picnic held at her home this Thursday previous.



SHE THOUGHT:

"I hate to get wet, but I couldn't stand 'B.O.' in a taxi."

Yet, to be polite,

SHE SAID

"I don't mind the rain. Let's walk and enjoy the fresh air."

Attentive... devoted.. but "B.O." (Body Odour) spoiled his chances until—

IT SEEMED impossible to please her. Take her to the movies — and she complained that the theatre was stuffy. Call a taxi to escape the rain — and she said she'd rather walk. He was puzzled, distressed—but determined to win her.

Finally, two words overheard in a crowded trolley gave him the clue to her coldness. "B.O."—body odour... Today he and the girl are happily engaged. He knows the easy way to avoid offending now.

Beware treacherous "B.O."

Body odour never warns its victims. It may be doing us untold harm in our social and business contacts—and we never once suspect it because we so quickly become accustomed to an ever-present odour.

But remember, pores are constantly giving off odour-causing waste—as much as a quart daily. And though we don't notice "B.O." in ourselves, others do.

Why take chances? Use Lifebuoy and be safe. Its creamy, deep-cleansing, antiseptic lather purifies pores — removes every trace of "B.O." And how C-L-E-A-N you feel after a Lifebuoy bath—fresh, vigorous, "on top of the world!"

Wonderful for the complexion

There's no surer way to a clear, radiant complexion than regular cleansing with Lifebuoy. Its gentle, searching lather coaxes out impurities from the clogged pores—makes dull skins bloom with fresh, healthy beauty. Its pleasant extra-clean scent—that vanishes as you rinse—tells you Lifebuoy purifies. Adopt Lifebuoy today 338

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Aug. 20—New rainfalls, tending to relieve corn crop distress, did much yesterday to pull all grain values down. Despite estimates that North American wheat export business today totalled 2,000,000 bushels, wheat prices temporarily went to within ½c of the season's lowest point, and oats reached a fresh bottom level. Under heavy stop loss selling the corn market dropped to 11¾c a bushel below recent top figures.

Closing quotations on corn were nervous, 3c to 1¼c off, as compared with Monday's finish. Wheat closed irregular at ¼c net decline to ½c advance, with oats ⅝c to ⅞c down, but provisions showing 2c to 12c advance.

MONTREAL PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Aug. 20—The demand for all lines of cash grain here yesterday was fair and values were well maintained.

A feature of the dairy and produce trade was the further strength in butter, and values were marked up ½c per pound. Receipts were 1,140 boxes.

An easier feeling developed for cheese, and prices were reduced ½c per pound. The trade was fair. Receipts were 7,631 boxes.

Prices for all grades of eggs were steady under a good demand. Receipts were 5,738 cases.

Potatoes were unchanged at 70c to 75c per 80-lb. bag for new, locally grown stock.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, Aug. 20.—Receipts of cattle at the Union stock yards yesterday morning were: 528, 550 calves, 530 hogs, 374 sheep and lambs.

In addition to the light fresh receipts, there were 1400 stale cattle in the offering at the market this morning. Opening trade was very slow, and only a few sales were made up to 11 o'clock.

Plain to medium butcher steers sold from 5½ to 6½ cents a pound, and bids on good killers are 25c a cwt. lower for the week, with none moving in the early sales. Cows sold at a top of 5½ a pound, and the best price for baby beeves is 11¼ cents, or 25c a cwt. lower than Monday on this grade. Demand for store cattle is lacking, and milkers and springers are slow at 80 and 90 dollars apiece for the best.

The calf market is strong, with choice veal selling at 11 to 11½ cents a pound. Plain veals are worth 7½ cents, and grassers downward to 5 cents a pound. Lambs are a light offering today, but prices are unchanged at 8½ cents a pound for good ewes and wethers and 6½ cents a pound for bucks. Sheep are selling steady at a range of 2 to 5½ cents a pound. The hog market is unsettled, with prospects lower. Packers' bids are down 50 cents a cwt. from yesterday, at 10¼ cents f.o.b. and 11¼ cents w.o.c. for bacons.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, August 20. — Wheat failed to hold the advance of 1¾c to 1¾c scored in the early trading on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange yesterday, and closed out at ¼c to ⅜c lower for the day. May once again crawled above the $1.00 mark, but finished at 99⅛c a bushel.

A good export business in Canadian wheat, strong Liverpool cables and unfavorable crop news from Europe accounted for the early strength. Export sales of Manitobas were estimated as high as 2,000,000 bushels, with the wheat pool getting credit for half this amount.

Pit buying was heavy in the early hours, and observers were of the opinion that more than a million bushels changed hands shortly after the opening, but the bulge in prices was the signal for further selling pressure, and values quickly receded.

A fair demand existed for cash wheat and coarse grains.

TORONTO PRODUCE.

TORONTO, August 20. — The local butter market took another rise yesterday and Ontario No. 1 sold at 29½c to 30c, while No. 2 was bringing 27¾c to 28c. Most of the sales of No. 1, which was only available in small lots, went around the 29½c price but there were sales completed at the higher scale. Buyers were quite active in securing lots at the above prices, but did not follow the asking price of 31c for Western supplies any too readily. Dealers reported some sales of carlot Western at this price, but these sales were hard to verify, and 30c seemed to be a good quotation for any sled lots of butter. The best trend on the local market was in the 29½c range for Ontario No. 1, and in 27¾c quotation for No. 2. The cool weather that has prevailed for the past few days, light receipts and a good consumptive demand have all worked wonders with the local situation, and the butter market seems headed for better prices than those quoted.

Cream.

One of the officers of a leading cream-buying company, when questioned yesterday, stated that prices for cream to the country shipper would remain firm for a day or two, but stronger quotations would most likely result before the end of the week. Prices quoted yesterday were as follows: Specal, 29c; No. 1, 28c; and No. 2, 25c, f.o.b. country ponts.

Cheese.

The cheese market was a little easier owing to lower prices on country boards, and quotations to shippers were nominally 16½c to 16¾c for new large, 16¾c to 17c for twins, and 17c to 17¼c for triplets.

Eggs.

Receipts of Ontario eggs in Toronto have dwindled to such an extent that storage supplies will start to move in a very short time. So far eggs from British Columbia and the Prairies have helped to fill the needs, and the prices asked for Prairie supplies have been 32c for extras, 29c for firsts and 26c for seconds. Ontario eggs, graded, free cases, have been selling at 31½c for extras, 29½c for firsts and 24½c to 25c for seconds. This comparison shows Ontario firsts bringing ½c more than Prairie firsts, and the reason given was that the demand for this grade was not too good.

Country shippers were quoted 29c for extras, 26c for firsts, and 22c for extras yesterday by the larger dealers, but prospects of higher prices before the end of the weekk seemed very good.

26 TORONTO PARALYSIS CASES.

TORONTO, Ont., August 19 (C.P.).—Five more cases of infantile paralysis were reported to the civic health department yesterday. Along with the seven cases reported on Friday this brings the total number of cases in Toronto for the month to 26. One-third of this number are outside cases which have been brought into the city for treatment according to Dr. Gordon Jackson, city medical health officer.

OLD LAND MARK BADLY BROKEN

Hitching Posts, Once So Common in City, Gradually Removed

RELIC OF THE PAST.

One of the last of the hitching-posts, once so common in Peterborough streets, had passed into the limbo of dead and out-moded things yesterday when citizens, returning from their lunch hour, beheld a little heap of broken and rustled metal that had been an iron horse's head on Water street near Simcoe. Whether the relic had been smashed by a careening automobile or had merely yielded to the ravages of time, was unknown.

Cast-iron heads used to be plentiful on the streets here—in the days when asphalt paving was unknown and when the horse was the principal means of transporation. Indeed it wasn't so many years since the bulk of the old hitching-posts began to disappear from in front of our stores and residences.

Iron horse's heads were quite the thing about the time that the wooden Indian was the pride and glory of every cigar store. There are now only two surviving wooden Indians in the city; and, while the exact number of surviving hitching-posts is difficult to ascertain, it is believed that there are scarcely more than half a dozen to remind old residents of more leisurely days before civilization ran amock.

Wooden Indians have brought handsome prices from curiosity-hunters in the United States and elsewhere. What the market value of a defunct iron hitching-post might be, The Examiner does not know; but it might be considerable.

WEDDING BELLS

BOOTH—DUNK.

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 20.—(By Examiner Staff Correspondent).—A quiet but pretty wedding was held on Monday evening, August 18, at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church Manse, when the Rev. Dr. W. J. Mark united in matrimony Lottie Elsie Dunk, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest William Dunk of Campbellford, to Harold Ernest Booth, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Henry Booth of Campbellford.

The groom was supported by Mr. John Lain of Bonarlaw, and a sister of the bride, Miss Flossie Dunk, was the bridesmaid.

After a short honeymoon Mr. and Mrs. Booth will reside in Campbellford.

THOMAS—MacCLEMENT.

KINGSTON, August 20 (Special to The Examiner). — This afternoon a marriage of more than local interest took place at the home of the bride's parents in the grounds of Queen's University, when Ruth, only daughter of Professor and Mrs. W. T. MacClement, became the bride of Mr. Hartly Munro Thomas, son of Dr. and Mrs. Ernest Thomas, Toronto, Dr. Thomas, father of the bridegroom, performing the ceremony. The rooms of the old grey stone residence were gay with flowers, and in the alcove in the long drawing-room where the marriage took place, the decorations of flowers and ferns were most effective.

Dr. G. B. Frost played the Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin as the bride entered, on the arm of her father, wearing a lovely frock of white chiffon and lace, a long veil of Brussels net and lace caught at each side of the face with orange blossoms and carrying a shower bouquet of Ophelia roses and lily of the valley. She was preceded by her bridesmaid, Miss Isabel Thomas, Toronto, a sister of the groom, who was frocked in green net, full and much ruffled, and wearing green shoes and a large green hat. Her arm bouquet was a sheaf of roses and sweet peas.

Two small flower girls, Miss Jean O'Brien of Ottawa and Miss Nancy Chown of Whitby, wore frocks of pale beige net over mauve and mauve hats. They carried nosegays of old-fashioned flowers. The groomsman was Mr. Wilbur Chown of Whitby. The bride and groom received the good wishes of their friends with their parents, Mrs. MacClement wearing a gown of printed chiffon, and Mrs. Thomas gowned in royal blue chiffon with a small hat to match. Following the ceremony the couple left for Montreal en route for France where they expect to spend a month, returning in October to Kingston, where Mr. Thomas is on the staff of Queen's University. Both bride and groom are graduates of Queen's, and received many good wishes from their classmates.

The bride, when going away, wore a frock of orchid flat crepe, hand-embroidered, and a coat of orchid chiffon. Her hat was a small green model and her shoes matched in shade.

Among the out-of-town guests were: Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Chown, Whitby; Mr. and Mrs. L. O'Brien, Mr. and Mrs. Victor Minnes, Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Monture, Rev. Northcote Burke, Mr. Harvey Wilson, Miss Ross Malcolm, Ottawa; Mr. and Mrs. Gordon-Anderson, Mr. and Mrs Walter Windeyer, Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Corkill, Napanee; Mr. Hugh Jack, Rochester; Captain Basil Herbert, Mr. Ellis Morrow, Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. Keith Crowder, Washington; Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Bogue, New York; Mr. and Mrs. Ian McLauchlin, Nova Scotia; Miss Florence Leggett, Newboro; Miss Anna Neilson, Stella; Miss Kathleen Mulligan, Perth.

Heyday of Short Wrap Continues Vogue

The short wrap has by this time proved itself a perfect accessory, and it will hold its own until cold weather neccessitates its withdrawal. At the LEFT are three Vogue sketches. The shot paletot is of heavy shiny satin in an intense yellow, with fitted waistline and double peplums and a standing roll collar; the wrap is of reddish brown flat crepe with short sleeves and tied waist-line, and the last wrap is of crimson velvet with shoulder yoke drapes held in place by a jewelled clasp. An interesting Madelon mode is shown at the RIGHT; it is a deb frock of water green silk fabric, the waistline indicated by the placement of two bands, one at the hip and one at the natural waistline, both being accented by pert bows. Self-buttons mark the neck closing.—(Sketch is by Vogue.)

A BEDTIME STORY

by Howard R. Garis

UNCLE WIGGILY'S RATTLE BOX.

Uncle Wiggily loved every one of his many rabbit girls and boys, but he has a special fondness in his heart for Baby Bunty, the little orphan who had come to live with him a few years ago. Uncle Wiggily was so fond of Bunty that, though she was quite a well-grown rabbit child now, Mr. Longears allowed her two words of baby talk. These words were "Unkie Wig," which no one else, except the very smallest rabbit children, were permitted to use.

And, besides Bunty, Uncle Wiggily greatly loved little Wopsie. She was one of the very newest babies and I think the reason Uncle Wiggily was so very fond of her was because, one day when he was feeding her prune juice out of a spoon and dish, Wopsie sneezed and blew the brown, sticky stuff all over Uncle Wiggily's pink, twinkling nose. But bless your handkerchief! He didn't mind that.

"Wopsie surely is a dear little bunny child," said Uncle Wiggily, after he had fed her the prune juice. I told you that story yesterday, if you will kindly remember. Also how Teeter, a big boy rabbit, reached around from the back of Wopsie's high chair and took the first dish of prune juice while Uncle Wiggily was wiping his pink nose. But Teeter soon brought another dish for his baby sister.

"I must get something for Wopsie because she was so good about eating her prune juice," said Uncle Wiggily when Nurse Jane Fuzzy Wuzzy had taken the baby rabbit away to have her morning sleep. "Yes, I must get her a present. What shall it be?"

Just then a locust, or hot weather bug, as some call them, began singing in a tree near the hollow stump bungalow. The locust sang a sort of rattling song and at once Uncle Wiggily thought of a rattle box.

"I'll get Wopsie a nice rattle box that will make a sort of music," thought Mr. Longears, "and she can also cut her teeth by biting on it when the time comes. A rattle box will be just the thing!"

Much pleased with having thought of this for his cute little baby rabbit, Uncle Wiggily started to hop down to the rattle box store where there were many baby things to be bought.

"What kind of a rattle box do you want for Wopsie?" asked the little mousie girl clerk behind the counter when Uncle Wiggily looked at her, twinkled his pink nose and told why he had come.

"I would like a rattily rattle box that a baby can cut her teeth on when the time comes," he said.

"Then," spoke the little mousie girl clerk, "you had better take a rubber rattle box. Here is a nice one," and she showed Mr. Longears a sort of rubber ball on a rubber handle, and when he jiggled the handle something tinkled inside the ball.

"What makes it rattle?" asked Mr. Longears.

"That's a riddle," said the mousie girl, smiling and showing nearly all her teeth. "I have never cut open a rattle box to find what was inside that made it rattle and I don't know of anyone who has."

"Well, somebody ought to do it," said Uncle Wiggily, jiggling the rubber handle to and fro and making the ball jingle. "There ought to be some way of finding out what is inside a rattle box to make it rattle."

"I think maybe it is seashells and pebbles and silvery bells," said the mousie clerk as Uncle Wiggily paid her and took the toy for Wopsie. "That's what the rattle sounds like to me."

"Its a pretty thought, anyhow," said the rabbit gentleman. "And when Wopsie gets through shaking the rattle box and playing with it and cutting her teeth on it, then I am going to open it and find out what is inside."

All the way back to his bungalow Uncle Wiggily was looking at the rattle box and shaking it close to his ears and trying to guess what was inside that made the jolly noise. And, as he was hopping along, all of a sudden, out from behind a bush popped the Bob Cat.

"Yowlie mow!" howled the Bad Chap. "Now I've got you!" He made a jump for the rabbit, but Uncle Wiggily raised the rattle box and hit it down hard upon the head of that ugly Bob Cat.

"Bang!" went the rattle box, and it also rattled. And, so hard did Uncle Wiggily strike that the rubber ball part of the rattle box burst open and out scattered, just as the mousie girl had guessed, some silvery bells and cockle shells and gilded seashore pebbles. They scattered over the Bob Cat and the Bad Chap was so surprise, thinking it was his head which was coming to pieces, that he gave a loud yowl and scampered away, not stopping to bite the rabbit.

"Well," said Mr. Longears as he looked at the rattle box, "I broke it but I've found out what was inside. And it is well that I did or I might have been eaten by the Bob Cat. I'll get Wopsie another rattle box."

Thus the rabbit found out the secret. (Copyright 1930, by Howard R. Garis.)

Use only fully ripened berries. Crush berries thoroughly. Add juice of 2 lemons and grated rind of ½ lemon. Measure fruit into large kettle. Add sugar, mix and bring to a full rolling boil over hottest fire. Stir constantly before and while boiling. Boil hard 1 minute. Remove from fire and stir in pectin. Skim; pour quickly. Cover hot jam with film of hot paraffin: when jam is cold, cover with 1-8 inch of hot paraffin. Roll glass to spread paraffin on sides. Requires about 2 pounds berries. Makes 11 to 12 eight-ounce glasses.

Just Between Us Women

A daily chat with Examiner neighbors conducted by Anne Wilcox

HAS anyone the words of the songs, "Daddy and Home," and "The Sinking of the Vestris?"

• • • • • • •

If you have them would you mind copying the words very carefully and sending them in as one of our readers desires them?

• • • • • • •

One reason why people do not get things done is that they fail to do them immediately! Haven't you noticed this?

• • • • • • •

Of course, I don't mean that this signifies intention or leaving things undone. But they resolve that to-morrow, or next week, they will attend to the matter, or just as soon as they can get around to finding out some point that is essential to the accomplishment.

• • • • • • •

Unfortunately, just as soon as the thing is set aside for a little time, the period lengthens, until dismay seizes upon the person who fully intended to do the thing.

• • • • • • •

Perhaps an apology must be made for the delay and no one likes to have to prepare the way for a good deed by apologizing.

• • • • • • •

Apologizing takes the bloom off the courtesy. One feels so annoyed at one's self when realizing that a little less delay, and no bother of the sort would have been necessary.

• • • • • • •

Moreover, if what one is to do is in the way of an attention, a kindness, etc., the person for whom the act is to be done is apt to feel that the one doing it has found it a bit irksome.

• • • • • • •

Perhaps, after all, it has not proved convenient. In reality it may not have been inconvenient in the least. The sole trouble is that the thing was not done "at the time of it" as one old gentleman put it.

• • • • • • •

To do a thing late means forcing the mind to action as well as the body, and so often it is easier not to put the power into the action that it goes undone.

• • • • • • •

Adults who think about such matters learn the truth of this, but it has to be impressed upon children especially those who are inclined to delay in doing their deeds.

• • • • • • •

A mother can help her little folk to save themselves from future trouble if she will encourage promptness. A reward of merit at the end of a week in which a child has been quick to get his lessons finished, quick to get to bed, quick to rise when called, etc., will prove stimulating

• • • • • • •

Once the habit of quick response has been formed, the trials of not accomplishing things through delay in later years will have been forestalled.

That Body of Yours

By James W. Barton, M.D

THE WORK YOUR BODY AN DO

You are hearing so much about food these days, about calories, or heat units, about meats and eggs, vegetables, bread, fruits, about fats, and the vitamins, that you may wonder what next is going to be discovered about food and food values.

And yet our food experts all agree that if the average human being in good health will eat a little of each kind of food every day, he need never worry about not getting enough of each food and the vitamins necessary to preserve health.

You will remember the ratio, 1 part meat or eggs, 2 parts fats (butter or cream) and 4 parts vegetables, fruits and bread.

And the amount of food?

If you are a full grown adult you need four times as much food when you work hard as you do when you lie in bed all day.

A youngster in his teens needs twice as much food as an adult doing no work whatever. He needs it for growth. And yet that body of yours is capable of doing work for short periods of time, that if kept up for the entire day would require many times as much food as you would need if you were resting, because it can actually do 20 times as much work under great strain as it does when it is resting.

I have spoken before of Drs. Henderson and Haggard of Yale, and their study of the Yale crew of the Olympic games of 1924. They were able to show that these oarsmen in doing strenuous work for six minutes could make their bodies do twenty times as much work as they did when they were at rest; and in a race lasting 22 minutes these bodies did 13 times as much work.

These were unusually fine specimens of young men and this might quite properly be considered about the best the human body can do.

Now, what has this got to do with food?

It has been found that men in training for hard athletic contests do not need more than the ordinary three good meals a day, which as mentioned before is but four times the amount needed when they are at complete rest.

By being able to do work for a certain period of time which actually consumes 10 to 20 times as much food and oxygen, you can see the wonderful capabilities of that body of yours when necessity arises.

Hard work uses up the food in your body, uses up the body tissues themselves so that 8 or 10 pounds is given up, and uses up oxygen from your tissues that must be paid back again as soon as possible after the work is done.

After hard work, rest is worth as much as food, as it allows the oxygen taken from the tissues to be replaced.

Uncommon Sense

WORDS.

You will discover, if you are observant, that even educated people are a little shaky as to the exact meaning of words.

We begin to learn words from our parents.

Later we study "definitions" in school, and learn a little more about them.

But there are too many words in any language to be learned in either way.

Most of those we use are picked up from the conversation of parents and later friends and associates, and later from reading.

Speaking should be nearly an exact science.

One ought to know exactly the meaning of the words he uses, and something about their origin.

There is only one way to do that, and that is to read with a dictionary at hand, and to look up every doubtful word that you happen upon.

I know many people who habitually read the dictionary.

I do it myself sometimes, and am astonished to find how much information I pick up in that way and how many words I have been using without actually knowing what they mean.

Clear, intelligent speech is well worth while as a possession.

We cannot help but admire the diction of a fine writer or an eloquent speaker, even if he sometimes may get a little beyond our depth.

But, aside from eloquence and fine writing, it is important to be able to talk clearly, to make our exact meaning known, and to do so in as few words as possible.

The acquiring of a vocabulary is the first step to this, but the vocabulary will not really be mastered till we are familiar with the shade of meaning that every word ought to convey.

A vocabulary can be acquired by reading, provided we read the works of good authors and pay close attention as we read.

But it is wise to supplement all reading with a dictionary—to keep it at hand and consult it often, and even, as I have said, to read it as you would a book, beginning at the beginning and going through it from time to time as you have the leisure.

In time you will find this sort of reading fascinating.

You will discover words by hundreds which you never heard of, as well as words that you have heard but never rightly understood.

Moreover you will find that you have assigned to many words meanings which they do not really possess.

When you have a little leisure, try this dictionary reading.

You need not, of course, devote hours to it.

But I think, if you run over a few pages of words a day, that you will find it interesting, and I am sure that you will find it profitable.

Leafs Win Second Straight Game From Skeeters

TORONTO HURLER PUZZLES PESTS

Johnny Prudhomme Gives Impressive Display After Long Lay-off With Injured Knee.

WINGS OUT OF SLUMP.

TORONTO, Aug. 20. (C.P.) — Just when things were looking a bit dark, Billy Southworth's Rochester Redwings have snapped out of a serious slump, and taken a more comfortable lead in the International League pennant race.

Taking advantage of another day of idleness for the Baltimore Orioles, the Redwings turned back Newark yesterday and lengthened their advantage over the Orioles to two full games.

Some fine pitching by Smith and the heavy batting of Rip Collins were major factors in the Redwings' victory by a count of 4-0. Smith gave up only five singles and only one Newark player got as far as second base. Leo Mangum went the route for the Bears and was fairly effective although he was touched for 11 hits, of which four went to Collins. The Redwings' triumph broke a four game losing streak.

Johnny Prudhomme pitched great ball to give Toronto an easy 10-5 victory over Jersey City. Prudhomme, pitching after a month's lay-off, due to an injured knee, held the Skeeters to three hits for eight innings, but eased up in the ninth behind a big lead, and the invaders scored four runs on a pair of walks and four hits.

The Leafs pounded Moore and Pitts freely. They got to Moore for seven hits and four runs in the first three innings, and added five more hits off Pitts, which with four bases on balls were good for a half dozen more runs. Pete Cote, Leafs' short stop, was hit by a batted ball in the eighth inning and forced to retire.

Buffalo took advantage of Bell's wildness to beat Reading 6-4 in a night game. The Bisons made only six hits off Bell and his successor Welch, but bunched these to good advantage with eight walks. Reading got to Fred Russell for one run in the first inning and three in the fourth but the Bisons rallied for four runs in the seventh to win.

Goose Goselin Leads St. Louis Attack With Three Home Runs.

YANKS BOW SOX.

NEW YORK, Aug. 20. (C.P.)—The American League's hurlers had a thoroughly enjoyable day with the single exception of those who work for Boston. The red stockinged moundsmen failed to stop the Cleveland batters while the Indians got the benefit of Wes Ferrell's 21st winning game of the year and an equally good job of pitching by Roxie Lawson to win by scores of 7 to 2 and 7 to 3.

Earl Whitehill continued his chase after Ferrell's league leading total of victories by running his string to eleven straight to give Detroit a 2 to 1 victory over Washington. He allowed the Senators five hits while Brown and Liska granted six. Charley Ruffing of New York made another kind of a mark by pitching his third two-hit game since he joined the New York Yankees. His victims this time were the Chicago White Sox, who succumbed 3 to 0, one of Ruffing's previous two-hit performances was an eight inning affair as relief pitcher.

George Blaeholder hurled the day's fourth major league shutout, allowing the champion Philadelphia Athletics only five hits while the St. Louis Browns scored a 7 to 0 triumph. Goose Goslin led the attack with three home runs in successive times at bat.

Softball Notes.

Harrison's must win tonight's big softball match to stay in the running for the league championship. A win tonight for the Sugar Bowl will give them the league championship and the right to represent Peterborough in the Ontario series.

Harrison's are out to cop tonight's game and will send Parsons in to pitch in an effort to tie up the series. Sugar Bowl will in all probability send Forsythe right back with Simmons, Duggan and Dormer in reserve.

A bumper crowd should be on hand at Central School grounds tonight when the teams get away. The game will start at 6.30 sharp.

Joe Wright, Jr., Is All Set For To-day's Classic

Outside of Percy Williams, Joe Wright of the Argonaut Rowing Club, Toronto, remains about the only sterling attraction on the British Empire Games Program so far as Canada is concerned. He faces real opposition at the Hamilton rowing classic to-day. Joe has everything to gain and very little to lose with Bobby Pearce of ustralia. Critics all claim that he is again the old Joe who won the Diamond Sculls. His trials at the Canadian Henley showed him rowing better time than ever before. He has trained faithfully for the test which may be the turning point in his career. For those who have followed the rowing game closely, there is little doubt no matter which way the race goes it will not be the end of competition between these two oarsmen. Bearce may become a Canadian citizen and a resident of the city of Hamilton, as a member of the Leander Club. Incidentally this one of the biggest boosts that the rowing game could get in Canada.

OLD COUNTRY OARSMEN AND SWIMMERS ADD MORE LAURELS TO LONG SERIES OF TRIUMPHS

Various Events on Tuesday's Program Carried Out Under Unfavorable Weather.

ONE RECORD BROKEN.

Miss Grace Cooper of England Sets New Mark in 700-yard Swimming Sprint.

HAMILTON, Ont., Aug. 20—(CP)—England's oarsmen and swimmers added further laurels to their mounting series of triumphs in yesterday's crowded British Empire games program. But while the brilliant representatives of the mother country led the way, Canada's coterie of stars plodded close on the heels of the pace-setters, while members of the Australian, New Zealand and South African contingents also basked in the limelight of the day's glory.

In all 33 events were staged during the day, many of which were unavoidably delayed owing to a mid-day downpour of rain and unfavorable conditions for the rowing and canoeing events. But the Empire's great spectacle nevertheless attracted a huge throng with thousands milling around the stadium enclosure and along the waterfront where the aquatic events were staged.

While the program provided a repetition of thrilling duels for supremacy between the Empire's best, only one record was shattered. This honor fell to Miss Grace Cooper, of England in the 700 yard free-style swimming sprint. Miss Cooper added this event to her country's achievements by leading her field to lower the existing Canadian mark.

In the other rowing feature, the spectacular Bob Pearce, Australia's wonder sculler, demonstrated his ability by winning the quarter-mile exhibition dash. In accomplishing this feat he took the measure of Joe Wright, Canadian singles champion and former holder of the diamond sculls. The latter was fourth, also beaten by Roger Beresford, and Jack Bradley, both from England.

Do Not Dominate.

The athletic prowess of male athletes from other parts of the Empire did not completely dominate to-day's program by any means. The Canadian women's track and field championships provided a large crowd with some of the feature highlights of the day. Ethel Catherwood, Toronto importation from Saskatoon, returned to active competition and displayed much of the form which won her an olympic championship when she won the senior running high jump and the javelin throw.

Another double winner was Myrtle Cook-McGowan, Montreal, who showed splendid form to capture the senior 60-metre and senior 100-metre crowns from a speed band of sprinters.

Miss Lillian Palmer, Vancouver, performed impressively in the intermediate events and won the 60-metre and 100 metre championships.

Junior sprint honors went to Irene Storey, Allandale, Ontario, when she defeated a fine field in the 60-metre final after six qualifying heats had been run.

England's lawn bowlers continued their progress toward the empire title by defeating New Zealands representative team rink, but Canada also remained in the running by disposing of South Africa.

DORMER NINE TAKES LEAD IN LEAGUE FINALS

Victors 5-4 in One of the Closest Games Played This Season.

SPECTACULAR FIELDING.

Gillespie and Playford Were Pick of Fielders—Homer For Westbrooke.

Connors' long double, Maudsley's single and a wild pitch by Montgomery gave the Sugar Bowl a ninth inning win over Harrison's by a 5-4 count. It was a great finish to one of the best played games of the softball season. Last night's win gives the Sugar Bowl the drop in the City Softball League playoffs. The teams meet again tonight and a win for the Sugar Bowl will give them the championship, while a Harrison win will tie it up and make a third game necessary.

Both teams gave a gilt-edged display of fielding, and the pitchers both turned in good performances.

Len Forsythe emerged victorious over Tom Montgomery in a pitcher's battle. Forsythe was at his best with men on the sacks, twelve of the Harrison crew being stranded. He fanned six, allowed eleven hits and walked four. Montgomery, twirling his second game in two nights, held the Bowlrites to nine hits, fanned two and walked one.

Gillespie and Playford were the pick of the outfielders, while Bradshaw, Crary and Weese took the infield honors.

Westbrooke's homer with two on in the third was the best hit of the fixture.

The Game.

Playford started the proceedings away by flying out to Gillespie. Dobson singled to left, but Calladine fouled out to Connors and Lebarr flied out to Gillespie.

Dormer mussed up Willshaw's grounder. Playford hit to Weese, who fumbled, Montgomery scoring. With the bases still loaded Dobson grounded to Weese who threw Clarke out at the plate, a nice play. Calladine hit to Bradshaw, who stepped on third, getting Willshaw.

GIANTS PASS ROBIN CLUB

Sensational Sixteen Inning Battle at Chicago Stadium Ended By Darkness.

BEAT CARDINALS 4-2.

NEW YORK, Aug. 20. (C.P.)—Due to the efforts of a pair of clubs which are not even making a pretense of getting into the National league pennant struggle, the three contenders for the flag have found themselves in an even more uncertain position than ever before and with the prospects that the coming series between the Chicago Cubs and New York Giants may become the really "crucial" one of the season.

The Giants finally have taken second place in the standing and have placed themselves within striking distance of the league leading Cubs, only three games behind.

While the Giants were taking a close struggle from the St. Louis Cardinals 4 to 2, Pittsburg showed Brooklyn's Robins into third place with and 8 to 0 triumph while the humble Phillies brought the Cub activities to a dead halt and kept the league leaders from making any sort of a gain in a double-header.

The Phillies took the first game by a 9 to 8 count despite the efforts of Hack Wilson, who clouted his 43rd home run to tie the National League record set last year by Chuck Klein and Hartnett and Blair who also hit homers then, as the teams attempted to play off Saturday's eleven inning tie, the tail enders battled the Cubs to a standstill in 16 innings of play which wound up in a 6-6 tie. Fidgety Phil Collins hurled the entire game and was deprived of a victory when Lester Bell hit a homer with two on base in the eighth inning. The teams will make another attempt to settle the dispute to-day.

If you buy out of town, and I buy out of town, and all our neighbors buy out of town, what in thunder will become of our town? Ever think about it?

ENGINEERS WIN FIRST FIXTURE

Crash Way to 8-3 Decision in Series For C.G.E. Inter-department Championship.

GOOD MOUND WORK.

The Engineers crashed their way to a hard-fought victory over the Office team last night in the first game of the play-offs for the championship of the C.G.E. Inter-department Softball League, when they took an 8—6 decision.

The game was a snappy softball exhibition and was a nip-and-tuck battle from start to finish while the clever pitching of Munro gave the Engineers the edge. He fanned three and walked one.

Routley, who twirled for the Office, was nicked for ten safe hits, four doubles, a triple and a home run. He struck out three and walked two.

Barry, at first, and Wilson in left, contributed two errors each at critical periods, while the fielding of the rest of the team was well above par.

Newson, in left for the winners, was the outstanding slugger, securing a triple and a home run, while Gore had two doubles. The teams:

Engineers.—Newson, lf; Langley, 2b; Gore, c; Cameron, cf; Munro, p; Osterland, 3b; Justice, 1b; Copping, rf; Jones, ss.

Notification has been received from the O.B.A.A. that the winner of the East Peterborough League will meet Point Anne, champions of the Bay of Quinte, here next Saturday afternoon. The second game will be played at Point Anne on the Wednesday following.

This announcement will be great news for local fans who have been looking forward to an O.B.A.A. contest at Exhibition Park at the weekend. Point Anne have "Hoot" Gibson former Belleville pitching ace and several other ex-Belleville players and are said to have a very strong team.

Although the weather at noon was not promising for tonight's final clash between Crescents and Canadian Generals only a washout will stop the game. In the event of a postponement the game will be played on Thursday night.

TORONTO MAN WINS DINGHY SAILING CUP

Seven Boats Take Part in Peterborough Canoe Company Trophy Competition.

KAWARTHA PARK, Aug. 20—Nosing out Don Fitzgerald's "Jamboree" by something less than two feet, Bill Crouse of Toronto captured the Canoe Company Dinghy Sailing Trophy for the second time at Kawartha Park yesterday afternoon. There was a field of seven boats.

A protest by Fitzgerald over the finish of the race was not upheld. The Wotherspoon brothers followed Fitzgerald over the line 20 yards later. Bob Morris and the rest of the field were closely grouped.

The course was laid in front of the Kawartha Park store on Clear Lake.

FARM LABORER IS SERIOUSLY INJURED

John Curtain, of Lindsay, Rushed to Hospital in Critical Condition.

LINDSAY, Ont., Aug. 20 (Special to The Examiner).—A serious accident occurred on the farm of J. Cayley, west of here on Tuesday afternoon when John Curtin, the fourteen-year-old-son of William Curtin of Lindsay was badly injured. The boy was found in an unconscious condition in the field and it is not known whether he was kicked and trampled by a horse or injured by the hay fork. He was rushed to the hospital where it was found that he had sustained a fractured skull, a fractured hip and other body injuries. His condition is said to be critical.

FAMOUS SCULLERS MEET TO-DAY FOR SUPREMACY OF THE EMPIRE

Four Oared Crews Will Decide Other Rowing Championships For British Dominions.

VICTORY FOR ENGLAND.

HAMILTON, Ont., Aug. 20. (By Elmer Dulmage, C. P. Staff Writer)—Hamilton turned back to the water to-day for its Empire games thrills. Canoeists finished their two day program yesterday, swimmers splashed their last water at night. To-day the throngs will mill for vantage points along the rocky western side of Hamilton bay where two of the world's greatest scullers will drive slim, flimsy shells in a heavily ballyhooed battle for singles rowing supremacy.

Blonde Bob Pearce, the Olympic champion who travelled from the other side of the globe to meet the Empire's best, will pull his oars beside Joe Wright, Jr., broad shouldered Canadian champion and former Diamond Sculls holder. The Pearce-Wright struggle will turn Hamilton baywards. England's shell stars and a second Canadian entrant were considered background material by the multitudes. The experts were not so certain about that.

Wins Exhibition Race

Yesterday the giant Australian amazed thirty-thousand watchers as he shot ahead of a field including Wright and Garrett Gilmore American veteran to win an exhibition quarter mile dash. Gilmore will not be in to-day's race but the rest of the defeated field will. Roger Beresdore, former Cambridge University oarsman and a diamond sculls winner, Jack Bradley, youthful champion of England, and Johnny Durnan of Toronto, runner up to Wright in the Canadian Henley last week, will provide the opposition to the famous Australian and his Canadian rival.. Only Jack Guest, present sculls holder is missing.

Two other Empire rowing championships will be decided in the evening by four oared crews, with and without coxswains. British Guiana's only boat will compete against Canada and New Zealand with coxswains.

London Rowing Club's famous eight oared crew brought England a notable victory at dusk last night when they downed New Zealand.

Another outstanding win was that of Bob Richards and Elswood Bole, Winnipeg Rowing Club doubles team, in the International double sculls Bole and Richards conquered two Philadelphia crews by three lengths to become the greatest rowing duo on the continent.

Joyce Cooper, pretty mermaid from England made it an easy matter for the Empire to name its queen of swimmers. Last night the British girl scored her third straight victory of the games, taking the 100 yards free-style for women from almost the same field that she had twice before bedeated. Her time of 67 seconds was a new Canadian record.

Noe Ryan, Australian speed swimmer, marked up his second win when he won the 1,500 yards free-style for men. George Bridson of New Zealand was a close second and 16 year old George Burleigh third.

England and Canada made further advances in the lawn bowling tournament but important matches to-day are expected to almost decide the Empire's champion trundlers.

SUICIDE PAIR FOUND

MEDICINE HAT, Alta., Aug. 20 (C.P.)—Adam Snyder, married, and Minnie Staum, 15, resident in Cypress Hills district, disappeared last October in the former's car and were thought to have eloped. Their badly decomposed bodies were found by a rider, Sunday, lying in the car which was hidden from view in a coulee on the mountain top near Fox post office.

Death was the result of poisoning in a suicide pact, as related in a note attached to the car.

OVER The KITTY By "Newsie"

Daily Happenings on Peterborough Bowling Club's Greens.

(By Newsie.)

Another round of doubles was played last night, and while the R-100 is supposed to have passed overhead 2000 feet, all local altitude records were eclipsed when Martin Chenhall collapsed, giving George Hutchinson a five count on the last two ends to nose him out 13-12. There was very little outstanding in the other game, but an incident during the ladies' games this afternoon is worthy of comment. Mrs. Darcy, after playing her last bowl was laying seven shots when her opponent, Mrs. 'Bob' Martin, trailed the kitty and counted seven—a difference of fourteen shots on the one bowl. This is the kind of trick that Mrs. Martin may well show her husband—it is very useful.

All our Toronto rinks were defeated but they can still take in a ball game, which appears to be the usual ending of our quest for Dominion honors. Better luck next year.

If you want the signs of the times keep your eye on J. T. Braund. He is busy shaking his cash box again.

The evening games resulted:

Hutchinson	13	Chenhall	12

Taylor	20	Seymour	11
Clegg	19	E. Coleman	13

Jack Fitzpatrick, our worthy alderman, and Chief Gimblett, after being eliminated from the doubles, tackled a pair of 'weak sisters' for revenge, but again tasted defeat by a 23-16 score. There seems to be no hope for them and they are now in Tommy Donaldson's class.

"Chuck" Klein hit two in the second game of a doubleheader and held his loss to one point as he went to the plate eight official times. Al Simmons continued a point behind him, also dropping one as he hit once in four.

Two Tourist Catch Forty-Eight Bass

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MARMORA, August 20. — Enthusiastic over a two weeks' vacation spent here, four Niagara Falls, N.Y., visitors returned home yesterday with 48 bass caught in local waters. The smallest of the fish tipped the scales at four pounds while the others ranged from four to six pounds.

The visitors, Messrs. Otto Pritchard, Erwin C. Dale, Patrick Connor and Tony McDonald, stayed at the Royal Hotel. The proprietor of the hotel, Mr. Potts, states that the tourist business this season has been extremely good, and he expects another large party of fishermen this week-end.

TWO MATCHES WON BY BETTY NUTHALL

English Girl Advances in Singles and Doubles at Forest Hills.

FOREST HILLS, N.Y., Aug 20.—(U.P.)—Steady advance on the part of Betty Nuthall and the California calvacade featured second round play in the National Women's Tennis singles championship here yesterday.

The pretty and capable English girl brushed aside Mrs. A. J. Lamme, Jr., of New York, in straight sets to enter the third round and strengthen the belief that she is the one the field must beat for the title.

The California calvacade, four of whom are seeded, continued their merry way with the loss of but two members. The elimiantion of one of these, Marjorie Gladman of Santa Monica, provided the big surprise of the day.

Though unseeded, Miss Gladman won the Eastern Grass Court title on Sunday and was conceded a place in the quarter-finals, at least, but Mrs. J. D. Corbierre of Boston, playing amazing tennis, eliminated her in three hard sets.

TORONTO RINKS MEET TO-DAY IN CUP FINAL

J. A. Raymond's Rusholme Four Will Meet Granite Quartet Skipped By A. P. Ross.

OTHER EVENTS ADVANCE

Local and District Rinks Do Not Fare Well in Lawn Bowling Competitions.

TORONTO, Aug. 20—Two Toronto rinks, one from the Rusholme Club, skipped by J. A. Raymond, and the other from the Granites, skipped by A. P. Ross, emerged yesterday afternoon successfully from the semi-finals of the D.L.B.A.'s Dominion gold cup event, and will meet this afternoon in the final of that competition. They are the only unbeaten rinks out of the many strong rinks that started in the big tournament on Monday morning.

The Rusholme four had to stage a great rally in their semi-final match against J. P. Charlebois' Oakwood four, in order to get the decision. At the end of the twelfth end, the Oakwood rink was leading by six shots, and appeared to have the victory safely away. But that six-shot margin was wiped out on the next two ends by the Rusholme quartet and the final end decided it, the Raymond rink scoring the needed point. It was a painful defeat for the Charlebois' ronk, which had been mowing down all opposition up to that time.

In the other semi-final match, the Granite rink defeated a St. Matthew's Club four by 13 to 8. Granites were in front after the third end and never relinquished their lead.

Frank Wilson's London Thistle rink, which captured the gold cup last season, were eliminated yesterday in the third round by M. E. Gowland's Milton rink. An early lead obtained by Milton could not be overcome, although the Londoners put on a strong finish. The Wilson rink was also eliminated in the Ontario Cup and Toronto Cup events later in the day.

The games yesterday provided the usual number of upsets, formidable rinks going down before rinks that were not considered as strong. Many of the out-of-town rinks were eliminated, although a number still remain in the Ontario and Toronto Cup events, which will advance to the semi-finals and final round today.

The final in the Dominion Trophy event will be played this afternoon at the Victoria Club, starting at 2.30 o'clock. The finals in the other two cup events are expected to get under way a little later in the afternoon.

Play commences to-day in the primary doubles competition and will continue to-morrow, when the singles competition will also be held.

The local rinks did not fare well in the annual competitions, losing out in preliminary or first rounds of various events. The results in part follows:—

Teddy McDowell Host at Social Gathering in Honor of Sixth Ansiversary.

MILLBROOK, Aug. 20. (Examiner Correspondence)—Master Teddy McDowell, only son of Mr. and Mrs. M. McDowell, celebrated his sixth birthday on Friday, August 15, when some twenty-four guests, including both children and mothers, were entertained at a lawn party at the home of the young host's parents.

The large grounds, with their lovely shade trees, presented a very attractive appearance as games of various kinds were enjoyed throughout the afternoon and early evening, the warm sunshine, the dainty coloring of the dresses worn by the little girls, and the light blouses and sailor suits of the boys, giving the impression of a flower garden as the young folks flitted about in lively exercise.

Several of the mothers assisted Mrs. McDowell, and her daughters, Misses Dorothy, Madeline, Marjorie and Beatrice, in the entertainment of the little guests, and the birthday tea was served on the lawn, the handsome birthday-cake, with its six lighted candles, proving a center of excited interest.

The young host had the honor of blowing out the candles before the cake was cut, interest again running high as service was made the little guests being much concerned as to who would be fortunate enough to find the hidden treasure of nickel, button, etc., in his or her slice.

The opening of the birthday parcels was another feature of peculiar pleasure not only to the recipient, but also to his several guests beside.

Among the guests were: Esther and Gordon Might, David and Evans Hatherly, Marie and Hope Douglas, Donald Edmunds, Teddy and Conrad Stinson, Mary Brentin, Roy and Jessie Dawson, Jackie Kidd, Kathleen Smith, Beatrice, Nan and David Fallis, Mrs. J. H. Might, Mrs. T. Douglas, Mrs. F. A. Kidd, Mrs. P. Stinson, Mrs. Lavergne Fallis, Mrs. L. W. Smith, Mrs. H. Ross Edmunds, Mrs. B. B. Dawson, and Mrs. Irwin Hatherly.

Tidbits, Interesting and Humorous CAMPBELLFORD

Encores gallore greeted the program rendered by the band of the Northumberland Regiment as it played to the citizens of the town on Monday evening. Many cars lined the streets round the Armouries to listen to Campbellford's own musicians under the direction of Bandmaster W. Pearson.

Work on the Queen Street landing stage is now complete, and with the addition of the new steps the appearance of the water front at this point has been considerably improved.

We are sorry to hear that Mrs. G. C. Bromley, who met with an accident some time ago, is still on the sick list. She is confined to her bed.

Prince Edward Island's Cabinet Representative Left Out in Cold?

In the selection of Hon. J. A. Macdonald, Conservative member for Kings as minister without portfolio, Prince Edward Island felt as though they had been left out in the cold, according to recent dispatch from Charlottetown. The pre-polling statement of the Hon. R. B. Bennett, that each province was to be represented in the cabinet was taken to mean with and not without portfolio. Mr. Macdonald has had a long and great parliamentary experience and reproduced ABOVE show (1) interesting camera study of Hon. J. A. Macdonald, minister without portfolio. (2) view of his lovely home in Kings, P.E.I., and (3) Mrs. Macdonald, his charming wife.

Wounded Seamstress Able To Point Out Bandit

WINNIPEG, Man., Aug. 20. (C.P.)—Miss Mary McCarthy 50-year-old seamstress shot in a drug store hold-up six weeks ago, yesterday in court pointed to Gavin Hamilton as the man who wounded her. From the wheelchair in which she was rolled in the court room, she whispered "I think he is the man. Of course, it happened some time ago".

With Armand Viau and George B. Forsythe, Hamilton was committed for trial at the conclusion of the preliminary hearing. All three, alleged to have participated in the hold-up in which Miss McCarthy was shot, are charged with attempted murder and robbery.

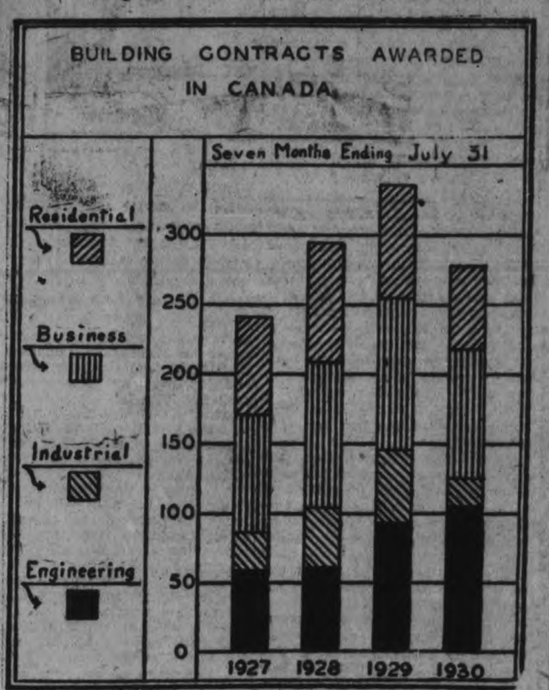
Forestry Official Downcast as Rais Miss Harassed Areas.

SIX TOWNSHIPS SWEPT.

PRINCE ALBERT, Sask., Aug. 20.—(CP)—Raging winds have undone the tireless toil of firefighters in Northern Saskatchewan, according to radio reports received here. Forestry men were downcast at the news that heavy rains failed to touch more than scattered patches of fire harassed areas. Three serious outbreaks are burning, as well as a dozen minor blazes.

The most extensive blaze is 30 miles east of Lac la Ronge, at Nunn Lake, where between five and six townships of charred jackpine and poplar raise their blackened forms

Building Contracts For First Seven Months



Building contracts awarded in Canada in the first seven months of 1930 show a substantial reduction from figures for the corresponding months of 1929, but compare favorably with 1928 and are above the total for a similar period of 1927. Total awards to the end of July are estimated at $278,000,400 contrasted with $336,062,400 in 1929; $294,616,900 in 1928 and $242,205,000 in 1927. Classified by groups residential represented $85,209,800; business, $96,753,600; industrial, $20,758,100 and engineering $105,278,900 of the 1930 total to date. These figures compare with $80,991,300, $118,942,400, $41,913,100 and $94,216,600 in the corresponding months of the preceding year. Of all groups, the engineering is the only one to show improvement in 1930 over 1929. Large public works are being undertaken this year to help relieve the unemployment situation. Private corporations and the federal and provincial governments are going ahead with projects that will lend employment to thousands of people and thus take up part of the slack as a result of the business recession.

MADOC HIGHWAY IN GOOD SHAPE

Contract Let to Raynor Construction Company of Toronto For $20,000.

AMESITE SURFACE.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MADOC, August 20. — With the recent completion of the paving operations, Madoc now boasts of the finest paved thoroughfares of any town of a similar size in this section of Ontario, was in effect the observation made by Reeve W. Whytock, in conversation with The Examiner.

The contract was let to the Raynor Construction Company of Toronto in the middle of July for approximately $20,000. The surface, known as Amesite paving, extends for a mile from the southern limits of the town to the eastern limits.

A portion of the cost is being borne by the county along with the town.

The Town Street Committee under Chairman W. J. Hill, also authorized the construction of new sidewalks at a cost of $5000. This work, now under way, will probably be completed by September 1st.

TARZAN OF THE APES No. 41 (Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.) By Edgar Rice Burroughs

Within the cabin, lights were burning. Clayton has found an unopened tin of oil and lamps, still usable. Tarzan peered within. He saw his cabin divided into two rooms, partitioned by boughs and sailcloth. The men were reading and talking. He sought the other window. There was the girl.

How beautiful her features—how delicate her snowy skin! She was writing at Tarzan's own table. Upon a pile of grasses lay the negress asleep. For an hour Tarzan feasted his eyes upon her as she wrote. How he longed to speak to her. At length she arose, leaving her manuscript.

She went to the bed, loosened her soft mass of golden hair. Below her waist it tumbled. Tarzan was spellbound! Then she extinguished the lamp and all within was darkness. Still Tarzan watched. Creeping close, he waited, listening. At last she was asleep. Cautiously he intruded his arm within the cabin.

Carefully he felt upon the desk. At last he grasped the manuscript Jane had been writing. Cautiously he withdrew it. Tarzan folded the precious sheets into a small parcel, tucking them into his arrow and quiver. Then he melted away into the jungle as softly and as noiselessly as a shadow.

Tarzan awoke early. His first thought was of that writing, hidden in his quiver. How he hoped he could read what the beautiful girl had written. Tarzan suffered a bitter disappointment, baffled by the strange writing. Long he pored over it. Finally he recognized the letters. His heart leaped for joy.

When the latter was finally brought to fresh air, it was too late to save his life.

CLIFFMUIR FARM HAS BIG FLOCK OF WHITE LEGHORNS

In Five Years Finest Flock of Layers in District Built Up.

MODERN EQUIPMENT.

Special City Delivery Being Organized By Cliff Carruthers.

Five years ago a modest poultry farm was begun close to this city by a young Peterborough man who was determined to achieve the production of the highest grade of eggs attainable, through the use of modern poultry science. He imported a few of the best English leghorns that could be secured and, using them as a nucleus steadily built up a flock. The enterprise is now one of the largest of its kind in this section of Ontario.

The farm is known as "Cliffmuir" and is situated a short distance from the city on the Port Hope highway. The owner and operator is Clifford Carruthers.

More than four acres in extent, the farm is equipped with four poultry buildings of which the main laying house is 160 feet in length. Also three "colony" houses which provide accommodation for 400 birds.

Modern Equipment

The most modern hatching and brooding equipment available is used. Two thousand four hundred and forty eggs at a time can be handled by the electrically operated incubator. Hatching eggs are taken to the incubator immediately after they have been laid and are placed in tiers of egg racks in the various compartments of the machine. For twenty-one days the eggs are kept at a temperature which is not allowed to vary more than a fraction of a degree from 103 degrees fahrenheit. During this time, the eggs are turned regularly.

As the chicks emerge from the eggs they are attracted to the light which comes through glass windows in the incubator and they are allowed to fall down into a tray below so that they won't disturb the other eggs.

The chicks are put in one of two battery brooders, each of which has a capacity for 1,000 chicks. They remain in the brooders for eight weeks, heat being kept at a constant temperature by electric units also. The machines are designed to facilitate feeding and watering of the "babies". Mr. Carruthers explained that the loss of chicks in the early weeks of their lives is cut to a minimum by use of the brooders.

Big Birds and Large Eggs

Mr. Carruthers constantly strives for the breeding of big birds and consequently the production of large eggs. The farm is essentially an egg-producing enterprise although a few day-old chicks and pullets are sold.

Each hen is required to prove itself in regard to its egg-laying potentialities before it becomes a full-fledged member of the army of busy layers on the farm. By the use of "trap nests" the egg production of each young hen is ascertained and a record kept. No non-producers are allowed to consume the feed which would support a more profitable bird.

The layers are fed principally egg mash. It is a manufactured feed made up of meat scraps, fish meal, salt, fine ground oatmeal, molasses, cod liver oil, alfalfa meal, hominy feed, bran and calcium carbonate, scientifically prepared to increase the production and size of eggs. Scratch grains, mixtures of cracked corn, buck wheat, sun flower seeds and wheat, are fed in lesser quantities.

Local Service

Until recently, Mr. Carruthers shipped his entire output to larger cities but he has now commenced a local service of fresh eggs, utilizing a motorcycle delivery for fast and prompt service.

During the past year he has also been breeding white king pigeons somewhat experimentally and testing the commercial possibilities of this branch of poultry breeding. Finding the demand for squabs from hotels in larger cities of the Dominion great enough he has now increased his flock of pigeons to seventy-two pairs. He imported the birds from which he bred his flock, from the Southern states.

Jabs and Jottings as Picked Up by an Examiner Reporter

SOME SPECULATION

Percy A. Martin of this city never caught a game fish before in his life until this morning when he cast in his line at Bensfort Bridge on the Otonabee at 8:30 o'clock and pulled out a fish that appears to be a small-mouthed black bass, weighing 4 pounds and 10 ounces. When he proudly brought his catch to The Examiner this afternoon it was measured and found to be 24 inches in length.

Divers opinions with regard to the exact species of the fish were expressed by a number of expert anglers who viewed it. It had all the markings of a small-mouth black bass but several declared it to be too long for that species in comparison with its girth which was 12½ inches. It was somewhat broader across the back than the usual bass of the small-mouth variety.

Bill Haire and his son of London, ardent anglers, were in the boat when the beauty was hooked.

ANOTHER FISH.

The fishing season ages apace, but stories of big catches and sensational battles still come. The latest Izaak Walton triumph is on exhibition at Robertson's Barber Shop—which is fast gaining recognition as Peterborough's fish story headquarters. The fish is a lunge tipping the scales at 20½ pounds and measuring 44 inches from tip to tail. The fisherman was J. Flashner, the scene of operation, Oak Orchard Lodge, and the time, yesterday.

It is announced that the new Fall and Winter Mail Order Catalogue is now off the press and may be obtained at the new quarters. New styles and moderatae prices are featured, officials claim.

ELECTION PEPS UP IN BROMLEY

V. C. Redwood, United Empire Party Candidate Will Not Withdraw.

MANY NOTED SPEAKERS.

LONDON, Eng., Aug. 20 (C.P. Cable). — Things are beginning to warm up in the Bromley by-election.

At first, it was suggested that the intervention of V. C. Redwood, the United Empire Party candidate supported by Lord Rothermere's newspapers, were merely a preliminary skirmish and that he would withdraw before the nominations. But now all the signs indicate that Mr. Redwood and his supporters mean serious business. The label, "political gate crasher," attached to the United Empire Party man by E. A. Campbell, Conservative candidate, has not increased the chances of a Redwood withdrawal.

A number of Cabinet Ministers including the Rt. Hon. William Graham, President of the Board of Trade, and the Rt. Hon. George Lansbury, First Commissioner of Works, will speak on behalf of the Labor candidate. Sir Herbert Samuel, Ramsay Muir and Miss Megan Lloyd George are among the prominent Liberals who have promised to interrupt their summer holidays to help the Liberal candidate.

HOUSEHOLDER MAIL IS BITTERLY SCORED

Letter Carriers Only Favor Delivery When Complete Address is Printed.

CALGARY, Alta., Aug. 20. (C.P.)—Householder mail deliveries came under fire at the convention of the Federated Association of Letter Carriers here yesterday. Delegates decided to disapprove of such deliveries altogether. Householder mail is a system of advertising by which circulars addressed only to "householder" are given to postmen to deliver from house to house on their routes.

The convention went on record as favoring deliveries of such matter only when complete addresses, including name, street and number are affixed.

American magazines received particular attention. The practice of sending these magazines into Canada by freight and then paying postage in Canada for delivery, was censured and a resolution was passed requesting that they be charged postal rates from office of origin. It was also suggested that postage be sufficient to prevent such magazines being sold cheaper through mail than through stores in Canada.

EDUCATIONAL GROWTH FROM PIONEER TO THE PRESENT DAY

Trent River Correspondent Tells of Progress in Northumberland and Durham Counties.

INTERESTING STORY.

Interesting sidelights on the growth of education from the days of early settlers of Northumberland and Durham Counties to the present day, are given in the following historical sketches compiled by Bessie G. French, The Examiner correspondent at Trent River:—

The majority of early settlers possessed but very limited education. There was always a small number whose education was even excellent; but the great bulk of the early pioneers had not enjoyed opportunities for a common education. The state of society for many years precluded the teaching of youth. The chances for learning had been exceedingly slender; and what with the early struggles for existence, and to hew out a home in the forest, there was not the time even were there the inclination to acquire an education. Among many of the old sturdy farmers, who themselves had no learning, and who had got along without much, if any, and had no books to read, there obtained a belief that it was not only unnecessary, but was likely to have a bad effect upon their sons, disqualifying them for the plain duties of husbandry.

If one could read, sign his name and cast interest, it was looked upon as quite sufficient for a farmer. But gradually there sprang up an increased desire to acquire an education and a willingness to supply the means therefor. But what a change has time brought about! From the precariousness of securing an education then to the perfectability of our present school system! In the County of Durham there were in 1876, 108 school sections; 62 brick, 1 stone, 1 concrete, 35 frame and two log school-houses. The sum paid for teachers' salaries amounted to $35,183. The value of school buildings was set down at $94,461. Prizes to the value of $960 were given in connection with the competitive examination. There were 46 associations, one for the East and one for the West riding of Durham, and a teachers' library in connection with the former. In Northumberland there were 123 schools, and the figures for salaries, etc., exceeded those for Durham by a small amount. And the general character of the schools, their appointments, and the qualifications and efficiency of the teachers were yearly improving and on the increase.

AUSSIES SCORE 695 RUNS

and got an occasional good stroke to leg. W. A. Oldfield countered a number of runs on good drives and played in rally sound fashion; he was death to anything short. Wyatt rang all the changes possible with his bowlers and eventually Oldfield fell when he had made 34 to a particularly fine catch by Larwood at mid-on off Peebles' bowling. Seven wickets were down for 670.

Hornicbrook was snapped up at the wicket when he had scored seven, leaving Fairfax 53 not out.

A material contributor to the Australian score were the extras, totalling 44, most of them secured during Duckworths lapses from form yesterday.

Englands second innings was opened by Jack Hobbs and Herbert Sutcliffe, when Hobbs came out for what was expected to be his last innings in a test match against Australia, the Antipodean players gathered round him and took off their caps while they gave three cheers for the veteran. Hobbs gracefully acknowledged the tribute by raising his hat. Hobbs singled off Wall.

Sutcliffe at six was missed by Oldfield, the Australian wicket keeper off Wall. Hobbs' leg boundarier off Wall but in his next over he had cruel luck when he chopped a raiser from Fairfax into his wicket. He retired with a crest fallen look and the crowd sat stufined.

Only seventeen runs had been scored, Whysall started off with a brace of twos on the legside. Fifteen minutes from time Whysal's appeal against the light was upheld and stumps were drawn. Sutcliffe scored eight and Whysall six and the innings total was 24.

670 Runs for Nine.

While C. Grimmett stonealled Fairfax picked up a number of singles. The Australian bowler, however, could not cope with the English bowling and went out leg before wicket to Peebles. Fairfax had scored 46 at the time and the Australian total was 664.

I. Wall also stepped in front of a straight from Peebles and the ninth wicket fell without any addition to the score.

Pitch in Good Shape.

LONDON, August 20. — (C.P.) — A batsman's wicket was ready for Don Bradman and A. Jackson, when the cricket test match between England and Australia, was resumed at the Oval to-day. The rain which fell yesterday benefitted the pitch which on the fourth day of the match was seen to be in excellent condition.

Bradman was 130 and Jackson 43. The Australian total was 403 for three wickets. Bradman had a narrow half of the first ball he received from Wally Hammond after I. A. R. Peebles had bowled a maiden. It had the effect of causing him to play carefully. England's first innings' total of 405 was passed when Jackson hit a single off Peebles to point.

Play was suspended on account of a shower when the Australian total stood at 426, but was quickly resumed. M. Tate came on and bowled with something like his old fire. Bradman was not able to do anything with him for a while. M. Leyland, who relieved Hammond, also had Jackson in difficulties. Mastery of the bowling came to the batsmen after a while, and the score rose. Jackson on one mighty hit, got Leyland away for four. All run out.

Bradman then was morally bowled by Tate, the ball just shaving the stump. Runs continued to come steadily, the batsmen being helped by patchy fielding. H. Larwood was put on to bowl at 458 but his offerings had no sting.

A smart pick up by Leyland might have resulted in one of the batsmen being run out, but they rushed back madly to safety from midwicket. Bradman, when he hit to Tate to the boundary, sent up the 200 for the partnership. The ball began to bump badly and Larwood hit Bradman on the chest, while Hammond struck Jackson on the elbow.

A great burst of cheering greeted Bradmen whe he hit his two hundredth run. He had been at the wicket six hours.

The partnership came to an end when Jackson skied a ball off Wyatt to Sutcliffe. Jackson scored 73, he batted defensively for four hours and forty five minutes. His display was not particularly bright and he was frequently in trouble with the slow bowlers. He hit eight fours.

Stanley McCabe got off the mark quickly, hitting Wyatt's long hops confidently. Bradman who was revealing his best form, was getting runs off almost every ball. No changes in the bowling troubled him. He hit 45 in the twenty five minutes before lunch. At the interval his personal score stood at 228 and McCabe's at 18.

FRIEND OF WHITE DOES NOT BELIEVE

eron, who came to Toronto last fall to be married.

Blackadded also related a story concerning a conversation he had had with Police Chief Moon, in which he alleges the Chief told him that on the morning of August 13th, while the body was being recovered from the river, a stranger walked over the bridge. He showed little or no interest in the recovery of the body and lay down under a tree some distance away. He later proceeded in the direction of Belleville. The Chief had told Blackadded, "I looked the man over and satisfied myself that he had no connection with the affair."

Murney Robinson, asked if he thought it possible that White had been fishing from the bridge, said, "No. White would not go fishing on Sunday. He was the most moral young man I ever knew."

Corneyes Never Called

No evidence was forthcoming at the inquest from Stanley Corneyes, fourteen-year-old boy, who stated to the press that he saw White between 7.30 and 9 o'clock on the evening of Sunday, August 10th, walking in the park unaccompanied. Neither was Thomas Breen called, who also told the press he hired a boat to three strangers on Monday, August 11th. The boat had been hired out for one hour, but went out at 1.30 and came back at 3.20; it had been badly used, was Breen's exclamation.

Evidence from Mrs. Grace Baldwin of Arthur street, Tweed, was also lacking. Mrs. Baldwin stated to The Examiner on Saturday morning last, that on Monday, August 11th, between the hours of nine and ten p.m. she heard sounds of men quarreling on the street. In the midst of the altercation, she declares she heard one of the men say, "I would forgy miles to get around it."

At this juncture, according to Mrs. Baldwin, one of the men "ripped out an awful oath."

It had not been ascertained up to a late hour, whether or not further action is being taken by the authorities.

R. PERRI OFFERS $5,000 REWARD

Police Discover Mrs. Perri Was in Toronto Same Day She Bought Shells.

NO FURTHER CLUES.

HAMILTON, Ont., August 20 (C.P.). — Police investigators have learned Mrs. Rocco Perri was in Toronto on Friday, August 8, the day she purchased in Hamilton shotgun shells, similar to those used by her assassinators. The significance of Mrs. Perri's visit to Toronto was not divulged, but police stated she had been there and she had purchased shells in Hamilton the same day.

Police were unable to report any further clues to the identity of the assailants who shot down Mrs. Perri as she emerged from the garage with her husband. Perri is reported by his physician to be "a very sick man." He has offered a reward of $5,000 for the apprehension of the murderer or murderers.

Dominion Willing to Retrace Steps if Canadian Government Will Reciprocate.

(Canadian Press Cable, via Reuters.)

Wellington, New Zealand, August 21. — The Government of the Dominion of New Zealand has decided to place Canadian motor vehicles and accessories on the general tariff list, thus depriving them of the preference now accorded, announced the Right Hon. G. W. Forbes Prime Minister, in the House of Representatives to-day.

Reviews Situation.

The Prime Minister gave a lengthy review of the position of trade between Canada and New Zealand and told of the Government's negotiations to conclude a direct trade treaty with Canada. Mr. Forbes added the new Canadian administration had informed the New Zealand Government it could not extend the Australian trade treaty rates to New Zealand products beyond the month of October, but that Canada was willing to negotiate a direct trade agreement

The New Zealand Government, said Mr. Forbes, was willing, pending the completion of a direct agreement, to place Canadian motor cars on the British preferential tariff once more providing Canada would reciprocate in a substantial manner.

Only Five Paying General Rate.

In an interview later to-day the Premier pointed out that of the 27 makes of American cars on the New Zealand market, only five are paying the rate of duty charged on American cars, the remainder being admitted under the preference, as they were assembled in Canada.

Mr. Forbes yesterday received a delegation representing British motor manufacturers. His visitors claimed the preference given to cars assembled in Canada was working out unfairly against Britain. The deputation showed almost as many Canadian as American cars were imported last year, $6,480,000 having been spent on American and $6,240,000 on Canadian cars.

The Prime Minister assured the deputation of his sympathy then, and to-day's announcement was the sequel.

No Comment at Ottawa

OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 21 (C.P.) — No official comment is available to-day on the announced decision of New Zealand to place Canadian motor vehicles and accessories on the general tariff list. The matter, it is understood, however, will shortly receive the consideration of the Government.

Canada's automobile trade with New Zealand is fairly extensive, and has been growing. The exports of Canadian cars to New Zealand during the fiscal year ended March 31 last reached a total of 10,349 with a valuation of $5,506,791. During the same period, parts to the value of $441,558 went from Canada to New Zealand. The value of automobiles exported by Canada to New Zealand during the preceding fiscal year was $4,787,504 and parts, $368,473.

With a view to ascertaining just what general tariff it is proposed to apply to Canada, the Department of Trade and Commerce is now com-

13-Year-Old Boy Lands Large Muskie

Clayton Revoir, a 13-year-old Trent River lad, this morning made a bid for victory in The Examiner's maskinonge contest on the strength of a husky muskie weighing 22 pounds 8 ounces, which he landed at Trent River after a half-hour battle early this week. The large specimen was hooked with a light rod and line. It was 50 inches in length and measured 18 inches around the girth.

Another formidable entry was made on behalf of Mrs. Arthur Mitchell of this city who last night pulled out a big maskinonge on the Otonabee between Second Bridge and Campbelltown. When brought into The Examiner this morning the specimen was found to weigh 16 pounds, and measured 40 inches in length.

YOUTH FEARING SHOT MISTRESS ENDS OWN LIFE

Eighteen Year Old Farm Hand Was Practising Shooting With Rifle.

WOMAN WILL LIVE.

Wife of Employer Accidentally Walks Past Where Youth Was Shooting.

GALT, Ont., August 21 (C. P.). — Thomas Oldman, 18-year-old farm hand, committed suicide by shooting himself last night when he feared he had killed Mrs. David Main, aged 25, wife of his employer, on their farm near Sheffield, a few miles from here. Oldman died in the Galt Hospital a few hours after the shooting. Mrs. Main has a bullet wound in her head, but her condition is not considered serious.

Practicing Shooting

Oldman was practicing shooting at a tin can with a .22 calibre rifle and a reconstruction of the affair leads to the belief his hitting Mrs. Main was entirely accidental. It appears Oldman had made the statement to people on the farm that if he ever shot any person or animal he would shoot himself. Mrs. Main suddenly walked past when Oldman was firing and received the bullet in her head.

She dropped partly stunned and the boy immediately turned the gun on himself.

Mrs. Main recovered sufficiently to return to the house to telephone for a doctor. Her husband on driving into the yard from Sheffield a minute or two later found the boy unconscious on the floor of the stable. Both victims were rushed to the Galt hospital where Mrs. Main was given treatment which enabled her to return home but death ensued in the case of Oldman.

Coroner Radford of this city has ordered an inquest.

GUELPH, Ont., Aug. 21. (By The Canadian Press)—Thomas Oldham, Vimy Ridge Farm boy who shot himself after wounding Mrs. David Main at Sheffield, Ont., last night, came to Vimy Ridge about a year ago and was placed on the Mains' farm shortly afterwards.

Officials of the Vimy Ridge establishment said to-day that Mr. Main had informed them a week ago the boy was a good worker and asked that he be transferred, it was said.

W. Sorel, superintedent of Vimy Ridge, has left for Sheffield to investigate.

FRED IMMING IS BAILED FOR TRIAL

Apepars For Preliminary Hearing on Charge of Arson Following Fire.

BAIL SET AT $8,000.

Frederick Imming, proprietor of the Auto, Electric and Radio Repair Shop at 184 Charlotte street was bailed for trial by Magistrate Langley in Police Court this morning, when he appeared for preliminary hearing on a charge of arson. Bail was set at $8,000.

Opening the case for the Crown yesterday afternoon, Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry, K.C., called Alexander Weddell, member of the firm of Hill, Weddell and Hill, who stated he issued a policy insuring the premises against fire on July 3rd, 1930. The policy was delivered on July 7th and covered stock up to $1,000 and machinery up to $1,000.

B. E. Park, accused's counsel—"Was the insurance solicited by your agent?"

In reply witness stated his firm became aware that Imming desired to place further insurance on the premises, through information given to his firm by a Mr. Burger of Toronto. An agent was then sent to sell insurance to Imming.

Thomas Doughty, insurance agent, testified that he had an insurance transaction with Imming sometime in August 1929, when he sold him a policy for $500.

Mr. Park—"You told the court you asked Imming what insurance he had, if any. You solicited the policy."

Witness—"Yes."

112,940 FOUND UNEMPLOYED IN RECENT SURVEY

Eighty-four Centres in Canada Have Reported to Minister of Labor.

CONSERVATIVE ESTIMATE.

Employment Service Council of Canada Opens Sessions in Ottawa.

OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 21.—(By the Canadian Press.) — In 84 centres which has replied to the query of Hon. G. D. Robertson, Minister of Labor on unemployment figures there are 112,940 people out of work in Canada and it is estimated this number will increase to 159,000 during the winter. Mr. Robertson gave these figures to the Employment Service Council of Canada to-day at the opening of the annual meeting.

The figures, he pointed out, did not include 14 or 15 centres which had not reported or the number who were out of work in numerous small centres throughout the country, and in rural areas.

Senator Robertson said he considered the figures received a conservative estimate. It was not unreasonable to say, he added, that there were now 200,000 people out of work in Canada. Figures compiled on August 15, he stated, showed that out of 206,597 union men in Canada 26,796 or 10.9 per cent. were out of work.

No Paternal Policy.

The Government of Canada does not propose to adopt paternalism as a policy in dealing with unemployment but it does propose to help the people to help themselves, Senator Robertson declared.

"I do not for one moment suggest," he said, "that the present unemployment is due to any governmental or lack of governmental activity. Unemployment is not a purely Canadian problem. It is world wide, but it is not the business of the government of Canada to look after the world as a whole. It seems to me the problem first to be faced is for the government to look after the people of Canada and assist them to look after themselves.

"A proposal has just been made to me that if the federal grant to technical education were restored it would be a great boon to the unemployed. I do not know what the government will do because the matter has not been considered. But I do know it would at least enable the unemployed man to improve his skill during the time he is out of work.

TO SPEND $500,000.

QUEBEC, August 21. (C.P.) — An additional $500,000 will be spent by the Department of Highways immediately as an unemployment relief measure, it was announced, following a meeting of the Provincial Cabinet.

Bank Robber Gets $7,500 in Hold-Up

CALGARY, Alta., Aug. 21 (C.P.)—Police, who since Sunday have been seeking to solve the murder of a local taxi driver, robbed and fatally shot on a rural highway, are now seeking a bank robber who yesterday escaped from the Elbow Park branch of the Bank of Montreal with $7,500.

The description of the bank robber, supplied by H. H. W. Beverstien, the teller, tallies with that of the taxi-driver's slayer, according to police officials. Four men participated in the taxi-robbery, but the gunman, who sat in the front seat with the driver, is believed to be the bank bandit.

4,000 ARE SLAIN BY NATIONALISTS

Crushing Defeat is Given Red Forces in Chinese Battle.

2,000 RIFLES CAPTURED.

HANKOW, China Aug. 21.—(CP)— The slaughter of 4,000 Communists by provincial troops in western Kiangsi province and the capture of 2,000 red rifles there were reported today in Chinese press dispatches.

This apparently is the first crushing defeat administered to the Red marauders who have been murdering, looting and burning throughout the Yangtze valley for several weeks.

News of the provincial victory followed closely word of the burning of Wuseh, Hupeh province, by Communists who looted the city of 6,000 population and ransacked the countryside. Wusueh is an important Yangtse River port 25 miles above Kiukiang Kiangsi.

Fearing for their lives, inhabitants of Wusueh abandoned their property virtually without protest and fled, many going to Kiukiang, where the foreign gunboats were anchored.

Communist armies late last month sacked and destroyed large sections of Changsha, Hunan Province capital. Later they threatened Hankow, Wuchang, and Hanyang, sister cities 600 miles were frightened away by foreign warships which were rushed to Hankow by American, British, and Japanese Governments.

Since then the Communists have ravaged smaller places, avoiding the cities where the Nationalist Government has concentrated small bodies of troops withdrawn from Honan and Shantung Province fronts, where the Government is seeking to stem the northern alliance rebellion.

MADOC MINISTER AND FARMER ARE DROWNED IN LAKE

Boat is Swamped 200 Yards From the Shore of Dickey's Lake, Hastings County.

Six Are Saved.

Craft Said to Have Been Overloaded and Swamped in Small Gale.

BELLEVILLE, Ont., Aug. 21 (C.P.) —Rev. Fred. Mayhew, Pastor of the Standard Church at Madoc village, and Sam Osborne, a farmer of Eldorado, Hastings County, were drowned when the motor boat in which they were passengers was swamped two hundred yards from the shore of Dickey's Lake, at Gilmour, last night. Six other occupants of the boat narrowly escaped the same fate, after clinging to the craft for over half an hour. They were finally rescued by Harry Carter, of Rochester, N.Y. Mrs. Mayhew and her two children and Mrs. Osborne and a small daughter are suffering from exhaustion and shock, but will recover. William Thompson, operator of the boat, is suffering no ill effects to-day. Dickey's Lake is 45 miles north of Belleville and is in a sparsely populated district.

The party were returning from a berrying trip and apparently the strain was too great for the craft, and it capsized in a miniature gale. Mayhew and Osborne dove overboard and disappeared and their bodies have not yet been recovered. Both men are well-known in North Hastings.

Had it not been for timely presence of mind of Mr. Thompson, all would have met the same fate, as none could swim. He directed them in clinging to the boat. Dr. Nickle, of Eldorado, has ordered an inquest into the double tragedy, which will be opened as soon as the bodies have been recovered.

Provincial Constable Morris of Bancroft is directing the search.

Six Persons Lost When Heavy Gale Wrecks Islander

Life-saving Crew is Able to Approach Vessel Which Goes Down Off Coast of Great Britain in Heavy Gale Which Swept All English Ports.

LIFE LINE WAS SHOT TO YACHT BUT APPARENTLY NOBODY ON BOARD WAS ABLE TO GRASP IT.

One Woman is Believed to be Amongst Those Who Lost Their Lives—One Sailor Was Seen Attempting to Swim to Shore But Seas Were Too Heavy.

FOWEY, Cornwall, England, August 21 (C.P.). — Six persons, including one woman, lost their lives when the yacht Islander, of the Royal Yacht Squadron, was swept ashore on the rocks of Lantvit during a heavy gale. There were no known survivors.

The yacht, which was owned by Lieutenant-Colonel John N. Diggle, had been taking part in regattas of the Royal Yacht Squadron along the south coast.

While identity of the victims was not revealed in first despatches, it was reported that the owner was among those lost when the yacht was wrecked.

Signals were received here in the night that the vessel was in distress and a lifeboat went out from Fowey.

The life-saving crew was unable to approach the vessel, however, and a lifeline was shot over the yacht.

Apparently nobody on board was able to grasp the line.

Heavy seas subsequently caused the yacht to change her position, making her if anything more inaccessible to the life savers.

Two coastguardsmen bravely descended the face of the overhanging cliff and reported that they distinctly heard the screaming of a woman apparently imprisoned in the cabin.

The first actual sight of human life aboard the yacht was obtained when the coastguards, who were still trying to reach the vessel, saw a man dive off the deck and attempt to swim for the shore.

The savage seas were too much for him, however, throwing him back repeatedly. Eventually the swimmer gave up the struggle, sank, and was seen no more.

The yacht after that became a total wreck. To-day boats from here were searching the sea in the vicinity for any sign of the survivors.

There were at least six persons, and possibly more, aboard the Islander when she broke up.

LONDON, Eng., Aug. 21. (C.P.)— Confirmation that Commodore H. L. King, member of Parliament, was aboard the stricken yacht Islander was obtained by the central office of the Conservative party this afternoon from the Commodore's solicitors. The central office issued the following statement:—

"We have heard from Commodore King's solicitors that he was on on the yacht, Islander. His friends, on the yacht, we understand, were Commander Searle of Berwick on Tweed, A. R. Brailey of Dunmow, Essex, and Captain Glazebrook of Bishop, Stortford. It also believed that one of Commodore King's daughters was on board. Mrs. King at present is on a holiday on the Isle of Wight."

Fowey, near which the yacht Islander went to pieces, is a seaport at the mouth of the river of that name, about 22 miles from Plymouth, and 25 miles from Launceston. Its harbor admits large vessels. It was a place of great importance in the 13th and 14 centuries. The population in 1901 was 2258.

Fowey's harbor in the 14th century was the base of the "Gallants of Fowey," who helped largely in the founding of England's naval greatness.

Lieutenant Colonel John Neston Diggle was one of England's prominent huntsmen and yachting enthusiasts. He was decorated in the world war He was 46 years old. His home was Wentworth, Ratherham.

MYSTERIOUS MISS DOLLAR GOES SHOPPING ON TWIN DOLLAR DAYS

Ten Dollars Will Be Given to the Person Discovering the Elusive Lady as She Visits the Stores

Next Friday and Saturday the merchants of Peterborough are holding their annual Summer Community Dollar Day. Between eighty and ninety of the best business houses in the city are presenting a simultaneous array of bargains, never surpassed and probably never equalled, on any previous event of the kind. The aim of the merchants each Dollar Day is to beat the former record, and the thrifty buying public can confidently expect to see a few dollars do better buying on this occasion than ever before. To add to the interest of the two big days, Mysterious Miss Dollar will mingle with the shopping crowds until some one discovers and captures her, thereby earning the Examiner's special prize of $10 in cash.

The elusive lady will be out on her shopping rounds on Friday between 9 a.m. and 5.30 p.m. and on Saturday, if not captured before, will be out during the same hours, with the addition of an evening trip from 8 to 9 o'clock.

As soon as Miss Dollar is captured a bulletin will be posted in front of The Examiner to end the chase, but the lady is going to be hard to catch.

Miss Dollar will go from store to store and must be captured in one of the Dollar Day stores, not on the street. Also to make her admit that you are right, you must show her this story about her, cut out of The Examiner. Just say, 'You are The Examiner's Mysterious Miss Dollar, and here's the story about you from the paper." That's all—find the lady; she may be shopping right beside you, because, of course, she is just as anxious to profit by the bargains as you are. But be sure and clip this story from The Examiner, and have it in your purse or pocket. It's worth $10 in cash to the one that finds her but all conditions must be complied with.

Take her right along to The Examiner office and claim the reward.

From time to time bulletins will be posted in front of The Examiner telling of some distinguishing feature of dress or outfit Miss Dollar is wearing.

CAR PLUNGES INTO POWER CANAL THREE KNOWN TO HAVE DROWNED

Attempts Were Made During Night to Locate Automobile Which Went Over Embankment at Sault Ste. Marie

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich., Aug. 21.—(CP)—A taxicab driver and his two passengers were drowned here last night when the cab went into the Michigan northern power canal.

The driver of the cab was Richard Flynn but the names of the two passengers have not been learned. Firemen and coastguards were called to attempt to raise the car.

The cab, which witnesses said was going at a normal speed, suddenly swerved and crashed through the railing along the embankment of the canal.

Smith, who was an employee of the Smith Taxicab Company was driving south on Ashmun street at 11 o'clock last night. Near the approach to the bridge he attempted to pass another car. His own car swerved and crashed through the railing. An alarm was hurriedly turned in and an attempt was made to locate the position of the car and its occupants. Attempts to locate the car failed and a diver was sent down with like results. A plane from the Soo, Michigan, base took the air and circled in the vicinity of the fatality in order to ascertain the location of the car, but this also failed. Attempts to locate the car by dragging and a diver were resumed this morning when it was discovered.

The water at the fatality is 22 feet deep and very rapid so that the work of the searchers is handicapped.

BIG PROGRAMME FOR THE 5TH DAY OF EMPIRE GAMES

Sculling Event Was Postponed Last Night on Account of the Heavy Seas.

ALL KINDS OF RACES.

England is Marked as Team to Beat in Lawn Bowling Competitions.

HAMILTON, Ont., August 21 (By W. R. Wheatley, Canadian Press Staff Writer). — Hamilton awoke this morning to face a crowded program of sport. Diversification graced the offering on the fifth day of the British Empire Games, and from breakfast till bedtime the sport-wise chased hither and yon in a vain effort to see it all. Even those who can take their sport or leave it, refused to leave it.

The turn of the sport wheel flashed a kaleidoscopic panorama that ran the gamut from rowing to wrestling, bowling to boxing, yachting to field and track, with a full distance Marathon tossed into the giddy whirl.

Races Postponed.

Postponed from yesterday because of the vagaries of an east wind that whipped row upon row of whitecaps on the surface of Hamilton Bay, the rowing events for both Empire and international supremacy, were scheduled for ten o'clock. In the star role amongst the oarsmen was Bob Pearce, giant sculler from Australia, seeking Empire laurels against four others of the Empire's finest in the singles race over the Henley Course of a mile and 550 yards. Between him and the title stood the famous Joe Wright of Toronto, former holder of the Diamond Sculls crown, Jack Beresford from England, another who has held the coveted championship; Jack Bradley, present English champion, and Jack Durnan of Toronto, the "dark water horse," who may upset all predictions of experts and would-be prognosticators. Fours and eights likewise crowded into front ranking on the rowing calendar, with crews from the United States competing in the international events.

At the same hour the oarsmen from every quarter of the globe take to their shells, the Empire bowling contingents will resume their trundling at the Roselawn Club in scenic Gage Park. Crowding all competitors for honors in all divisions—rinks, doubles and singles—England now is marked as the team to beat.

The Empire marathon over the regulation distance of 26 miles 385 yards, is billed for 4.30 in the afternoon and as the troup of runners swing from their initial turns around the cinder track at the civic stadium out into King street, the second athletic spectacle for field and track championships will get under way.

Nine events are programmed, but upon the slender figure of one competitor will be focussed the interest of thousands of spectators. To many it will be their firt opportunity to see Percy Williams in action. The Vancouver boy whose name was flashed to a surprized sport world two years ago as winner of the 100 and 200 meter Olympic sprints and who has

WOMAN FOUND UNCONSCIOUS IN CELLAR OF HOME

(Examiner Correspondence.)

NORWOOD, August 21. — Mrs. Marjorie Faux, an elderly woman residing on Queen street, was last night still in an unconscious condition as the result of a stroke of apoplexy, which she suffered on Tuesday. Little hope is held for her recovery.

On Tuesday evening when neighbors entered the home and called Mrs. Faux they got no response. Fearing something amiss they commenced a search of the house and found the aged lady unconscious in basement. It is thought she had lain there since eight o'clock that morning. She had been in poor health for some time. Dr. N. F. Sutton is attending.

BOWMANVILLE YOUTH DIES FROM PARALYSIS

BOWMANVILLE, Aug. 21. — Joe Wighman, aged 10, elder son of Major H. G. Wighman of the staff of the Bowmanville Statesman, died yesterday afternoon from infantile paralysis. This is the first death from the disease in this district, although two other deaths have been reported in Oshawa. One new case of the disease was reported yesterday, leaving three suffering in this town.

The Wighman lad was taken sick last Monday, and the serum was used immediately, but failed to act as expected. He steadily got worse, until Wednesday at noon all hope of his life had been despaired. He died about 5 o'clock. Mr. and Mrs. Wighman have one other son who was attacked by spinal meningitis in his youth, and is today a cripple.

While the other three cases here are of a mild nature at present, every precaution is being taken. It is believed that, should there be any further outbreaks, schools, which are due to open on Sept 2, will remain closed.

OSHAWA FALLS BEFORE HOME TOWNERS 3-1

Campbellford Tallies Three Times in Final Period to Overcome Early Lead.

HEAVY CHECKING AFFAIR.

"Buster" Whitton and Fred Ingram Are Slightly Injured in the Battles.

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 21 (By Examiner Staff Correspondent).—With continuous and efficient use of the hickory in an old-time game of lacrosse, Oshawa fell before the Campbellford squad with a 3—1 score in the first game of the play-offs between these teams for the supremacy of the intermediate group of the O.A.L.A., staged at Campbellford Wednesday afternoon.

The game was a hard fight from start to finish and one where hard knocks were given and taken. No advantage was given away by either team, and each side pressed for the nets to pile up the score. Oshawa scored the first goal in the first period, and the game remained with an adverse count of one goal against Campbellford until the last period, when the Millers swept to the fore by netting the ball three times.

"Buster" Whitton for the Campbellford team had the misfortune to collide with H. Luke's stick in the first period, with the result that he sustained a broken nose. But this did not prevent him from playing the game, and when he was doctored up by Dr. A. Haig, he went into the line-up and carried on to the finish.

Severe Checking

Both teams were after their opponents, with the result that checking was severe and play hard. Although rough in many places some pretty combination was staged by both forces. The last period was the fastest and showed signs at times of becoming a scramble, but the bell rang before any such misfortune befell.

Ingram Injured

The gate at this game was the best that has been seen this season in Campbellford. After last Wednesday's exhibition, when Oshawa went to defeat before Campbellford, the local fans looked for a tie at least, and were hilariously happy when the boys finished victors. Oshawa put up a good fight and seemed to try to half the score after the first period, but this they were unable to do when Campbellford staged the comeback in the last innings. Fred Ingram of the Campbellford aggregation had to leave the field after the second period with a sprained shoulder and was out for the rest of the game. In the absence of A. Armstrong, Pete King of Millbrook acted as referee.

Only four penalties were awarded in the game, three against Oshawa and one against Campbellford.

The line-ups were as follows:

TWO DROWNED AS CANOE UPSETS

Cook at Boys' Camp and Youth Lose Lives in Northern Lake.

BODIES RECOVERED.

COBALT, Aug. 21. — Arthur Schultz of Chicago, a cook at Wigwassiti boys camp on the Timagami Lakes, and 6-year-old Edward Lanoye, whose home was in Toronto, were drowned Tuesday afternoon when a small canoe of which they were the occupants, upset a short distance from the shore.

Although assistance was speedily forthcoming both sank before two men who formed a rescue party could reach the victims. The Lanoye boy's parents were employed at the camp, Dr. McCready, living at the camp, and another man, secured a rowboat when the cry for help was raised. As they put out the boy was clinging to the end of the craft, and Schultz, who was 40 years old, was swimming for the shore. The lad released his hold before they could reach him. Schultz sank to his death. Both bodies have been brought here.

LOOP HOLE FOUND IN EXPORT ACT

Vessel Cleared From Windsor For Port Arthur Did Not Carry Government Liquor.

15,000 CASES ON BOARD.

TORONTO, Ont., August 21 (C.P.) —"It seems to be a way of getting around the Export Act,' said Sir Henry Drayton, chairman of the Ontario Liquor Control Board, tonight commenting on the recent release at Windsor of the steamer fedas with 15,000 cases of beer aboard. The vessel left, ostensibly bound for Port Arthur, and it was reported at the time she was carrying the beer for Government liquor stores. This was denied by Sir Henry.

The whole matter appears to be a question of inter-provincial trade, said the Liquor Board chairman, and therefore would not come within the jurisdiction of the Board. So far, he said, the Board has received no report on the affair, and knew nothing of it.

DEPUTY SHERIFF IS FINED $20.00

Ohio Tourist Caught For Speeding on Provincial Highway Near Peterborough.

GOING 55 TO 60 M.P.H.

Although he claimed to be a deputy sheriff in the State of Ohio, R. R. Gordon learned that it does not give him the prerogative to speed nor cut in on traffic.

Traffic Patrol Officer Edward Hornick laying the information in County Court yesterday informed Magistrate Langley that he followed defendant for a distance of seven miles in a car, on King's Highway 28 in North Monaghan Township on August 19th.

"I found him cutting in and passing other vehicles on curves and hills. He was travelling at a speed of from 55-60 m.p.h.

Under the new authority recently invested in traffic officers, whereby they may levy a fine for which a receipt is given—a law which has been designed for the convenience of tourists—the officer stopped defendant and took bond amounting to $23.75.

"I am going to get the fine back" Gordon had stated.

The Magistrate decided otherwise and imposed a fine of $20 with $3.75 costs.

PROPELLER KILLS YOUNG AIRMAN

George E. Parson of Toronto, Meets Death While Starting Engine of Airplane.

ADJUSTED MOTOR.

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 21 (C.P.)— Climbing up on the top of the plane to adjust the motor, George P. Parsons, 32, Toronto, was killed yesterday when he fell into the whirling blade of the propeller. Prominent airmen believe it is the first fatality of its kind in the history of Dominion aviation.

Parsons, a member of the Toronto Flying Club and a pilot in the Great War, had flown an Amphibian biplane to Wasaga Beach a week ago. The machine was the only one of its kind in the Dominion, it is claimed. The engine and propeller are situated overhead, and from what can be learned, Parsons had climbed up on top to adjust the motor when it failed to start.

After considerable tinkering he was able to start the engine. But in getting down he slipped and fell into the whirling blades of the propeller.

The body will be shipped to the home of his parents in Port Arthur to-day.

Col. Taylor had just arrived in Hamilton from Montreal to attend the British Empire Games.

1,437 DRIVERS ARE SUSPENDED

More Than Half Suspensions So Far This Year Due to Reckless Driving.

74 TOURISTS.

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 21 (C.P.)— Figures issued by J. P. Bickell, Registrar of Motor Vehicles for Ontario, reveal a substantial increase in the number of auto drivers' licenses suspended in the first seven months of 1930 as compared with the corresponding period of 1929.

From January to July of this year, suspensions numbered 1,437 as compared with 916 for the same period in 1929. The entire number of licenses suspended for all causes in 1929, totalled 1,859.

More than half the suspensions this year are due to reckless driving, the number being 794. Intoxication comes next with 484. There was only one suspension for manslaughter last year and only one so far this year.

Up to July this year 28 United States tourists lost their licenses for intoxication; 45 for reckless driving and one for criminal negligence.

Red Pimples on Face Were Always Burning. Healed by Cuticura.

"I had pimples all over my face. They were small at first, then got large and red and festered. They were very sore and itched and were always burning. Sometimes they itched so badly that I scratched, causing more to come on my face. I dreaded going out when I had them because they were so noticeable.

"I tried different remedies without success. I began using Cuticura Soap and Ointment and got relief, and after using five boxes of Cuticura Ointment and three cakes of Cuticura Soap I was healed." (Signed) Miss Olive Procter, R. R. 2, Campbellville, Ont.

Soap 25c. Ointment 25 and 50c. Talcum 25c. Sold everywhere. Sample each free. Address Canadian Depot: J. T. Wolt Company Limited, Montreal.

THE FIGURES SHOULD TELL.

London City Council is going to line up with other municipalities and ask the Provincial Government for a share of the gasoline tax.

The Government has formed a habit of shaking its official head, and very likely another request for a share of this tax will mean another shake of the provincial head.

The gas tax is easy money easy to collect, and for that reason the Province is not likely to let down the rails so the municipalities can drive in with their empty carts.

If the Province is spending all tihe gas tax it collects for the building and maintaining of highways, then the Province will have a fairly good reason for refusing to give over any of the tax to the municipalities.

If the Province is collecting more in gas tax than it spends for this purpose, then it will have a very weak case against the demands of the municipalities.—Stratford Beacon-Herald.

BOWLING CLUB'S APPEAL.

The Peterborough Bowling and Lawn Tennis Club, as it was predicted, did a fine thing when they undertook to establish in this city the magnificent bowling green, tennis courts and club-house that have been in operation this season at the corner of Monaghan road and McDonnel streets. It has brought many visitors to the city, not once but on different occasions, and it has given several hundred men and women an opportunity for seasonal recreation and wholesome exercise that otherwise would not have been available.

This recreational enterprise has cost quite a good deal of money and requires about $10,000 more to complete its financing, although with $5,000 in cash from those who appreciate the value of the plant to the city a mortgage for $5,000 could be carried quite well by the club.

An effort is going to be made at once to put the finances in good business shape, and the directors are hopeful that the citizens will show their appreciation by subscribing th's small amount necessary for this purpose.

J. Y. KELLOUGH'S APPOINTMENT.

The resignation of J. Y. Kellough, representative in Durham County of the Ontario Department of Agriculture, will be a personal loss to the department and to the rural community which he has served so well during the last three years. He has accepted a position with the Canadian Grain Pool as their Ontario representative in the course grain division, and will be succeeded in Durham, September 1st, by E. A. Summers, of Winchester.

Mr. Kellough has devoted himself loyally and with unfailing diligence to the interests of the farmers in our neighbouring county, especially to the junior farmers, whose ambitions and activities he has encouraged and promoted in season and out. In this branch of his work he had come into close touch with the directors of the Peterborough Exhibition Board in the new classes which the directors have estabilished for the young men and women of the farms. His co-operation has been a valuable help to the Exhibition, and he will be missed this year when the junior farmers' competition will again be one of the outstanding events of the fair.

Mr. Kellough gave every evidence of being an ideal representative of the Department of Agriculture, not only by his faithful performance of duty, but especially in his personal character which must have exerted as strong an appeal to the farmers of Durham County and the young people of the farms as it did to the directors of the Exhibition the members of the Counties Council of Northumberland and Durham.

His friends in Peterborough and throughout the district will certainly regret his departure, but also extend to him their best wishes for his success in the new responsibility which he is about to assume.

IMPROVING PETERBOROUGH.

Announcement of the closing next Monday, August 25, of the entry list for the annual lawn and home decoration competition conducted by the Peterborough Horticultural Society directs attention to the manifest improvement that has been noticeable this year in the parks and private grounds throughout the city this season.

Although a great deal of comment and conversation centres around the multiplicity of automobiles and garages and the expenditure they involve, it is increasingly evident that citizens are not neglecting the general appearance and beautification of their homes. This fact may not be reflected by a larger number of entries in the lawn competition this season, because most people are either too modest about their decorative efforts or are quite satisfied with the personal and esthetic recompense which their homes are giving to them.

And while on this community subject, a word of commendation is due the City Council for the good example the members, and especially the Parks Committee, of which Alderman Stocker is chairman, have set by the beautification of the parks. It is doubtful whether they have ever been so completely and continuously pleasing. The committee's work was extended this year by the completion of the plans for beauty spots at the east approach to the Hunter street bridge and the gore at the corner of Charlotte and Park streets. Ald. Stocker has given these miniature parks his personal attention, and that means considerable actual work, with results that have merited the public's appreciation. Mr. Stocker's committee is one of the most successful of the Council's departments.

The Canadian General Electric Company has contributed another trim grassy plot in the south end, and has otherwise enhanced their own property and its neighborhood by this season's comprehensive improvement of their Park street frontage.

Peterborough has raised its general standard of public and residential beauty this year, and not the least of the influences toward that agreeable and profitable achievement has been the untiring endeavours of the Horticultural Society, even when the public seemed apathetic and unresponsive.

UNEMPLOYMENT SURVEYS.

Similar surveys of unemployment are being projected in the United States and Canada for the purpose of obtaining statistics of the number of persons at present out of work, and also of the probable trend of the labor problem next winter.

While Senator Robertson, Minister of Labor, is opening in Ottawa to-day a meeting of the Employment Service of Canada, President Hoover has completed the personnel of his special committee on unemployment statistics. These bodies correspond in their composition, both including representatives of various organizations of employers, employees, farmers, Chambers of Commerce, and in Canada also representatives of the Provincial and Federal Governments.

The United States committee will not convene until October 6.

This preliminary canvass of Canada's unemployed will no doubt present a fairly accurate estimate of the problem of unemployment relief for which Premier Bennett is about to summon a special session of Parliament. Senator Robertson's enquiry should be able to substitute facts for the opinions and casual estimates that were employed during the election campaign.

With this information and also some time to consider it before Parliament meets, it is likely that the Government will be in a position to propose some undertakings that will give immediate employment. After all that is the primary consideration. The defeat of the King Government has been attributed largely to national unemployment, the extent of which may be gaged osmewhat at least by Premier Bennett's clear-cut victory.

It is expected, therefore, that the sessions of the Employment Council will be productive of fairly concrete plans for providing work throughout the Dominion and thereby amplify the proposals which Premier Bennett will announce to Parliament next month as an effectual remedy of Canadian unemployment.

Men who are out of work are not so much conerned about their aggregate number as they are about the number of jobs in sight.

It is a heavy responsibility alike for Premier Bennett and President Hoover. A continent is looking to them for leadership into the promised lands of work and prosperity.

NO ELECTORAL REFORM IN ENGLAND.

For nearly a year a commission has been considering the question of new methods of electing members of Parliament in Great Britain. It was composed of members of all parties, who were appointed by the Prime Minister, and had the general direction to work out a plan, if they could, for "securing that the composition of the House of Commons shall properly reflect the views expressed by the electorate." This was, of course, mainly the demand of the Liberal party. In proportion to the vote which it actually polled, the number of Liberal members of Parliament is far too small. Mr. Lloyd George has long been demanding that something be done to redress this party injustice. He was willing to accept some scheme of proportional representation, or the plan of what is called the "alternative vote." But upon neither of these projects, nor upon any other, was the commission able to agree. Its chairman, Lord Ullswater, reported to Mr. Ramsay MacDonald that the discussions had turned out to be entirely fruitless and that therefore they were to be discontinued.

This will dash the hopes of the Liberals, and perhaps make Mr. Lloyd George more unwilling, when Parliament convenes, to hold up the hands of the Labor Government. It has been said that he was supporting Mr. MacDonald on a kind of tacit understanding that some measure of electoral reform would be given him in return. But apparently both the Labor party and the Conservatives have now decided that it is not worth while bothering about the Liberal minority. They would like to see it disappear entirely and merge with one or the other of them so as to bring back the two-party system of government. But we may not have heard the end of the matter. If a resentful Lloyd George should before long join hands with Mr. Baldwin in voting out the Labor Government, the issue of a change in the methods of election to the House of Commons might be made large in the campaign, with the consequence of opening the whole question again. For the moment it is closed—the door slammed full in the face of Mr. Lloyd George.—New York Times.

RESURGENT GREECE.

A report from Greece by a correspondent of the Manchester Guardian almost leads one to believe that the reign of Saturn, distinguished for peacefulness and content, has come again in Hellas. "The vast world-process" of which Vergil sang, thinking of Augustus and Rome, has brought "a new-born time" to the land which Byron's hero, standing on the "Persian's grave" at Marathon, dreamt might still be free.

During the last five years the reeks have succeeded in overcoming all their major difficulties with extraordinary success, though the final effort has taken place principally during the last two years since the accession to power of M. Venizelos.

The great body of refugees (1,400,000) from Asia Minor to whom the motherland, herself still in distress, gave shelter, have been finally established in industry and agriculture. Many millions a year have been added by them to the wealth of Greece. Steady development of resources now pervades the little land all the way from the Morea and Attica to the slopes of Pindus and Olympus, where the pest of brigandage is "almost obliterated." This happy state of things is attributed primarily to the improvement of communications which have linked Greek culture and commerce to the main centres of Europe. The Indian air mail calls not only at Saloniki and at the crowded port of the Piraeus, but also at Crete, where the modern Theseus finds his way out even without the aid of the "filament slender." Then there is the daily Orient Express with its through cars which makes Athens a European rather than a Balkan capital, and airplanes fly daily to and fro between Saloniki and Vienna over the site of the palace where Aristotle taught the boy who became Alexander the Great.

Local transport also has been greatly improved, and water has been brought to cities and even to villages. In highways Greece is still backward, but the Government is taking steps to complete a new program of road-making. Even now one can see the glories of Greece in comparative comfort—and in safety; for order has been established. With all the improvements, Greece nas not lost her pristine charm, and a traveler may venture there without fear of losing the dreamt-of land in seeing the modern reality. "Once more the Virgin (Justice) comes and Saturn reigns."—New York Times.

The Office Hound

We present for your approval a little one-act drama of our own, entitled: "THE MINIATURE GOLFERS, or Society's Frustrates."

O—H

This gem of the theatre has never been produced on any stage, and probably never will be. Squawky rights are pending, and the thing will probably be seen and heard on the screen as "FLAMIN' PASSIONS ON THE CORNER LOT", an All-Blooping, All-Howling, 100 Per Cent All-Sexaphone, Jumping, Simmering, and Pornographic Taxicolor Production of Night Life among the Dew Worms, the Divot Diggers, and the Puttomaniacs—with an All-Star Cast including the Smith Brothers, Amos 'n' Andy, Fanny Ward, and Peggy Hopkins Joyce.

O—H

Scene: A Miniature Golf Course—the 19th Hole.

Time: Sunday.

Characters: Halitosis and Ptomaine, two ardent miniature golfers, familiarly known as "Hal" and "Tom". A Waiter.

O—H

As the curtain rises, we discover the verandah of a shack labelled "Clubhouse". There is a backdrop of empty sardine cans, soap boxes, clay vases, Ford radiators, cut flowers, and cast-iron pipe. This, we gather, is the Giant Killer Miniature Golf Course.

O—H

Enter Hal and Tom. Hal is garbed in pale green plus-fours, a scarlet pull-over, a purple tie, and orange-and-magneta socks. Tom is dressed more conservatively in a cerise ensemble with a size "A" moustache. Hal twirls a putter nonchalantly as he lights a Murad. Tom carries a putter, a jigger, a spoon, and a mashie niblick, with which clubs he drums nervously on a carton of golf balls under his left arm.

O—H

Hal (lightly): Well, old man, what are you having?

Tom (furtively): Oh—ah—a strawberry soda, I guess.

Hal (to Waiter, who has just appeared from behind a flower pot): Two strawberry sodas, my man.

(The "my man" is added to show that Hal is used to this sort of thing, is perfectly at home among the idle rich, and wouldn't be terrified even by a French headwaiter.)

Waiter: Yes sir. (Exits.)

(This is the waiter's only speech of the play and he should make the most of it. If you let the Assistant Stage Manager play the part, he'll probably forget the line altogether. If you give it to one of your ambitious juveniles, he'll probably wear a comic moustache and a pair of red suspenders, and stop the show.)

Tom (after a pause in which he taps out the Stein Song on his carton with the lee end of his mashie niblick): I—I was in rather bad form today,....

Hal: That's all right, old man. We can't all be good....always, I mean.

Tom (sighing deeply): I wish you hadn't got me to take up this game, Hal.

Hal (slapping his friend on the back in the most accepted Service Club tradition): Nonsense, old man! Buck up!

(The Waiter appears with the strawberry sodas. Both men seize their sodas and down them at one gulp. This shows extreme virility.)

Hal: Have another, old chap!

Tom: No thanks. I've got to keep my head clear.

(Exit Waiter.)

Hal: What was your score today, anyway, old timer?

Tom: I went out in 49 and came back in 68.

Hal (wincing): Too bad! I had a perfect par.

Tom: Oh?....

Hal (strutting, with doubtless justifiable pride): Yes, sir! a perfect par! I had a birdie two on the fourth and a nice par four on the long seventh. I got bunkered behind a potted geranium on the sixteenth, but got off nicely with a five.

(Tom says nothing but gazes with a glassy expression toward the herring tin which forms the water hazard on the tricky twelfth.)

Hal (treating his friend to another thump between the shoulder-blades): Yes sir! It's a great game! Now, on the thirteenth I will admit I had a tough time of it. My drive was short to the rough. It couldn't have been more than a three-inch drive, landing in the patch of fish-bowl pebbles just west of the cigarette package hazard. I got her out nicely with the help of this little ol' club and had a nice lie right in front of the green. But on my next I overshot, and the dirty little pill rolled right down into the empty soup plate. I took an eight on the hole.

(Tom remains mute, staring fixedly into space.)

Hal (suddenly concerned): Why what's the matter, old man? You're not sick, are you?

(Still Tom says nothing.)

Hal: Oh, come! Come! come! old chap! No sense in carrying on like this. It's a great little ol' game, and you and I will just go out after we've had a bite to eat....and—and we'll lower the course record!' What say?

(Slowly and deliberately Tom pulls a revolver out of his pocket and levels it at his friend.)

Hal (with a fine attempt at humor): Oh, I say, old man! That isn't golf, you know!

(Tom pulls the trigger. Hal dies beautifully down near the footlights, being careful to catch the full value of the proscenium floods. He has been hit between the locker room and the mental hazard.)

O—H

And picture the happy and unruffled life of the amoeba and the polyp. They never heard of Miniature Golf.

TEMPLE TOWER

By CAPTAIN DRUMMOND

As we drew nearer it was obvious that the sound came from the outhouse saw, pause, saw, pause. And whoever it was who was producing it he certainly wasn't working overtime. The pauses grew longer, the noise shorter, and when at length we reached the wall of the building the sawing seemed to have ceased altogether. From inside came the occasional sound of a person moving about, and once some tool fell with a metallic clang on the floor.

We were some two yards from the chink of light, and I could see that Hugh was looking keenly all round us. It was obvious what was worrying him, and I, too, searched the darkness intently. If we had seen the other watcher in thelight from the door, he, in his turn, would be able to see us if we peered through. And that was the last thing we wanted. If he was a member of the household he would give the alarm if he was one of the opposing side we should have given ourselves away completely. And so for five minutes we stared into the night, but without success. No trace could we see of him he seemed to have vanished completely.

At last came Hugh's whisper in my ear—"We'll chance it, crouch low," and inch by inch he edged his way to the door. I followed close behind him on my hands and knees, with the youngster just on my heels. I could hear his excited breathing, and truth to tell I was getting well worked up myself. Were we going to see anything inside, or would it turn out to be a false alarm?

Very gradually Hugh straightened himself up until he could see through the crack. For a moment or two he stared and I saw a look of amazement appearon his face. Then he went on and I took his place.

The scene was an astounding one. The Illumination came from half a dozen candles which stood on a rough carpenter's bench. A saw and some tools were scattered about, but it was the worker himself who fascinated me. He was sitting on an overturned box, and in the course of my life I have never seen a more bestial face. He was clean shave save for a short moustache. His mouth was a little open as he worked, and the light shone on a row of yellow teeth, from which two were missing. His nose was flattened, and a great red scar ran down one cheek from the temple almost to the chin. His eyebrows were bushy, and once when he happened to glance up I saw his eyes glaring with a kind of animal ferocity. He paused in his work, too, at that moment and shook both his fists in the air at some imaginary enemy. And his expression was that of a homicidal maniac.

Never, in fact, unless I had seen it, would I have believed that any living thing, who bore the outward semblance of a man, could have presented such an utterly devilish appearance. He fascinated me, so that I stared and stared until Hugh nudged me in the ribs. And then only did I force myself to look away from him at the work he was doing.

At first I couldn't make it out. He had beside him two or three slats of wood each about a foot long, two inches broad and an inch thick. There was an augur hole at each end of the slats, and through these holes he was passing two ropes. And then it suddenly dawned on me the man was making a rope ladder. I looked on the floor at his feet, and saw the ends of the top ropes were attached to a canvas sack about the size and shape of a bolster. And at last I got it,but not before Hugh had pulled me forcibly away, and performed the same office on young Freckles, who had nealy given the whole show away by an audible gasp when he had looked in.

"Damn it," muttered Hugh irritably, "you blokes might have been getting your money's worth at a peep-show in a circus."

We were sitting on the ground some sixty yards away from the house, under cover of a hedge.

"I saw all there was to see in two seconds," he went on. "And for the love of Pete don't forget we're not the only people here to-night."

"What was that horror doing?" said Scott. "I've never seen such an awful looking speciman in my life."

For a moment or two Hugh hesitated.

"Well, young fellow," he said at length. "I fear that his present mission in life is fairly obvious. When you see a man making a rope ladder it is safe to assume he wants to climb something. And when you further see a big canvas sack at one end of the rope ladder, it is not difficult to spot what it is he wants to climb. That sack will just lie nicely between the spikes on Granger's wall, and will anchor the top of the ladder into the bargain. And when he gets to the top he can sit on the sack, throw the ladder down the inside of the wall, and there you are."

"You mean to say," stammered Freckles, "that that beast, that damned murderous swine, is going to get into Temple Tower? With Pat there? Not on your life, Drummond. If you won't go for him now, by God, I will!"

He had scrambled to his feet, and I could hear his quick agitated breathing.

"Sit down and shut up," said Hugh curtly. "I am not going for him now, and he'd eat you with one hand. Sit down, youngster," he went on kindly. "I guess it is a bit of a shock to you, but we've got to do a bit of thinking. No good has ever come yet of barging in like a bull in a china shop, and whatever may be that beauty's intentions in the future, he's perfectly safe where he is at present."

CHAPTER IV

In Which the Necessity for Sparking Plugs is Proved.

And so for the next quarter of an hour we sat there discussing the thing in whispers. The feeling of incongruity, almost of the ridiculous, in three grown men prowling about Romney Marsh at night, which I at any rate had experienced, even if only slightly, had disappeared we were face to face with reality, and pretty grim reality at that.

That this horrible,bestial individual was preparing to get into Temple Tower was obvious. And that his reason for doing so was not to pay a polite call was equally obvious. That it had been Granger who was in his mind when he had paused in his task and shaken his great fists in the air I was sure. But beyond that there was still much that was obscure. We had learned some thing of vital importance it was true, but the one ray of light we possessed only seemed to make the surrounding darkness more impenetrable.

Was this brute sitting in the outhouse the man we had heard snoring? Was he the man who had flashed the red and blue warning to the house on the hill? Whose was that other shadowy form that we had seen cross the light through the door? And most curious of all, what was the connection if any, between this animal man and the Vandalia? Were they working in conjunction, or was the maker of rope ladders playing a lone hand?

That his object was to get at Granger was, as I have said, clear. And as Hugh said, if Granger knew that this specimen was after him his precautions were comprehensible. But was it only his life they were after, or was there something concealed in Temple Tower that they wanted as well?

"I give it up," said Hugh at length. "We don't know enough yet to say. But our evening has not been wasted we've got another player taped all right. And as I don't think we can do more, I suggest home and hitting the hay. The only thing I wish is that we could spot that other bloke, but it is hopeless on a night like this."

But we were destined to have one more glimpse of him. Even as we rose the door of the barn opened, and the ladder maker stood there framed in the light. We had only seen him sitting before; standing up he seemed more horrible than ever. He was a short man, but his arms were abnormally long, and he looked for all the world like a huge misshapen ape. Then he turned back, blew out the lights, and as he did so we crept nearer the house. It was just possible we might learn something, and the night was yet young.

He opened the door and went in, and shortly afterwards a light shone through the curtains of one of the rooms facing the road. As luck would have it the window was open, and as we crept along the side of the house we heard voices.

"It is cursed foolishness, I tell you," came in Spragge's snarling voice. "You have done it twice now, and it is bound to attract attention."

"I agree with Spragge." It was Mrs. Spragge speaking. "Those two men this afternoon—what were they doing except trying to find things out?"

And then I, at any rate, got the shock of my life. For the voice that answered them was soft and musical. It was as if one had suddenly discovered some priceless gem of beauty in a filthy pigsty. At first, in fact, I could hardly believe that it was the bestial monstrosity speaking.

A Thought

MIND AND MATTER.

It seems to me but the other day that the leading physicists of the time were telling us that matter produced mind, and they implied that mind was a kind of emanation from matter. That was the teaching of Tyndal and Huxley when I was born. No one would say that today. Matter producing mind? No. It is the other way; it is mind that produces matter and matter only exists in mind. As it is only by mind that we know the universe, so it is only by mind that the universe is. In a word, the only reality, as science begins to reveal it, is what we have been accustomed to call spiritual; it is intangible; it is nothing that you can weigh or touch; it is that which weighs and touches; it is mind; it is spirit.

NICKEL LEADS TORONTO LIST

Mining Section Shows Unusual Activity To-day With Trade Volume Steadily Increasing.

OIL ISSUES FIRM.

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 21. (C.P.)—Nickel and Brazilian lead the list into higher ground during the course of the morning on the Toronto Stock Exchange to-day. The former added ⅝ to its total to sell at 22⅛. The latter gained almost a full point to go at 33.

The oils were all firm with British American going at 15¾ up ¼; Pete at ⅛ to 18; Union Natural Gas gained 1 to 29, while Imperial went unchanged at 19½.

The mining section showed unusual activity. More issues were traded in to-day than there has been in well over three weeks. Weakness, however, entered the group early and at noon were selling at their lows for the day. Noranda was the one firm stock going unchanged at $20.50. Teck Hughes was off ten to $6.35; Dome $20 to 7.60, and Hollinger 5 to $5.75.

City Dairy advanced ¼ to 66¾, Canada Malting a half to 17½ and Page Hersey an ⅛ to 84½. Laura Secord put in its first appearance for quite some time and went at $42. Among the higher priced industrials were C.P.R. at 175, unchanged, Bell Telephone went likewise at 15. Walkers was the one issue to show a decline, falling off ¼ to 8¾.

R.C.Y.C. Yacht Vision Leading At Hamilton

HAMILTON, Ont., Aug. 21.—(C. P.)—Vision, speedy eight-o metre sloop from Royal Canadian Yacht Club, Toronto was well ahead of Conewaga and Cayuga, Rochester owned yachts, at Brant House Buoy, about eight miles from the finishing line, in the feature race of the Lake Yacht Racing Association here to-day.

Bernice which seemed to start late, was leading Cigarette of Hamilton, another apparently lone entry in this class, when nearing the finish line.

Bernice finished the race well out in front of Cigarette as they had only to make one round of the course, however, the official report, based on time allowances, will not be issued until all boats are finished.

Organization of New Fixed Trust Company

New Firm Will Have Participating Interest in 25 Canadian and American Companies.

The Depositor Company of Canada recently incorporated to organize and manage fixed trusts will offer shortly on the market, together with an important financial group of Montreal, the shares of a new fixed investment trust. This trust will have a participating interest in 25 of the principal Canadian and American companies.

Modelled on the existing fixed trusts in the United States which met with a great success with the investors as well as the sponsors, this Canadian trust will have a participation of 75% in 10 of the most important companies as The Bell Telephone, Montreal Light, Heat & Power, Shawinigan, Dominion Bridge, Imperial Tobacco, Steel of Canada, and 25% in 15 American corporations as American Telephone & Telegraph, Consolidated Gas of New York, Otis Elevator, Woolworth, United States Steel, Standard Oil of New Jersey, etc.

This new corporation, certainly the most important which has been organized in Canada in recent years, has been under consideration for some time and organization was decided upon only when it was shown that shares of fixed investment trusts were constituting an ideal investment for the small and big investors.

This distributors group, presently under organization, will include many banking first in all the provinces of Canada and also in the United States.

CURB GROUPS FIGHTING FOR PRICE CONTROL

Most of Pivotal Issues Fluctuate Within Range of a Point.

TRADING STAGNANT.

Rail Stocks Continue to Decline—S. R. Drops to Lowest in Five Years.

NEW YORK, N. Y., Aug. 21.—(CP)—The newest baby bull market ran into difficulties today, and stock trading degenerated into a contest for control of the price movement between opposing groups of professional traders with the Bearishly inclined making the better score.

Most of the orders originated with floor traders, and neither selling or buying appeared in any appreciable volume from what Wall Street calls the "best people", meaning large investors and important banking interests. Trading was again stagnant.

Most of the pivotal shares fluctuated within a range of a point or less from last night's closing levels although there were a few breaks of several points. Rails generally declined 1 to 5, Southern Railway reaching the lowest price in six years, Illinois Central, the lowest in 5, and Baltimore and Ohio the lowest in 4.

What was characterized as Bear propaganda appeared in the form of various unconfirmable rumors, one having to do with the financial condition of an important company, in which prominent bankers have recently placed several millions after a thorough investigation which they say convinces them that the concern is in a sound and promising condition.

municating with New Zealand. The New Zealand Government has recently changed its tariff, the general rate on foreign cars being increased from 50 per cent to 56¼ per cent up to $1,000 in value, and from 42½ per cent to 48¾ per cent on the remainder of the value over $1,000. There is some uncertainty as to whether the old or new general rate is applicable to Canadian exports.

Under the former rate which applied to Canadian motor cars, the tariff, inclusive of "body duty" was 20 per cent for the first $1,800 and 15 per cent on the value over that amount. On July 22, however, this rate was increased to 21¼ per cent up to $1,000 and 16⅛ per cent. on the remainder of the value, if any.

The whole uestion of Canada's trade relations with New Zealand, will, it is expected, be canvassed by the Government with a view to the negotiation later on of a new direct trade agreement to replace the one which will lapse in October.

WINDSOR, August 21 (C.P.). —John D. Mansfield, president of the Chrysler Corporaton of Canada, Ltd., said he was not surprised by the announcement of Premier Forbes. "I have been expecting it," he said, when asked if it meant that Chrysler business with New Zealand would be transferred to the United States he gave the brief answer, "Yes."

Justin Miller, managing secretary of the Border Chamber of Commerce, said that it was just the way business is done. "We indicated to New Zealand that we did not want to buy from them, so quite naturally they will not trade with us. We served the same kind of notice on the United States when they brought in the Smoot-Hawley tariff, and we cannot complain of New Zealand taking a similar attitude."

St. Andrew's Bantams Win from Guelph 7-5

OAKVILLE, Aug. 21.—St. Andrew's Bantam "A" baseball team fought from behind to eliminate the Guelph Whippets, in the third and deciding game of the first round of the O.B.A.A. play-downs, 7-5, played here yesterday. The Guelph team played well at the start and were leading 5-0 in the sixth inning, when the heavy artillery of the Toronto team got to Ramsey, the Guelph pitcher, driving him from the mound. Haddow, who relieved him, was wild, walking two and hitting one. A balk by Haddow in the ninth inning sent Gilbert in with the tying run, and a double by Greenberg, the next batter, scored Axmith and Parker with the winners' margin.

Cherevaty was outstanding for the Saints, striking out 15 of the opponents. Ramsey was effective until the seventh inning.

Jones and Moir were the heavy hitters for Guelph, with two hits each and M. Jaffe, with a double and two singles, and Greenberg, with two singles, were the best for the St. Andrew's team. Zapp made several spectacular stops at third base.

AJAX OIL HAS 12-POINT GAIN

Trading Volume Continues Good With Gains and Losses Evenly Divided on Standard.

NICKEL ADVANCES.

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 21 (C.P.)—Almost half of the stocks traded in on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange to-day displayed no price change at noon. Volume continued good, however, with gains and losses in the rest of the list about evenly divided. International Nickel progressed, scoring a 50-point gain to a little better than $22. Noranda and Hudson Bay were unchanged.

Lindsleys were dull to-day, Sherritt Gordon off 4, at $1.26, while Sudbury Basin and Ventures were unchanged.

In the gold group, Howey gained 1, Vipond 1, and Premier 5. Hollingers, Sylvanite and Big Missouri were unchanged. Teck Hughes went back 15, to $6.35, and Dome 10, to $7.60. Miscellaneous stocks showed little change, Mining Corporation having the widest movement up 15, at $1.20. Pend Oreille gained 1 to 89, while Newbec, Arno, Towagmas and Abana were unchanged.

Ajax Oil featured in its group, scoring a 12-point gain to $1.95. Alberta Pacific lost 5 and Home 20. Nordon went up 8, and Calmont, Associated Chemical Research and Dalhousie sold at previous closing prices.

FORD CAR SALES TO SUFFER DROP

Action of New Zealand Government in Withdrawing Preference Will Have Serious Effect.

WINDSOR, Ont., August 21 (C.P.)—Sales of the Ford Motor Company of Canada, Limited, in New Zealand will be very, very seriously decreased by the action of the New Zealand Government to-day in withdrawing the British preference from Canadian automobiles and accessories, Wallace B. Campbell, president and treasurer of the border city industry, said to-day.

The action of New Zealand in placing Canadian cars and accessories on the general tariff list increases the duty on Canadian chassis by 300 per cent., and the duty on a typical complete car as the Ford tudor sedan by 185 per cent.

R. Campbell announced that his information from New Zealand was that the withdrawal of the preference with the increases named was to become effective on shipments leaving Canadian ports for New Zealand after September 9.

"It is a very serious situation if this legislation goes through as indicated in to-day's press," Mr. Campbell declared.

59 MEN 'RULE' UNITED STATES

James W. Gerard Gives List of Names to the New York Times.

IN INTERESTS OF AMERICA.

NEW YORK, N.Y., Aug. 21 (C.P.)—In the opinion of James W. Gerard, formerly Ambassador to Germany, 59 men "rule the United States."

Mr. Gerard compiled a list of these men for to-day's New York Times, which asked him to amplify a sentence in a pamphlet he wrote endorsing the crusade of Viscount Rothermere and Lord Beaverbrook for British Empire free trade and high protection. In that pamphlet he wrote "give the 40 men who rule the United States ten years for the development of this industrial Empire (The British Empire) and no country on earth could approach it in per capital wealth."

Explaining why he, as an American, should write on the subject Mr. Gerard wrote: "I offer as my excuse the interest that America in common with all the world, has in the preservation of British prosperity."

KING AND QUEEN PLAN : VISIT TO SCOTLAND

LONDON, Eng., Aug. 21. (C.P.) — The King and the Queen will leave for Balmoral to-morrow. It will be the first visit of His Majesty to his Scottish seat since his recent illness.

The Lord Provost of Scotland and a number of magistrates will greet the Royal party during a brief station wait at Aberdeen, and the Marquis of Aberdeen as Lord Lieutenant of the county, will meet Their Majesties at Ballater. The Duke of Gloucester and Prince George will be at Balmoral but the Prince of Wales is not expected to go north.

AUTUMN ELECTION IS NOT EXPECTED

Slate in England Will Probably Be Left Free For Imperial Conference.

LONDON, Eng., Aug. 21 (By Thomas T. Champion, Canadian Press Staff Correspondent).—So far there does not appear to be a great deal of foundation for the stories which, from time to time, have been making their appearance predicting a general election in Britain in the autumn. The far-flung campaign of education speeches which the Conservatives have planned to launch is not interpreted in the inner circles as evidence that the Canservatives anticipate an early election fight but rather as proof that the Tories are girding their loins in plenty of time for the vote when it does come.

The Rt. Hon. Neville Chamberlain, recently appointed chief organizer by Mr. Baldwin, is not expected to conclude his holiday in Germany until the middle of next month. When he comes home the party machine will see the beginning of an exhaustive overhauling process.

Barring extraordinary developments, the present aspiration of all three parties is to leave the field free in the Autumn for the Imperial Conference and the round-table Indian Conference. At the Indian meeting both the Conservative and Liberal Oppositions in the House of Commons will be represented.

WEETAMOE HOLDS LEAD

NEWPORT, R.I., Aug. 21 (C.P.) — Weetamoe, the Morgan-Nichols candidate for the defense of the America's Cup, had a 24 second lead over the yacht Enterprise at the ten-mile to-day in the second of the official trial races.

FINANCIAL NEWS AND BRIEFS

A SPECIAL SERVICE TO THE EXAMINER

Officials of Canadian Canners Limited have forwarded a letter to all stockholders inviting them to visit the company's booth at the Canadian National Exhibition, where a comprehensive display of Aylmer products is being put on. Canadian Canners staff will be on hand to explain the exhibit and answer any questions and the letter winds up in hoping the shareholders will favor the company with a visit. The Canadian Uational Exhibition presents a wonderful opportunity for shareholders of Canadian industrial corporations to become better acquainted with the products of the companies they are financially interested in and the example of Canadian Canners in extending an invitation to their stock holders could be followed with advantage by a great many others.

The action of the shareholders of the City Dairy Company in approving the sale of the business and assets to the Borden Company, has been approved by the Supreme Court of Ontario, and now a story is heard that the Borden Company is considering forming a Canadian parent concern as a holding company for their Canadian units. It is said that the securities of this new organization will be listed exclusively on the Canadian stock exchanges.

At a special general meeting of the City Dairy President J. Moore read a letter from the Borden president stating that on the completion of the deal Canadians would own 300,000 shares of the Borden Company, or over seven per cent. of the total issued capital. The suggestion that the Borden Company list on the Canadian exchanges is a good one. City Dairy has upwards of 2400 shareholders and it is only right that a huge market should be provided for the securities held by the people in the Dominion.

How the Borden Company would make the exchange for shares of the new Canadian company, or if no exchange is contemplated, how distribution would be gained to warrant listing is not clear.

The shares given in exchange for City Dairy represent an equity in a dairy chain having units in operation throughout Canada and the United States, and there would be no advantage for Canadians to exchange shares in a company where operations were widely diversified geographically for securities of one whose operations were confined to the Dominion.

ABANDON SEARCH FOR PUBLISHER

Believe Body of Van Lear Black Carried Out to Sea.

HEAVY CURRENT.

NEW YORK, N.Y., Aug. 20.—(C.P.)—Search by airplanes for the body of Van Lear Black, who vanished from his yacht Sabalo off the New Jersey coast on Monday evening, was abandoned to-day.

Three planes which pressed the hunt for the Baltimore publisher for three hours this morning reported that there was such a strong tide out to sea and that ocean currents were moving away from shore in such volume that little hope remained for the present that the body would be found near the coastline.

Coastguard boats engaged since yesterday with planes, the Sabalo itself and the naval dirigible Los Angeles in the search, were still standing by to-day but Paul Patterson, editor of the Baltimore Sun, of whose publishing company Mr. Black was chairman of the Board, said that the yacht was about to leave the site where the publisher was missed at about 9 o'clock on Monday evening after having apparently fallen over a deck rail from his craft.

There still are 180,000 horses in Norway.

BEST SWIMMER IN THE WORLD ENTERS SPLASH—225 OF HIM

"It's I," Say the Teachers—"It's Me," Say Those of 187 Other Professions.

MARINES VS. GOBS.

Average Weight of Men Entrants is Down 14 Pounds From Last Year.

(Special to the Examiner—Copyright 1930)

TORONTO, Aug. 21—What kind of an outfit has four clerks, six bakers, and three cooks; one pearl diver, and one cannon feeder, one chorus girl, and one housewife, two bookmakers and one singer?

No, not the bughouse, but the big swim at this year's Canadian National Exhibition at Toronto. Of the 225 swimmers and alleged swimmers of assorted sizes and shapes who will dive off the deep end in search of fame, fortune and front page some day soon, 187 different occupations are listed, including everything from false hair weaver to landscape gardener.

There are a half dozen different kinds of teachers, including a teacher of teaching, one lawyer, one farmer and one student, but no doctors. There are potters, porters and putters. There are cutters and counters and carpenters, not to mention a councillor, collector and clothier.

And even if the race doesn't settle the question as to who is champion among the champions, it will settle one or two minor problems. For example there are four one-legged swimmers rarin' to go and each says he is the world's champion one-legged wave buster. After the prizes are all given out and the alibis all taken in there will only be one.

The same with the United States navy. Two of her lads in blue are up for the big plunge and both say they are the fastest and strongest swimmers who ever saw a battleship. The boys thought they might get together and settle the thing some warm evening, but it seems they have contracts with managers or something. So this another thing to be fixed up on race day.

The U.S. marine corps also has a couple of world beaters on deck. These boys aren't exactly sure which one can outswim the other but they're quite sure either of them can lick the navy lads with one hand tied.

Mr. Hughes, who is master of ceremonies for the big splash, is not going to let them swim with one hand tied. "Them navy guys will feel at home an hour after the race starts. They'll be in a boat," the marines chorused to-day.

It's probably not polite to ask a champ how he gets that way, but it should be quite safe to ask a navy man why he isn't with the navy rolling around the briny and that sort of thing. However, the fresh water swimmer from the salt water ship didn't think so. He said, "I'm the navy champion see. I just tell 'em, I don't explain 'em."

"But has the navy and the marine corps decided it needs the ten thousand or have you got leave of absence of a summer holiday or what?" "Now listen buddy, it's nice of you to give us publicity and all that, but don't get fresh, see? I'm the navy champion, I am, and I'm up here to swim, see?"

I'm afraid I don't see, but anyway, two navy champions are up here to make Vierkotter and the others like it.

One man who can neither speak or hear has entered and passed his preliminary tests. He proposes to swim his own race, ignoring the boys in the boat.

All the women entered for this race have some occupation, but four of the men say they have none and never did have one. Pretty soft. If statistics interest you, this will be the slimmest splash derby yet held here. The average weight of the men is 165 as compared with 179 last year. The average for the girls is 143.

George Young, of Catalina fame is not yet entered.

SCULLING RACE IS AGAIN POSTPONED

Choppy Waves Force Second Postponement of Great Event.

ON FRIDAY NIGHT.

BAYSIDE STADIUM, Hamilton, Ont., Aug. 21 (By Elmer Dulmage, Canadian Press Staff Writer). — The Empire Singles sculling race, bringing together Bob Pearce of Australia and Joe Wright Jr., Canadian champion, this morning was postponed until to-morrow. International Rowing Association events will be decided to-night.

A young gale blew over Hamilton Bay from the north-east, whipping the water in choppy waves and whitecaps as the rowers made ready to take to the water this morning. Officials delayed the start for an hour, looking for a let down in the wind and then declared the early days events off until this evening.

Six international contests, bringing together some of the fastest crews on the continent, will be run off starting at 7 o'clock E.D.S.T. this evening. To-morrow evening Pearce, Wright and other singles stars will clash in the feature water event, the singles. Beresford and Bradley of England and Durnan of Toronto will provide opposition for the Australian and Canadian champions.

Fours, with and without coxswains, also will be on to-morrow's program.

COMPETES IN TWO EVENTS

Buster Brown of Edmonton, Alta., competing in the 100-metre dash and in the 400-metre relay with the Canadian team at the British Empire Games at Hamilton, Ontario.

RUSHOLME BOWLERS WIN DOMINION CUP

Defeat Granite Rink in Final—Milton Four Wins Ontario Cup.

TORONTO, Ont. 21. — With the finals of two of the trophy events completed and the third advanced to the final round, the Dominion Lawn Bowling's annual tournament is nearing an end.

The Dominion Gold Cup, prized by bowlers throughout Ontario, will remain with the Toronto Rusholme Club until next season. J. A. Raymond's strong quartet defeating the Toronto Granite rink, skipped by A. P. Ross, in the final game yesterday afternoon by 17 to 11.

The Rusholme's four got off to a fine start and collected a lead that their opponents found unsurmountable. The Ross rink made a big effort in the latter stages of the match and scored a six-end on the thirteenth, but the handicap was too great.

The Ontario Cup final resulted in a victory for Dr. M. E. Gowland's Milton rink, which defeated the Oakwood rink, skipped by J. A. Taylor and entered by W. J. Miles. The score was 17 to 10. The Milton rink scored a six on the third end, and from that on held the advantage.

The Toronto Trophy event has reached the semi-final round, the Toronto rinks and W. Brown's Montreal Westmount four being the survivors. The Oakwood rink, skipped by J. P. Charlebois, is one of the semi-finalists in the competition. This rink reached the semi-finals in the other two cup events, but lost each time.

The Primary Doubles event also reached the final round last night. A feature of this is that the two finalists are both from the London Thistle Clubs, the Scheiding-Wilson combination meeting the Dockstader-Kilpatrick duo. All four bowlers are members of P. C. Wilson's Thistle rink which captured the Dominion Gold Cup last year.

Packers Vs. Brinton Friday Eening

On King Edward Park at Six O'clock, in the Semi-final of Peck Trophy.

Official notification was received this afternoon from the secretary of the P. and D. F. A. that the Canadian Packing and the Brinton Athletic have agreed to play the Peck Cup semi-final on Friday night instead of Saturday afternoon, on King Edward Park. Kick-off at 6.15 prompt.

The Brinton executive desired this arrangement to accommodate the players who will be on vacation for the next week from Friday evening, and the Packers have co-operated with them in their request.

When these teams met in a previous cup tie, the carpet boys got the better of the argument, and the fans will see a thriller in this important match.

Referee James Hawthorne. Linesmen as previously announced.

The Brinton tmea will be as follows: W. Curtis, goal; D. Green and Sid Laidler, full backs; J. O'Halloran, T. Westwood and E. A. Bayliss, halves; J. Boon, W. James, Charles (better known as Wag) Hotson, J. Anderson, and E. Hanson, forwards; reserves, J. Creighton and H. Hotson.

Wag Hotson was for many years associated with the famous C.C.E. team when he played with the well-known outside right, Manders. He is occupying the centre-forward position. Fred Lucas, who played at full back, leaves for England shortly, and will be nursing his broken ankle on the trip across the Atlantic. The injury was received in a practice game.

Game on Saturday.

Arrangements are being made to-night by the Canadian General to have Deloro football team come to the city on Saturday afternoon to play an exhibition game. Definite news will be published to-morrow.

Referee—Pete King, Millbrook.

Umpires—Oshawa, Goal, B. Brown; time, J. Meagher. Campbellford, goal C. H. Davidson; time, S. Clegg.

Play Opens Fast

Play started in the first period with a scramble in center field which was broken by Jack of Campbellford getting possession of the ball and carrying it to the Oshawa goal where it was passed to H. Ingram who shot but missed. Then started a forward push by the Motor City which resulted in C. Garrison making the first count in the game. Play then began to warm up until Whitton met with his broken nose at the hands of H. Luke which held up the game for seven minutes. Luke was put in the box for this. From then on Campbellford was on the offensive and did their best to even up the score but the Oshawa squad played a fine defensive game with occasional spurts that carried the play into the Miller's country, where it was in full swing when the bell rang. Garrison and Cardinal for Oshawa kept things busy in this period for the entertainers, doing considerable checking and making many breaks which were dangerous and would have proved fatal but for Fox in the Campbellford net who played a fine game. For the Miller's, Cowell and H. Ingram did some pretty combination work, with Whitton and Flint falling into line and keeping the play away from their goal. Both teams covered well which kept the play even and made the fighting hard.

Ranges Over Field

The second period showed the play more open, the game ranging all over the field. Campbellford's goal received the first bombardment, but this was quickly dispersed and returned Bovin for Oshawa made a good try for the Campbellford net, but the shot went high Whitten was again put out in this period, but after attention returned to the field as game as ever Busche was also hurt, but returned to play H Cardinal of Oshawa was put on the fence for stock-holding, the only penalty registered in the period Busch substituted for Whitton and Blue for Flint At the end of the session Oshawa made a determined run on the Campbellford net, but this was broken up when H Ingram got possession of the ball and broke away Bovin and Daniels for Oshawa starred in this period and did some fancy stick handling which put an edge on the play and kept the Miller's busy on the defensive his was counteracted by the pretty combination of the Ingram brothers who worked well with Cowell and Hendy, and were plentifully supplied with balls by the quick energetic T. B. Horkins, who proved a strong addition to the Campbellford line-up.

Heavy Checking

The third period was one of checking and counter checking with Oshawa marking time and Campbellford watching their opportunities. Both teams made some pretty shots which were of no avail. All the players worked hard to gain the advantage, but the session was scoreless. Both Hendy and Bovin were laid out in this period, and two penalties were registered, when Cowell and H. Luke were put on the fence for the two minute stop. Both sides seemed to be holding themselves back for the final play, and the period ended with an air of expectation. Copperthwaite, Plunket and Busch worked hard to even up the count for Campbellford, and McArthur proved a strong man at point. For Oshawa, Black and Kunkle with Leydon and Parry were very much in the fore and covered well when the Millers drove onto their goal.

Score at the end of the third period, Oshawa 1, Campbellford 0. Penalties, Oshawa, H. Luke. Campbellford, J. Cowell.

The last period was the one that made history for Campbellford. The Millers led the attack with a combined rush on the Oshawa net which was unsuccessful, and this was returned by the visitors, Daniles playing a fine lone hand until upet by Copperthwaite. The evening count was made by H. Ingram from a pass by Horkin, after which the Oshawa squad invaded the Campbellford territory. But the homesteaders were out for blood, and drew it when Whitton scored a second goal for Campbellford from a pass by Hendy, who was energetic throughoubt the period. Times then became warm, and the crack of the hickory mingled with the cheers of the fans as Cowell netted the ball five minutes before the final bell rang, from a pass by Horkins. It was a come-back by the homsteaders which not only put the fighting spirit into them but kept the side lines on their toes. It was fast and old time lacrosse, and for Campbellford, Jack took a delight in playing up to form, and Horkins was in the centre of the play with Cowell, Hendy and Flint. Oshawa seemed out of the running, and although they made a brave attempt to stem the tide of Campbellford's victory, their efforts were hopeless.

Final score, Oshawa 1, Campbellford . Penalties, nil.

Goals, Campbellford, H. Ingram, Whitton, Cowel.

This victory for Campbellford gives them a good chance of winning out in the Central Ontario group of the Intermediate O.A.L.A. As the count stands it gives them a two goal lead, which will be an advantage when they play Oshawa in the final game of the play-offs which it is expected will take place at Oshawa on Aug. 30th. Campbellford are going on that trip with high hopes of coming home with the bacon and it will be a large crowd of the fans that will follow them to Oshawa that day.

since carried the sobriquet of "world's fastest human" will compete in the 100 yards dash. Despite a strong contending field from Canada and other parts of the Empire, Percy today ruled a heavy favorite to capture the title. Sprint numbers feature the track card to-day in addition to the final of the 880 yards, the heats for which were run at the opening of the games last Saturday.

The one distance race is the three mile affair in which is entered W. J. Savidan, powerful New Zealand runner who captured the Empire title over the six mile journey on opening day.

International Yachting Struggle.

Another morning attraction, beginning at the precise hour of the bowling and rowing competitions, is the international yachting struggle on Hamilton Bay, continued from the past two days.

As a night cap to a day of continuous sport, the boxers and wrestlers are putting their second show of the week in the drive toward Empire championships.

England to-day stands prominently among winners in every department of the British Empire games. Beginning with success on opening day they captured five of the nine field, track and swimming titles. England has been to the fore in every line of competition. Her trundlers have taken leads in the competitions for bowling laurels; she has won the senior eights in rowing and she has added to her victory column with further wins at swimming.

Canadian Lose Out.

Last night's boxing and wrestling events gave the old country another opportunity to show the skill of her athletes. Four of the seven semi-finals on the boxing card were won by Englishmen, three at the expense of Canadians, while a fifth Englishman will carry on into one of the finals of the wrestling schedule. Two wrestling finals were settled last night and Canadian boys captured both titles. J. Trifinov of Regina, Sask., wears the crown to-day in the 123 pound class, after a decision in one round and a fall in the second over Joe Reid of England. From Montreal comes the open champion, Howie Thomas who scored a decision over Harold Angus of England. The highlights of the boxing card were provided by H. Miziers knockout victory over Tommy Holt of Scotland, after the Englishman had slugged his opponent into a state of helplessness, and the narrow margin by which Doc. Gallagher, Australian middleweight champion, scored his 44th consecutive triumph by defeating E. Pierce of South Africa.

England's trundlers had a field day at Gage Park. Opening in the morning with an overwhelming defeat of South Africa in the doubles, the Old Country rinks went into action in the afternoon and their quartette disposed of South Africa by 22-20.

To make it a perfect day, R. Colquohoun scored the singles victory of the day for England, defeating A. S. Reid, Canada's representative from Vancouver, 21-20. Reid has yet to win in the singles, and has been defeated twice by single shots.

Yachting honors yesterday found Canadian boats taking their share of international events. Vreda of the Royal Hamilton Yacht Club scored a win in one of the major sailing attractions while the Huskie of Watertown, N.Y., proved one of the best craft sent over by the invaders, winning her class race.

Perpetuation of the British Empire games took definite form yesterday, when a committee was named to outline a basis of organization. They will make their initial report on Friday and it is generally believed the four year plan along the lines of the Olympics will be recommended.

PETERBOROUGH MARKET QUOTATIONS

TORONTO PRODUCE.

TORONTO, Aug. 21. — Local dealers were asking still higher prices for butter and Ontario and Western supplies moved freely on a strong market. The top price asked for Ontario, 30c, was not too easy to secure, however, as buyers did not seem anxious to follow the upward trend too quickly. But sales were made at 29½c for Ontario No. 1, and at 27¾c to 28c for No. 2.

Dealers were of the opinion tha the market would steady at 30c before the end of the week as the demand has been very good, and the cool weather, which has aided materially in strengthening consumption, appears to be here for an indefinite period.

Buyers were quoted 31c for Western supplies in large lots, which was a steady price for the week. Ontario country shippers were quoted 29½c to 30c for No. 1, and 27¾c to 28c for No. 2, the higher prices applying o large lots of high scoring butter only. A 38 scoring No. 2 was required to get the high price.

Cream.

Churning cream prices held firm at 29c for special, 28c for No. 1 and 25c for No. 2, f.o.b. country points, but higher prices were forecast for later in the week.

Cheese.

Cheese quotations were lower at 16¼c for new large, 16½c for twins, and 17c for triplets. But activity locally has been very slow for some time, and dealers are not overly anxious to take on even small quantities.

Eggs.

A strong egg market continued with steady prices, both for graded lots and to the country shippers, and though the demand was good, Western supplies seemed to be taking up "the slack."

Graded Ontario eggs in free cases, were offered at 31½c for firsts and 24½c for seconds, while Western eggs were quoted 32c for extras, 29c for firsts and 26c for seconds. Extras and firsts moved free, but seconds were more difficult to dispose of.

Ontario shippers were quoted 29c for extras, 26c to 27c for firsts, and 22c for seconds, ungraded, delivered, cases returned.

MONTREAL PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, August 21. — The trade in all lines of cash grain here yesterday was fair, and values were unchanged.

A feature of the dairy and produce markets was the stronger feeling that developed for potatoes, and prices were advanced 15 cents per bag for new, locally grown stock, becoming 85c to 90c per 80-lb. bag on the wholesale market. The advance was attributed to light receipts.

The cheese market again drifted lower . Prices were reduced ½c to ¾c per pound. Receipts were 1,104 boxes.

The demand for butter was good, and prices were steady. Receipts were 427 boxes.

The undertone to the egg market was firmer under a better inquiry Receipts were 978 cases.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, August 21. — Corn led an upward flight of grain values yesterday. Authoritative estimates that United States wheat, oats, rye and barley supplies this season lumped together with corn were 435,000,000 bushels short of the actual disappearance of these grains last season, did much to bring about the soaring of prices. It was also pointed out that in addition to the shortage of grain, there have been immense losses in potatoes and other root crops as well as sorghums and forage, and that wheat and rye were approximately 50 cents under prices of a year ago with corn and oats 10 cents under.

Closing quotations on corn were unsettled, 2c to 2¾c a bushel higher than Tuesday's finish. Wheat closed firm, 1½c to 2c up; oats, 1¾c to 1¾c advanced; and provisions varying from 2 cents decline to a rise of 27 cents.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, August 21. — Wheat traded at higher levels for the greater part of yesterday's session and values at the close of the market were 1⅝c to 1⅝c up for the day.

Export business was light and cables none too firm, but this was offset by short covering chiefly on strength in corn and other grains at Chicago. There was also good buying here of May wheat against sales in the South, by Chicago houses. Offerings were liberal only at top levels.

The May future hovered around the dollar mark yesterday, reaching a high of $1.00¾ a bushel, and closed an eighth down from this.

Demand for cash wheat was slow yesterday, and only a small volume changed hands. Trading in coarse grains also was limited, and offerings generally were light.

Trent River

A 22-pound maskinonge was caught by Clayton Revoir, 13-year-old son of Hiram Revoir, of Trent River, on Monday evening at 6.30 o'clock. Clayton fought with the monster for about 30 minutes, till the fish was almost exhausted, when W. S. Kramer of Cleveland, Ohio, came to his assistance. The muskie was caught about 100 yards from their boat house. The fish weighed 22 pounds, measuring 50 inches from tip to tip, and girth 18 inches; the measurement across the head was 11 inches. The muskie had to be stunned several times. This fish is a beauty and one of the finest caught in the Trent waters this season. It is entered in The Examiner contest.

VICE-REGAL PARTY TO VISIT NORANDA

Statement From Teck Hughes President Clears Mystery Surrounding Ore Reserves.

TORONTO, Ont., August 21 (Special to The Examiner). — Attesting to the widespread nature of interest in Canadian mining, Their Excellencies Lord and Lady Willingdon will be guests of Noranda Mines during a tour of inspection of the mine and district to-morrow. It is understood the party, besides inspecting the surface plants in the field, will also visit the underground workings at Noranda and will be given an opportunity of seeing the famous H orebody as developed to-day.

The statement issued by President Dennison of Teck-Hughes could go a long way to clearing the air of some of the discussion that has been centering around this company of late. His remark regarding ore reserves is of particular interest, for if it is put before the shareholders there is little doubt some estimate of reserves will be asked for. It has been fairly well established two Canadian directors are to go on the board, and the Street is hoping well-known mining men whose knowledge of the industry might prove beneficial will be appointed.

Asked regarding the report that Dominion Mining and Smelting Company holding a property in Southeastern Ontario, had received and turned down an offer from the company. Officials of the Mining Corporation stated they have no interest whatever in the matter. It is understood some suggestion of examining of the property was entertained by the latter company, but nothing came of it.

Described as the richest hole ever drilled in copper ore anywhere in the world, Diamond Drill No. B36 of Nochanga Copper Mines in Northern Rhodesia has cut to date 65 feet vertical measurement, in a flat lying lode of ore averaging 12.2 per cent copper. As from comparison with other drilling it appears this hole should cut in all at least 100 feet of ore. It doesn't take many developments of this nature to indicate a big mine. At 12.2 per cent. ore at a thickness of 65 feet in a horizontal lode means some 1,725 pounds of copper under each square foot of surface.

SIX BELIEVED LOST IN ELECTRIC STORM

Understood Two or Three Members of English Commons Listed Among Missing.

FOWLEY, Cornwall, Eng., Aug. 21 (A.P.)—At least six persons, among whom it was thought were two or three members of Parliament and one or more women, were believed drowned when the yacht Islander was wrecked on the rocks of Lantivet Bay during a violent storm in the night.

The yacht had been chartered by Commodore Henry Douglas King, Conservative Member of Parliament, and there was grave apprehension that he, with other members who had been invited to accompany him on the cruise had perished when the yacht met disaster in a channel gale.

PLAN MILLENARY FOR FAIR.

Barnstaple, England is planning to celebrate next year the millenary of its great fair. Outlines of the celebration were made at the recent annual event, which was conducted much as it had been done for 999 years. Acting on the suggestion of Sir Basil Peto, M. P. for that division, the opening of an improvement of the waterway approach to Barnstaple to be completed next year may take the place of a pageant. Old-world ceremonia marked the inaugural of the fair this year. Visitors were regaled with spiced ale prepared from a recipe handed down from successive borough beadles. The drink was served in silver punch bowls, which form part of the borough's priceless collection of plate. The exhibits included nearly 3,000 sheep.

TROPICAL LANDS FAVOR WHEAT.

MONTREAL, P.Q.—A report issued by the Ford Research Institute of Stanford University, California, shows a strong tendency towards increased wheat consumption on the part of tropical countries. The survey covers the years from 1909 to 1927 and reveals a growth in the consumption of wheat flour in excess of the growth of population; the years from 1909 to 1913 showing an annual average per capita use of 11.24 pounds of flour while the period from 1923 to 1927 shows a rise to 12.67 per cent.

GIGANTIC GERMAN FLYING BOAT WARMS UP FOR ATLANTIC HOPE

World's Greatest Winged Liner to Call at Chicago and New York.

(Special to Examiner, Copyright, 1930) ALTENRHEIN, Switzerland, Aug. 21. —Chicago and New York, granted safe final tests, will within a few weeks, hail the world's greatest winged monster of the air—the DO-X, giant German Dornier flying boat rigged with twelve American motors of 7,200 total horsepower, capable of propelling the submarine-like craft 125 miles an hour.

Installation of the twelve Curtis Conqueror motor in the DO-X will be completed at the Dornier works here within a few days. By the end of the first week of August test flight will be made and, if found successful, will be followed later by a demonstration tour over European waters, and afterwards by a flight across the Atlantic via the Azores to the United States, including New York and Chicago.

"The DO-X has already proved that it can fly. Indeed, it has passed 40 hours in the air, or enough to have taken the ship 5,000 miles. However, the 40 hours were made in a series of short hops around Lake Constance, between Switzerland and Bavaria, usually in half-hour flights.

But despite all efforts in various cooling devices, the German-made Siemens motors—made from French patents of the British Jupiter motors—could not be made to stay cool. Hence, a long flight was out of the question until motor development caught up with German ship design.

Can Be Improved.

It is probable that four years were lost in waiting for an adequate power plant to be developed, for the DO-X was designed in 1925-1926, a result of years of research on the part of Dr. Claude Dornier, and his brother, Maurice.

Certainly the Dornier brothers have built the world's biggest flying ship, but with the experience gained, they could to-day build an even better one, for the DO-X can be bettered. Many engineers think that its twelve motors are hung too high and tend to thrust the ship's nose downwards, claiming that this makes tail stabilization necessarily exaggerated and also causes a drag.

Others contend the pontoons might cause worry and offer unexpected problems should the ship be forced to ride out on waves. The ship has never been tested in the ocean or in a heavy sea. Impressive, though, are the way the DO-X with its V-shapes hull leaves the water in the take-off and the ease with which the pilots are able to place it on the water.

Calculations made during the 40 hours of intermittent flights show that the DO-X can be operated cheaper than trains, for multiplying size did not multiply costs of operating. Fully 170 persons have been taken up at one time and the total weight lifted with the old engines was over 50 tons.

Twenty-five tons can be taken as a load. This meets Dr. Claude Dornier's ideal which was "to construct an economic ship, large enough to give the passengers security, comfort and room."

American competition also stimulated the Germans to construct a large ship, for the Germans wanted to hold their lead and construct a ship that Americans could not equal for many years.

The ship has three decks—a lower for fuel, oil and stores; a centre for passengers, cabins and kitchen; and an upper for the bridge, pilot room, chart room, engine room and radio compartment.

The passenger deck is 70 feet long, over six feet high and ten feet wide. The boat is over 120 feet long, looks like a submarine and is of duraluminum, because steel parts of the desired dimensions were not obtainable. From three to five minutes, are required to start all twelve motors and there is no vibration.

Twenty-nine theatres in Jugo-slavia have been wired for sound films.

One Killed and Two Injured In Bowmanville Fire

Dean Inge Justifies Suicide in Certain Cases; Would Let Criminals Execute Themselves

OXFORD, England, Aug. 21.—A justification for suicide in certain instances and a suggestion that criminals be allowed to execute their own death sentences were offered by Dean Inge of St. Pauls in his presidential address to the Modern Churchmen's conference here today, discussing "The Modern Outlook in Morals." The conference will continue until Saturday, its general subject being "Problems of Personal Life."

"I think every criminal condemned to death ought to be allowed to carry out the sentence on himself in his own way," said Dean Inge. Then bringing up another question which may be discussed by the liberal churchmen, that of whether a sweeping condemnation of suicides by the Church should not be reconsidered, he said, "I should not censure a man who, knowing he was dying slowly of an agonizing disease, wishes to shorten his sufferings., I must add that if I were attacked by a painful disease I hope I should have the patience to wait until the end. I don't think I should wish any one near and dear to me to act otherwise."

Among questions where the path is not so clear, he continued, are war, marriage and divorce, and "another delicate question, that of birth control."

"Some method of checking the natural growth of numbers beyond the means of subsistence is always necessary and nearly always has been practiced,' he said. "The choice lies between the new methods and the practice of abortion, which is more common here than many suppose. As liberal churchmen, our duty is to try to bring down the opposition of the traditionalists to any consideration of this vital question, and the only claim we make is that the question should be handled without prejudice."

GARAGE WORKER TRAPPED IN PIT AFTER EXPLOSION

One Man is Dead and Two Injured When Fire Sweeps Bowmanville Garage.

BODY IS RECOVERED.

Police and Firemen Are Unable to Find a Cause for the Explosion.

BOWMANVILLE, August 21.—Cecil Gatchell of Bowmanville last his life, and two other local men were injured in a disastrous fire which swept through Hately's Garage, in centre of the town, following a mysterious explosion about 10 o'clock last night.

Gatchell, with W. J. Challis and William Bagnell, were in the garage when the explosion, which shook buildings throughout the town, occurred. Challis was thrown clean out of the front door of the garage, and was badly cut about the face, and suffered other injuries. Bagnell was also cut about the face and body.

Caught in Pit.

Every available line of hose was brought into use by the Fire Department, which was on the scene shortly after the explosion. Gatchell, who was in the pit working on a car, tried vainly to release himself, and other men, rushing to the scene, caught hold of his coat in an endeavor to drag him out, but the intense headt drove them back, and Gatchell became a prey to the flames

The flames, which attracted hundreds of people from the surrounding country shot toward the sky, and although every effort was made to stem the fire and water was poured on continually, the fire burned itself practically out.

Body Is Found.

Firemen worked hard in an endeavor to find the dead man as soon as the flames allowed a close approach. After pulling away tons of debris the unfortunate man was found at the bottom of the pit in which he had been trapped. His clothing was burnt from his body and his features were hardly recognizable.

Dr. V. H. Storry, coroner, was called to the scene, and stated last night that he thought that there would have to be an inquest. Despite the efforts of the police and firemen to find a cause for the explosion, none has yet been found, and the cause is still a mystery.

Gatchell, who was well known here, leaves a wife and two small children. He was in charge of the garage in the absence of J. Hately, the owner, and had been working there for the past two years.

TWO BIG DOLLAR DAYS BRING MANY SPECIAL OFFERS IN STORES

Shopping in Peterborough Will Take on a Livelier Tone This Week-end.

BEST SALE OF SEASON.

Shopping in Peterborough will take on a livelier tone and keener interest on Friday and Saturday. The downtown streets will present a scene of busy shoppers all intent on taking advantage of the two premier bargain days of the year. Between eighty and ninety of the city's leading merchants will on these two days combine in the big Merchants and Examiner Twin Dollar Days.

Each merchant is striving to offer his best sale of the season and all have gone to endless preparation in arranging these worthwhile bargains.

Goods and material required in every modern home will be offered for sale at great reductions on these two golden shopping days. There will be groceries, ladies' wear, gentlemen's clothing, millinery, hardware, boots and shoes and all the thousand and one things that add to the comfort and joy of living.

Prizes Are Offered.

If the sheer beenfit of saving up to twenty percent on the usual purchase price of these goods is not of sufficient attraction, the merchants have combined to offer big prizes on the Dollar Day results. This is a sweepstake in which every purchase of a dollar entitles the shopper to an opportunity to win cash prizes.

Collectively the merchants are posting cash prizes totalling $150 for the guessing contest. The closest guess to the total number of estimating blanks dropped in the boxes during the two bargain days will win $50. This is the prize that every shipper will be trying for, but not only is there the major prize but also ten other big cash prizes in this one contest.

Not satisfied with that several of the merchants such as Robert Fair and McBride and Franks are offering a cash prize if the winning estimate blank has been secured in their store. In this way the nearest estimate is in a fair way to winning $70 or more.

Guess Number of Beans.

Then too The Examiner is offering an estimate for each dollar paid into this office during these two days on the number of beans in the sealer. This sealer can be seen in The Examiner window and the prizes total $35, $10 going to the nearest estimate.

Then to add some fun to the thrill of bargain hunting the Mysterious Miss Dollar will be at large on these two shopping days. To the one who captures this elusive lady The Examiner will pay a special prize of $10.

There are no strings attached to this prize but the one who wins must have something of a detective about her. All that is necessary is that before leaving home to come downstreet cut out this story about Miss Dollar and place it in your purse. Then when you come across the lady, she may be the one standing next to you at the counter because she will be out shopping too, why just say, "You are The Examiner's Mysterious Miss Dollar and here's the story about you from the paper."

Then, if it is really Miss Dollar she will 'fess up and you just accompany her to The Examiner office and collect your reward.

To aid in this search The Examiner will from time to time post bulletins in front of the office telling of some distinguishing feature of Miss Dollar's dress and outfit.

Miss Dollar will be shopping several hours morning and afternoon of the two shopping days and in the evening on Saturday she will make a last tour of the stores. She must be caught inside a store. So, if you see her on the street, trail her into a store before proving that you know her to be Miss Dollar.

Windows Are Decorated.

To-night the store windows will all be dressed with the best bargains and it will pay everyone to come up street that evening and observe for themselves the big money savers. Also watch and read the adds in The Examiner, because each will contain its news of the bargains.

Dollar Days are not new to Peterborough shoppers and they are always welcomed. Twice a year in mid-winter and mid-summer local merchants offer these big sales. For many years the sales were only of one day duration. But during the past few years they were increased to last two days. This was considerably appreciated by the shoppers since it insured that all could have a better opportunity of buying.

It is likely that Friday and Saturday will break all previous records for Dollar Days judging by the quality of the goods being offered and the big values.

King's Physician

Lord Dawson of Penn, physician to His Majesty King George, in an address in Montreal expresses the opinion that it is illogical ti prohibit all use of alcoholic beverages because some indulge to excess.

On the closing day of the Royal Agricultural Show at Manchester, England, the attendance was 40,023, the largest last-day crowd in many years.

Mrs. Nellie Dunn, 21, Believes She is "Victim of Notoriety"

OKLAHOMA CITY, Aug. 21.—Mrs. Nellie Dunn, 21, believes she is a "victim of notoriety"—but she doesn't mind much.

Mrs. Dunn's name was Nellie Kimes until she was married a year ago. In Oklahoma the name Kimes means just one thing—the same thing "Jesse James meant in Missouri in civil war days.

Mrs. Dunn was a little girl when her brother, Matt, leader of a notorious gang of desperadoes, was sent to prison for life, and another brother, George, imprisoned for killing a deputy sheriff.

"I suppose when I'm an old woman they'll still be arresting me—just cause my name used to be Kimes," sand Mrs. Dunn — in jail again—today.

Once she was arrested and charged with killing a farmer. She was acquitted, moved on. She was arrested many more times, but always released.

"This is just another case where they heard I was in town, so came and got me," she said. "The law doesn't want me to go straight. They want me in jail. They think it's fun."

"But," she added philosphically, "they'll turn me loose as soon as they investigate me a little. They always have."

A BEDTIME STORY

by Howard R. Garis

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE RUNAWAY CAKE.

"Whew!" whistled Uncle Wiggily through his front teeth which were so useful to him in gnawing carrots. "Whew!"

"What's the matter?" asked Nurse Jane Fuzzy Wuzzy. "Can't you find any adventures?"

"Whew!" whistled the rabbit gentleman again. "It's hot—that's what's the matter. It's almost too hot to think of adventures, to say nothing of looking for them."

"Indeed it is hot, Uncle Wiggily," said the muskrat lady housekeeper tying a cabbage leaf on the end of her tail for a fan with which to cool herself. "When are you going to the seashore?"

"To-morrow," answered the rabbit

Whew! whistled Uncle Wiggily.

gentleman. "I'm glad you spoke of it. I had almost forgotten about the seashore. Yes, I'll get the big auto out to-morrow and you and Mrs. Longears and the children and I will take a trip to the seashore. I hope it is cooler there than it is here in Woodland. Even the Orange Ice Mountain don't seem to cool the air any," went on the rabbit gentleman as he looked at the big hills to the west which were named Orange Ice Mountains.

"Well, take it easy now. Don't hop too fast and get any hotter than you are," advised Nurse Jane as Mr. Longears started to hop away.

"I'll be careful," he promised. "I am a little cooler already just from thinking about the seashore. We'll have fun there, Janie!"

"The children will, anyhow," squeaked Miss Fuzzy Wuzzy.

Uncle Wiggily hopped under the shade of the trees and he really felt so warm that he hardly cared whether he found an adventure or not.

"The best adventure I could have," he said, "would be to meet Mr. Whitewash the Polar Bear gentleman. I wonder where he is?"

Thinking of the big, shaggy white bear who had come from the North Pole to live in an ice cave not far from Uncle Wiggily's hollow stump bungalow, the rabbit gentleman half made up his mind to go see his friend. The cave of Mr. Whitewash was so far back under the hills that the sun never shone into it. So the ice and snow, which blew into the cave in winter, never melted in summer and thus the home of the Polar Bear was a fine place on a hot day.

"Yes, I'll go see my friend Mr. Whitewash," Uncle Wiggily said and, as he started away from a shady clump of trees where he had stopped for a rest, he heard a rustling in the bushes.

"Maybe that's Whitey now," thought the rabbit. "If it is I'll hop along with him to his cool cave."

But it wasn't the Polar Bear who was rustling in the bushes. Uncle Wiggily found that out a moment later for a sad little voice said:

"Oh, dear! it's gone! It must have run away!"

"Ha! I wonder who that is and what has run away?" thought Mr. Longears as he listened to the voice. "Maybe it is one of the Bad Chaps," he murmured, "and he tried to catch one of my little rabbits and my little rabbit ran away. I hope so, anyhow! But I'll take a look."

Peering over the top of the bushes Uncle Wiggily was most gladly surprised when he saw, not a Bad Chap, but one of his own little rabbit children—a new child named Puffy. The reason Puffy had that name was because she was always puffing out her cheeks.

"Oh, dear!" sighed Puffy just as Uncle Wiggily looked over the tops of the bushes. "It has run away."

"What has run away, my dear?" asked Uncle Wiggily, hopping out on the woodland path.

"Oh, Daddicums! I'm so glad to see you!" said Puffy. "But it has run away! Oh, dear!"

"What has run away, Puffy?" asked Mr. Longears again.

"My cake," answered the little rabbit girl. "I had a nice cake and I put it down on the path and went to get a green leaf to use as a napkin while I ate my cake and when I came back my cake was gone. I guess it ran away."

"Nonsense, my dear," said Uncle Wiggily. "A cake couldn't run away. Some one must have taken it. Was any one here except you?"

"No one but me, Daddicums," answered Puffy. "I'm sure no one took my cake. But if they did look what they left—a little puddle of water!" Puffy pointed to some water on the path. Then Uncle Wiggily laughed and asked his little rabbit:

"What kind of a cake was it that you had, Puffy?"

"It was a nice little cake of ice that Mr. Whitewash gave me," said the cute rabbit child. "It was a lovely cake of ice and I laid it down on the path and now it has run away or somebody took it and left water."

"Ha! Ha! Ha!" laughed Uncle Wiggily. "Your cake of ice didn't run away, Puffy. You left it in the hot sun and the sun melted your cake of ice. All that is left is water. But never mind, here comes Mr. Whitewash and he'll give you another cake."

This the Polar Bear gentleman did, taking Uncle Wiggily and Puffy to his cool, snowy cave until the hot sun went to bed.

What To-day Means To You.

If August 21st is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m., from 4 p.m. to 5·40 p.m. and 9 p.m. to 10·15 p.m. The danger periods are from 7·40 a.m. to 9 a.m. and 2·30 p.m. to 3·30 p.m.

It will be shown on this date that it is futile to reckon without Fate. A surprise, and possible change are in store for you, also a disappointment. Take comfort in the old English proverb, "If the sky falls, we shall have many larks."

The child born on this August 21st will have a stable and reliable character, although it will be proud and somewhat arrogant. It will be intensely enthusiastic, idealistic, and imaginative. It will be quick in its motions, as well as mentally alert.

You are unfortunately one of the worriers. You are haunted by shadowy fears. Your imagination runs wild and fills your mind with gruesome pictures which Time and Fate will never paint as realities. You are not a coward, you face anything and everything with fortitude and courage. No real trouble or misfortune will ever down you—your imaginary ones may. You are able to bury the past, you can bear the present, why not let the future take care of itself? 'Keep to the present little niche that is before you, and accomplish that in the little moment that belongs to it." You allow your work to harass you, you let trifles irritate you because you let worry enter into all the phases of your life.

You have much social ambition, a sense of dignity and personal worth, and considerable regard for appearances. You are rather carried away by outward show and taken in by people's insincerities and superficialities. Bodywork is impressive, but it is engine power that really counts. Behind your little ostentatious ways and self-importance, you possess a really homely and quiet nature. You may have higher ambitions than corcumstances or your nature can sustain. You are not a born leader, and you should be satisfied to accept a lesser role, and to play it with credit and ability. You can execute better than you can plan—you can copy better than you can originate. The influences in your life are good for home, family and children.

Just Between Us Women

A daily chat with Examiner neighbors conducted by Anne Wilcox

THERE are a number of women in Peterborough who are constantly wishing they could afford more luxuries and who feel they cannot.

• • • • • • •

They do not know, perhaps, that many luxuries may be had without extra cost.

• • • • • • •

It must be remembered that those who are rich and indulge themselves in luxuries, have to spend some time to get them, plus the money.

• • • • • • •

Women who acquire luxuries without spending money have to spend time, and in many instances more time, but they save money— and that is what appeals to many.

• • • • • • •

In looking in the dictionary, I find that "a dainty" is given as one synonym of luxury, while another is "extravagance" and still another is "free indulgence in sensual pleasures."

• • • • • • •

It is easy to see that one can have dainty things without more cost than as if they lacked this element.

• • • • • • •

It is possible, although many doubt it, to enjoy pleasures through the five senses without necessarily spending any money!

• • • • • • •

Oftentimes there is a whimsey that tickles one's senses and causes merriment. There is nothing practical nor essential about it. Therefore it becomes a luxury, a dainty thing.

• • • • • • •

One woman, about whom I read sometime ago, made patterns from different colored match tips when arranging matches in boxes. It was a form of luxury.

• • • • • • •

Everyone was amused who saw the gay star of red surrounded by white in a round match box which she rimmed with blue matches.

• • • • • • •

It was a source of endless comments. It made conversation at times when the humor of an occasion needed brightening up. The arrangement in other words was dainty.

• • • • • • •

It took time to do, but the time was not wasted for the arrangement was made when she was resting. Since she found pleasure in making the design, the work did not interefere with her relaxation.

• • • • • • •

When she found that others enjoyed her handiwork as well as she did, she made many other designs and it became fun for her.

• • • • • • •

And while we are on the subject of luxuries—why not write in and tell the rest of us what your pet luxury is? Yours may involve a little extra cost—or just a little extra time.

• • • • • • •

Every person has a pet luxury, and it is well to see if it cannot be enjoyed without extra cost, especially when one has to be thrifty.

• • • • • • •

By good management and perhaps a little extra time which will prove well spent, many a busy homemaker can indulge herself in such a luxury.

• • • • • • •

Keep in mind the fact that luxury and the spending of money are not necessarily bound together. Luxury really has nothing to do with price. It is a sensation gained which may or may not be expensive.

"I warn against soaps not made exclusively of olive and palm oils" says

Mme. BERTHA JACOBSON

The noted London beauty specialist

"When women come to me for advice, I always impress on them the need for soap and water, as cleanliness is the first step to beauty. By using Palmolive you can always be sure that your skin will retain its natural freshness of beauty."

Bertha Jacobson

MAISON DE BEAUTE POMPADOUR, LTD., 11/12 DOVER STREET, LONDON, ENG.

Reception Room of the Maison de Beaute Pompadour, Ltd.

Every skin needs the deep cleansing which only the pure vegetable oils of palm and olives can give. These cosmetic oils have been known for generations as nature's greatest beautifiers.

"BUT I warn," says Mme. Jacobson, "against the harsh effects of soaps not made exclusively of olive and palm oils. Other soaps may irritate the skin; may cause coarse pores and an unpleasant feeling of roughness. Palmolive, on the other hand, leaves the skin delightfully smooth. It is refreshing, pure, safe. Your skin needs its gentle lather, for true cleanliness, twice daily." After this cleansing, Mme. Jacobson advises the use of her Skin Tonic Pampadour—and, at night, her own special Skin Food Crème Pompadour.

For 24 years, Mme. Bertha Jacobson has conducted the Maison de Beauté Pompadour, Ltd., Mayfair's famous Beauty Salon. Here she has served many Royal personages of Europe and the leaders of British Society.

All over the world, skin specialists endorse the use of Palmolive Soap. Have agreed that this home beauty treatment will do much to create a lovely complexion.

Massage a smooth lather of Palmolive Soap and warm water gently into the skin, letting the lather get deep into every pore. Then rinse away soap, dirt, make-up with warm water, finally cold. And you'll find that your skin is wonderfully soft, smooth—protected against the vagaries of weather conditions.

Why 23,720 Beauty Specialists prefer Palmolive

Since Cleopatra's days, palm and olive oils have been famous as beautifiers. Nothing has ever supplanted them. Palmolive is a pure vegetable oil soap. Its color, its odor, its very feeling is that of nature's great cosmetic oils. It cleanses safely, beautifies easily.

You can follow such expert advice without doubt. You will like Palmolive—and find soon that you use it also for the bath. It costs no more than ordinary soap. Begin to use it right away.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Alice Michaelis

A WOMAN'S LIFE

These are the things for which a woman lives:
In youth, bright April raptures and the mirth
And joy which merely to be living gives
To those who tread enchanted realms of Earth.
Sometimes she lives for sacrifice, for pain,
For sombre things which women bear to prove
They are true heirs of Eve's unkind domain;
But always, over all, she lives for love!

And in her age a woman lives for these:
A quiet house, old china, yellowed books,
Her children's visits, thoughts of tossing seas
And far lands journeyed through; of dear ones' looks;
And ever, as the years' swift cycles move,
She lives for fragrant memories of love!

TEMPLE LEADERS HAVE CONFIDENCE IN AIMEE

LOS ANGELES, Calif., August 21 (C.P.). — More than 100 leaders of Angelus Temple have adopted a resolution of confidence in their evangelist-pastor, Aimee Semple McPherson while Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, her mother, declared stories of Mrs. McPherson's illness and assaulted blindness to be "just blah."

Mrs. Kennedy said the evangelist was recovering from a "face lifting" operation at a Malibu Beach cottage. "It was necessary to bandage her whole face, and I think this is where the blindness story started," she continued.

DAILY ROUGHAGE IS AN ESSENTIAL IN ANY DIET

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN Is Effective Relief for Constipation. Also Adds Iron to the Blood

Do you suffer from constipation? Are you one of those who have tried one "vest pocket cure" after another and still have no sense of permanent relief? If so, this is big news to you! Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is natural, effective relief for both temporary and recurring constipation. It is the original—and today is included in the diets of millions of people who formerly suffered from constipation.

When roughage is missing from food, constipation is the consequence. The soft foods we eat today seldom include enough roughage. The simple necessity, then, is to see to it that sufficient roughage is included in our food.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is the bulk that your system requires.

In addition, it is rich in iron. Scientific research proves that nearly all this iron is absorbed by the system, building red blood and bringing the glorious color of health to the complexion.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is positively guaranteed. Your money will be returned if you are not satisfied. Be sure to include it in reducing diets as a preventive for both constipation and anemia.

There are so many ways you can eat Kellogg's ALL-BRAN and enjoy it. In any form, it is appetizing. It is delicious with milk or cream. Sprinkle it over cereals and soups and notice the added flavor. Many people soak it in fruit juices. Excellent in cooked foods. Your grocer has Kellogg's ALL-BRAN in the red-and-green package. It is served in hotels, restaurants and dining-cars. Ask for it! Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

WORLD FARM CRISIS IS LINKED WITH LOSSES DURING GREAT WAR

Foreign Economists Warn U. S. About Allied Debt Factor.

GERMAN REDUCTIONS

ITHACA, N.Y., August 21. — The present world-wide crisis in agriculture is a part of the international economic depression and it will not be allayed except through international co-operation, including reduction of reparations payments and cancellation of Allied war debts by the United States, Professor M. Sering of Berlin University, head of the German Agrarian Research Institute, told 300 agricultural economists from all parts of the world assembled in a conference which opened its sessions at Cornell University to-day.

Those participating in the conference have come here to discuss the woes of farmers in their respective countries, but the very first day's proceedings revealed the prevailing opinion among the foreign visitors that these woes constitute in the aggregate one large world problem.

While M. J. B. Ezekiel, assistant chief economist of the Farm Board, discussed the question of agricultural surpluses in the United States largely from a purely American viewpoint Professor Sering, supported by Professor S. von Dieze of the University of Jena, took the problems of agricultural surpluses and price depression into the domain of international politics.

They assailed the Young plan as unbearable for Germany and argued that only by wiping the slate clean of all international financial burdens arising from the war, reducing the burden of taxation in all countries, restoring the purchasing power of consumers, ending unemployment, and reviving the normal operation of industry can international equilibrium be achieved. This, they asserted, will solve also the world agricultural crisis.

Warns Against Solution.

America is not a law unto itself and it cannot escape the consequences of a disorganized and impoverished world, Professor Sering said.

The building of tariff walls by the United States and other countries will only aggravate the crisis, warned K. T. Jutila, of Helsingfors University, Finland.

"The only way to solve the problem of the agricultural surplus is to bring down the tariff walls and remove restrictions on population movements," he said. "Modern science has made the farmer in all advanced countries too productive and too efficient. Only by international co-operation can world agriculture regain its balance."

A similar appeal for international co-operation in the domain of agriculture, although he did not touch on the question of the tariff, was made by H. C. M. Case, president of the American Farm Economic Association. A. W. Ashby, president of the Agricultural Economics Society of Great Britain, spoke along the same lines.

Emphasizing "the growing internationalization of the agricultural problem," L. K. Elmhurst, of England, stated that "merely to rationalize the business of agriculture does not solve the problem, for the control of the agricultural surplus, from which the United States, like other countries, is suffering, will require greater co-operation on an international scale than has even been seen before.

"Unless this is brought about we cannot hope to maintain or elevate the farmers' standards of life," Mr. Elmhurst said.

Address by Professor Sering.

"Even the United States is not an autonomous body which could live an economic life for herself," said Professor Sering, analyzing the industrial depression in European and other countries. "It is the wealth and surplus of her soil which makes her dependent on international trade, especially her farmers on the purchasing power of their foremost foreign buyer, industrial Europe."

Professor Sering found the main causes of the present agricultural and industrial depression in the destruction wrought by the war, increasing barriers to free commerce, the political tension and antagonism which pervade Europe and Asia with their half-billion of inhabitants and the perturbations incident to the Russian revolution.

He took occasion to attack Aristide Briand's Pan-European plan as "a political scheme directed, as all political constellations always are, against a third party," and asserted it was doomed to failure because it attempted "to consolidate for all time" the present political situation, rather than clear away obstructions to Europe's economic progress.

Professor Sering painted Germany's situation in somber colors, including the condition of German agriculture, industry and the State, and remarked that in addition to approximately $500,000,000 which Germany must pay annually in reparations, she also bears the burden of the payment of $250,000,000 per annum as payments on foreign loans.

He expressed the belief that the Young plan provision which calls for a reduction in German payments on a rise in gold value should soon be put into effect. Germany accepted the payment demand embracing the "real reparations debt," which totals $2,620,000,000 and is to be paid in 37 years.

"But the largest share of German obligations, $6,170,000,000, does not pertain to reparations for war damages but is destined rather to cover the interallied debts, which goes in the long run to the United States," he asserted.

"This unprotected part can be reduced, and in view of Germany's economic situation a reduction seems to be unavoidable. But a claim to such reduction can be raised only in case the United States is ready to reduce or cancel the allied debts. Should the situation persist unaltered, no hopes can be held out for a real recovery of Central Europe."

The European situation, Professor Sering said, "will be reflected in agricultural and industrial conditions in this country.

Conditions Interdependent.

"The cause of the grave agricultural depression lies in the coincidence of great technical advances with consequent increase of production and a lowering of purchasing power in industrialized Europe caused by other than economic reasons," Professor Sering declared in concluding his analysis of the world economic situation.

"Crises which arise from technical progress find their solution in the universalization of such progress. To what an extent this takes place is dependent upon intelligence and will power.

"Germany's misfortune is that the lowering of the unjust reparations tribute is bound with the policy of the United States. I do not think, however that the United States has any moral obligation to cancel the interallied debts. If the allied nations have no moral claim upon the United States for such cancellations, Germany likewise has no such moral claim.

"However, our duty at an international conference such as this is to show the economic consequences, and I have tried to demonstrate the great influence which the political situation in Europe and the reparations question have on the interests of the agricultural and industrial peoples of the world.

"The only real solution of the international agricultural and industrial depression is a universal understanding of the causes of the depression, which would build up a feeling of solidarity. Such solidarity should exist between all nations, which are bound to each other by the unbreakable ties of international trade."

Farm Board Policy Discussed.

Mr. Ezekiel's paper was largely a defense of the Farm Board's policy in treating the problem of the agricultural surplus in the United States. In this connection he spoke strongly against any suggestion of dumping of American farm products abroad.

"The United States cannot afford to solve its agricultural problem by ways and means which make the problem worse for the rest of the world, like dumping," he said. "We cannot act the bull in the china shop. As a continuous policy, proper adjustment of production is much more desirable."

The transfer, if that be possible, of a section of the agricultural population to industry, was a suggestion made by Mr. Ezekiel.

The conference was opened with an address by Dean A. R. Mann of the Cornell Agricultural College. The science of agricultural economics was coming into its own with ever increasing effect, he said, adding that at no time was the need of international collaboration of workers in this field more imperative.

CANADIAN CATTLE GOING TO BRITAIN

Ontario Steers Comprise First Shipment to Great Britain Since 1928.

OPPORTUNITIES OFFERED.

MONTREAL, Aug. 21.—Canadian beef will re-enter the British market for the first time since 1928 with the shipment from Montreal this week of 128 head of grade Hereford and Shorthorn steers, bred in Ontario and now consigned to a firm of importers in Manchester.

The majority of the steers were raised on the farms of P. J. Henry of Ridgetown, Ont., and A. J. Campbell of Dutton, Ont., and were brought on the Canadian Pacific Railway to the eastern cattle market in Montreal by D. Munroe & Sons and D. A. Campbell, local livestock exporters, to await shipment in the S.S. Manchester Commerce.

Shippers of live stock believe that the British market, dead for the past few years so far as Canada was concerned, once more offers remarkable opportunities to Canadian breeders.

There were only 10 cases of murder of persons over one year old in London last year, the average for the last 30 years being 22.

COWBOYS THRIVE ON THE PRAIRIES

Ranching is Moving Northward And More Boys Are Needed.

HORSE NOT DOOMED

REGINA, Sask., Aug. 21 (Special to The Examiner, Copyright 1930). — There are thousands of combine reapers at work on the Canadian prairies. In Saskatchewan there are now fully 10,000 "horseless" farms.

Harvester excursions from eastern provinces have faded into history and the grain grower of western Canada now finds sufficient harvest help in his own district.

Modern inventions have started a revolution on the Canadian prairies and power machinery is making a big bid to oust the horse. Already one in every dozen Saskatchewan farms in the "horseless" class.

Is the horse doomed? Will the cowboy and the plough-boy, the range pony and the hayrack pass into history?

Not yet. Possibly not for many years. There are a million and a quarter horses in Saskatchewan, a third of all the horses in Canada. They are all on farms or ranches.

They have been crowded, but not seriously, by the introduction of power machinery. The western Canada farmer, rapped on the knuckles by low grain prices, has turned to smaller farms and more mixed farming.

On the big farms the combine reaper-thresher does a big job. On the thousands of smaller farms the horse has a future.

There are more cow-boys in Saskatchewan to-day than for some years past. Ranching is moving northward, up towards the forest areas beyond the fifty-third parallel.

The ultra modern power machinery and the romance of the round-up days continue to exist quite successfully in the spacious west.

GEORGE C. VANSTONE IS BAILED FOR TRIAL

Appearing in County police court yesterday afternoon, before Magistrate Langley, on a charge of fraudently omitting to account for the sum of $40 while employed as manager of the Lakefield branch of The H. A. Boyle Company Limited, George C. Vanstone was granted bail in the sum of $3000. He will stand for trial at the first Grand Jury sittings in the County of Peterborough.

MARRIAGE LINKS OLD FAMILIES

Granddaughter of Lady Hughes and Frank De Lesseps Wedded in Toronto.

WELL KNOWN IN LINDSAY.

LINDSAY, Aug. 21.—The descendants of two of this district's proudest and most distinguished families were united in a most romantic way last week, when Francis de Lesseps, grandson of the late Sir William Mackenzie, of Kirkfield, was married to Aleen Green, granddaughter of Lady Hughes and the late Sir Sam Hughes, of Lindsay, according to reports received from Toronto.

Details of the marriage of the young people, who are both 17 years of age, have not been disclosed, an announcement having been made as follows:

"he marriage took place in Toronto on Tuesday, August 12, of Miss Aleen Green to Francois de Lesseps.

"Miss Green is the daughter of Col. and Mrs. Byron M. Green and granddaughter of Lady Hughes and the late General Sir Sam Hughes. Mr. de Lesseps is the son of the Comtesse and the late Comte de Lesseps and the grandson of the late Sir William and Lady MacKenzie.

"Mr. and Mrs. de Lesseps have left on an extended motor trip in the west."

Col. and Mrs. Green, 188 Balmoral Avenue, parents of the bride, are at their summer home at Haliburton and the Comtesse de Lesseps, whose city residence is 55 Ridge Avenue, is summering at Kirkfield. Efforts to reach them last night were fruitless, and relatives in the city could shed little light on the romance.

From an unofficial source it was learned that the ceremony was performed by a superannuated Methodist minister of advanced years.

Francois de Lesseps has been for the past few years a student at Appleby, where he was popularly known to his friends as "Frank". He and his older brother, Guy, were students at the college at the time their father, Comte Jacques de Lesseps, lost his life in the Bay of Fundy on an aerial exploration trip.

Both boys have shown since childhood keen interest in flying, the profession followed by their father, and in which he was a pioneer. Comte de Lesseps will be remembered by many Canadians as the first flyer in Canada when he flew over the Canadian National Exhibition grounds and thrilled thousands of exhibition visitors 20 years ago.

Mr. Guy de Lesseps has already entered the profession of his father, having left shcool to enter a French officers' training school with the object of entering the French air service.

Both the young benedicts are well and favorably known here. Frank de Lesseps will be remembered by the students writing departmental examinations at the local collegiate this June, as he came in from Kirkfield every day by motorcycle, to write and was invariably late. Miss Green is also known, locally, from her visits to her grandmother, Lady Hughes, Glenelg street, town.

CUNARD LINE IS 90 YEARS OLD

Arrival of Britannia From Liverpool and Halifax Occasion of Rejoicing.

HELD AT BOSTON.

BOSTON, Aug. 21.—Ninety year ago this week the good people of Boston gathered along the waterfront to welcome a marvelous new ship, the first Cunarder to reach Boston. The "Britannia" left Liverpool on July 4, 1840, for Halifax, N. S., and Boston, initiating the bi-weekly service of the Cunard Line. This port had been chosen as the terminus of the line because of its nearness to the Maritime Provinces and the superiority of its harbor and wharf accommodations.

Her arrival on July 18 was the signal for one of the greatest demonstrations in the history of the port. Guns were fired, rockets set off and throngs crowded the shore and cheered as the little wooden paddle wheeler steamed into the harbor. A huge dinner was ordered at the Maverick House in East Boston to fete Samuel Cunard, of Halifax, who had made the first voyage with the Britannia. The mayor of Boston and hundreds of others attended. A toast proposed by Edward Everett was: "The Honorable Samuel Cunard—the founder of direct steam navigation between Great Britain and Boston—a wise negotiator—while governments are arguing about the boundaries, he makes a successful incursion with a peaceful force, into the heart of the country."

The day after his arrival, Mr. Cunards received 1,873 invitations to dinner. Rev. Ezra Gannett delivered a sermon extolling the event and its significance in the Federal Meeting House.

The Britannia was 207 feet long and 34 feet in breadth inside her paddle boxes, and 24 feet deep in the hold. Her gross tonnage was 1,156 and displacement 2,050 tons.

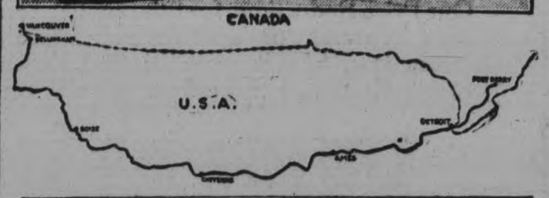
Her engines were constructed on the side lever principal, then universally in vogue, and developed 740 nominal horse-power, capable of driving her at 8½ knots on a coal consumption of 38 tons a day. She carried three masts rigged fore and aft, with two square cross-yards on her fore and main masts.

The Britannia was fitted to carry 115 cabin passengers and 225 tons of cargo. Her upper deck, in addition to officers' cabins, galley and bakery, sported cow houses. On the main deck were two dining saloons and passenger accommodations.

In contrast to this celebration of 90 years ago the liner Laconia, one of the newest and fleetest of the Cunard boats, steamed into the harbor this week with all flags flying to celebrate the anniversary of the Cunard Line. If only the people who stood and marvelled at the Britannia could walk up the gangplank and inspect this present-day greyhound of the sea.

Little Norah Wilson and Patricia Whitney of Longfield, England, have been commissioned by two wealthy Americans to train hunting horses.

Pontiac Makes Sensational Trip



STOCK CAR COVERS 3,458 MILES IN 84¾ HOURS

A Pontiac custom sedan taken from stock travelled from Port Perry, Ontario, to Vancouver, B.C., a distance of 3,458 miles, in 84¾ hours running time. It was driven by H. R. Archer, Pontiac dealer at Port Perry, Ontario, and one of his salesmen, G. M. Williams, both of whom are shown in the upper picture beside the car which gave them a thrilling ride to the Pacific Coast. Below, a sketch of the route followed, with overnight stops marked. The Pontiac's running time for the distance was better than the fastest train time between the same points.

ONTARIO SAFETY RESPONSIBILITY LAW

An analysis of the new Ontario Safety Responsibility Law, which goes into effect on September 1, is provided in a publication just issued by the Canadian Automobile Underwriters' Association, containing the statement that the law is "intended to encourage safe and careful driving and to penalize reckless or careless drivers.'

"The Act will apply penalties only to those who bring themselves under it," declares the publication. Under this law the automobile operator's license and his motor vehicle permit will be suspended until the holder has given proof of his financial responsibility if any one of six specified offences has been committed by him, or her, in any Province of Canada or any State of the U.S.A. Four methods of establishing financial responsibility are outlined.

This proof will be required also in case the license-holder has failed to pay any final judgment against him, or her, for damages caused to any person to the limit of $5,000 for one person and $10,000 if two or more persons have been injured, or to the property of another in excess of $100 and up to $1,000 arising out of a motor vehicle accident, whether such judgment be rendered against him or her, in Ontario or in any other Province of Canada.

Offences Mentioned In Act.

The offences mentioned in the act are: reckless driving if any injury to any person or property occurs therewith; racing on a highway; exceeding the speed limit if any injury to any person or property occurs therewith; failing to remain at or return to the scene of an accident; driving without a license; and any criminal offence involving use of a motor vehicle which includes any conviction for driving a motor car while intoxicated.

The suspension of an owner's permit applies to all cars belonging to the owner. A suspended operator's license or motor vehicle permit will not be restored until damages awarded by any Canadian Court have been paid. Payment of damages by instalments may be authorized by an Ontario Court in giving judgment, but proof of financial responsibility will then be required for the future.

Proof of financial responsibility may be given by any one of the following methods: filing of a policy of an authorized insurance company with limits of $5,000/10,000 for public liability and $1,000 for property damage; filing of bond of an authorized guarantee or surety company; filing of a bond by two sureties approved by the county judge; or deposit or securities to the amount of $11,000. When proof of financial responsibility has been required, it must be continued for three years.

Applies To All Motor Vehicles

According the Canadian Underwriters' analysis of the Act, if the person to whom an insurance policy was issued has violated its terms either in misstatement in his application or in breach of the conditions, the person injured may still claim against the insurance company; but in that event the insurance company, by a provision of their policy, may have a right of action against their policyholder for recovery of the damages paid in his behalf.

The law applies to all automobiles, motor trucks, trailers, motorcycles and tractors.

Every motor accident in Ontario resulting in injury to any person or damage to any property which apparently exceeds $50, must be reported to the police by the persons involved and by the police to the Registrar of Motor Vehicles in Ontario. The Registrar will keep a permanent record for each person involved, and a copy of such driving record may be obtained on request and payment of a fee of $1.00. Under reciprocal arrangements, any driving offence committed by an Ontario motorist outside the Province may be reported to the Registrar in Toronto, who may then require proof of financial responsibility.

Any person insured, according to the Act, may obtain a certificate of insurance from the company which has issued him the policy, and file it with the Registrar to show financial responsibility, so that in the event of an offence under the Act, his license or permit would not be immediately suspended.

The new Act is not retroactive as to any accident or conviction which occurs prior to September 1, 1930, when the Act goes into force, nor is the filing of proof of financial responsibility possible until after that date.

The law was passed by the Ontario Legislature on recommendation of the Hon. Mr. Justice Hodgins, as Royal Commissioner, after exhaustive inquiry by him in Canada, Great Britain, and the United States. It has been endorsed by the Ontario Motor League, by the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, by the Ontario Associated Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce, by the Toronto Board of Trade, and by the Canadian Automobile Underwriters' Association.

MONKS HOLD SECRETS BY WHICH ARMIES MIGHT DISCOVER PASSES

Five Unknown Paths Made Ascent of Mt. Kanthenjunga Easy.

HELD IN SACRED BOOK

NEW YORK, Aug. 21 (By The Canadian Press).—The recent unsuccessful siege of the mighty Mount Kanchenjunga is the cause of smiles among a group of Holy Llamas who have in their possession, according to a report just received here from an Indian Government source, a sacred book in which an account is given of five paths which make the conquest of the 28,150-foot peak comparatively easy. The cherished volume is said to be preserved by the Buddhist priests in the secret archives of the Talung monastery in Central Sikkim—a region to which few Europeans have penetrated.

The eyes of no European have ever dwelt upon the mysteries of the holy book so far as is known, G. L. Remington, resident manager here of the India State Railways, said in revealing the unusual information which has come to him from an Indian Government bureau. The book, which is called "Neyik," is kept under lock and key in the Talung monastery together with relics of former kings and Holy Llamas and deeply sacred objects.

Permission to visit the region in which the monastery is located in the mountain fastness of Central Sikkim is rarely granted to a European by the Maharajah who rules the country. As to studying the cherished volume of the priests, Mr. Remington pointed out that the fact that no European has ever been allowed to do so shows dow difficult, if not impossible, the fulfillment of that desire is.

The Llamas assert, it is reported, that the angry Kanchenjunga—regarded by many mountain climbers as the most difficult peak in the world to conquer—has actually been ascended by native climbers in the past. No dates, names or places of such an exploit, however, are given. The Buddhist priests further say that access to each of the five "easy" paths to the top of Mount Manchenjunga is gained by a gate. This gate is said to be made of stone and the holy men maintain that each gate has a key, hidden near by.

Partly Legend.

Although pointing out that the story of the existence of the mysterious sacred volume which is supposed to make conquest of the mountain which has successfully defied the most thorough expeditions of European scientists is probably a mixture of legend and fact, the Indian report contends that there is an excellent likelihood that the Llama priests have in their possession knowledge which would prove of great value to European mountain climbers.

At least one fact which leads to serious consideration of the story if that Kanchenjunga literally translated in the Tibetan language means: "The five treasures of the glaciers." These five treasures, the priests say, are the five gates in their story.

Mount Kanchenjunga, to the hillmen of the country, is a sumbol of religion. The snow-capped work of nature with its mighty glaciers weighing millions of tons, is revered as a mighty god holding in its power the destinies of human beings. It is because of this religious aspect of the mountain in the eyes of natives that the failure of the recent expedition to Mount Kanchenjunga is no surprise to the Llama priests.

Conquest of the mountain is hopeless, unless the attempt is preceded by a long period of proper worship of the grim peaks and wine offerings are made to the "gods of the peaks," according to the Buddhists. Worship played no part in the recent Kanchenjunga expedition. Hence, it was a failure. So contend the Llamas.

A serious campaign to win the favor of these priests, with the observance of the rigid routine prescribed by them, would be very much worth while, in the opinion of Mr. Remington. Access to the sacred volume in the Talung Monastery may provide valuable knowledge in the conquest of glaciers, learned by hillmen during centuries of fighting frowning mountains, but which as yet is unknown to the comparatively inexperienced Europeans, he said.

Little hope of reaching the top of Kanchenjunga during the present generation was held out by Frank S. Smythe of the recent expedition upon his return to civilization. He declared that the mountain would be conquered ultimately, but before that day arrives mountain climbers must learn a great deal more than they now know about the perils to be encountered.

"Kanchenjunga will be climbed when some drug has been discovered which will enable men to acclimate himself to the physical difficulties which have to be faced at these enormous heights," he explained. "We tried every route that offered a chance of approach, but everywhere we were baffled by ice walls of gigantic size."

General C. G. Bruce, associated with several expeditions to climb Mount Everest, the highest peak in the world, has said that an ascent of Kanchenjunga offers a much more difficult problem in mountain climbing. In his opinion and that of many other experienced mountain climbers, the conquest of Kanchenjunga offers by far the most serious obstacles of any mountain on the globe.

TEXTILE WORKERS REFUSE WAGE CUT

500 in Two Plants Go On Strike in North Carolina.

BESSEMER CITY, N.C., Aug. 21.—Five hundred employees of two of the American Mills, textile manufacturing plants, went on strike today in protest against a wage cut that was to have gone into effect this morning.

E. L. Gillespie, spokesman for the strikers, said they had no union affiliation.

"The walkout has no connection with communism," he added.

The two mills, owned by Robert, Frank and Max Goldberg of Gastonia, were closed because of the strike. Every employee of the two plants went out, Gillespie said. A mass meeting held in the public park yesterday resulted in a unanimous vote for the walkout, strike leaders said.

The wage cut, Gillespie said, amounted to 20 or 30 per cent.

A conference with the Goldbergs, who also own four mills in Gastonia, was being sought today by the strikers.

Chief of Police Sam Hoyle of Bessemer City said the textile section was quiet and that there had been no disorder.

Strikes were general in textile plants at Gaston County in the Spring and Summer of 1929, but today's walkout at Bessemer City was the first labor disturbance in the section this year.

O. F. Alderholt, Gastonia Chief of Police, was fatally shot in a disturbance at a camp set up by the Textile Workers' Union for strikers from the Loray Mill at Gastonia. Seven union leaders were convicted of second degree murder and sent to prison. Their appeals are before the North Carolina Supreme Court.

Mrs. Ella Mae Wiggins, a Bessemer City striker, was shot to death in September last year. Her slayer was never identified.

Miss Irene Brock of San Francisco, motored unaccompanied from that place, a distance of 4,000 miles, and spent two weeks with her cousin, Mrs. Harry Endicott. She left for home on Friday, going by way of St. Johns, Newfoundland.

Rev. J. R. Wattam, a representative of the Ontario Prohibition Union, took charge of the services in Trinity United Church, on Sunday in the absence of the pastor who is on vacation. While in town Rev. Mr. Wattam was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. H. McGinness. Next Sunday, Rev. W. J. H. Smyth of Wellington will occupy the pulpit.

Rev. John Riddell, of Millbrook, occupied the pulpit in St. Andrew's Presbyterian church on Sunday morning. The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered; also two children were baptized, the Burritt baby and the Bulbeck baby.

PILE SUFFERERS

You can only get quick and permanent relief by removing the cause—congestion of blood in the lower bowel and a weakening of the parts. Nothing but an internal medicine can do this—that's why cutting and salves fail. Dr. J. S. Leonnardt discovered a real internal Pile remedy. After prescribing it for 1000 patients with success in 960 cases, he named it HEM-ROID. Druggists everywhere now sell it, and McDermid & Jury, Bonds Drug Store guarantee money-back if HEM-ROID does not end Piles in any form.

C.G.E. To Meet Point Anne In O.B.A. Playdowns

CANADIAN GENERALS CLOUT WAY TO 10-4 VICTORY IN THE FINAL GAME OF E.P. LEAGUE PLAY-OFFS

Victors Hit Hard in Fifth and Sixth to Take the Final Decision.

PRESENT T. T. T. CUP.

Len Hollingsworth and Stan Jones Stars of Interme. diate Battle.

Canadian Generals clouted their way to the East Peterborough League championship last night, taking the final contest by the score of 10 to 4. Crescents did exactly what nine out of ten other clubs would do under the same circumstances—and cracked wide open. After taking an early lead Canadian Generals hit hard in the fifth and again in the sixth for eight runs and won in a walk. During this swatfest the Crescents were not playing the brand of ball that threw a mighty scare into the camp of the Electricians earlier in the series.

At the conclusion of the contest Ken Sloan, local manager for Tip Top Tailors presented the trophy donated by his firm for annual competition in the league, to the winners, Manager Art Primeau accepting the silverware for his club.

The champions go into action again next Saturday afternoon when they entertain the Point Anne hand-picked champions at Exhibition Park. The game is the first in the first round of the O.B.A.A. Intermediate semi-finals and should produce an interesting afternoon for the fans.

Two of the younger players of the winning club must be given a large share of the credit for the victory. Len Hollingsworth with three singles and as many runs and Stan Jones with a pair of hits and two runs combined for half the number of counters collected by the victors and their hitting drove in three more.

Utronki had the better of the argument with Masterson and Hardill and although shakey at several stages of the contest, he was ably assisted by his teammates who came to his aid when danger threatened. The Crescents played poorly behind Masterson but did better with Hardill on the mound, after the Canadian Generals had the game well in hand.

Canadian Generals won the toss and Utronki proceeded to throw out Lebarr, who had been moved up lead off position. Joe Jones went out on a fly to Red Hollingsworth, who was playing right field. Crary dumped the ball down third and Utronki did some fast work to field the ball and retire the runner.

Stan Jones, leading off for Generals, struckout. H. Hollingsworth was pegged out by Crary and Joe Jones came in fast to make a great catch of Rose's fly.

In the second, Collins flew out to L. Hollingsworth, Hickey walked and Masterson sent out another fly to L. Hollingsworth. F. Jones struckout.

Ash Scores First.

Swanston shot a single into middle, only to be forced by Ash, but the first-baseman reached second when Collins' throw went through Crary to the outfield, and went on to third to score on Utronki's infield out down first to Hickey. Smith grounded out.

With two out of the way in the third, Utronki wobbled to pass Lebarr and J. Jones, but got Crary on strikes to stop trouble.

Len Hollingsworth cracked a single into middle and went down on Johnston's sacrifice, and on to third when Masterson was a bit slow in throwing Johnston out. Jones slapped a hit into short left to score the run. H. Hollingsworth flew out to F. Jones and Sweetman after a fumble nailed Rose at first.

Crescents got a run back in the fourth, Abbie Rose helping the cause by dropping Collins' pop back of the mound. Hickey smashed a bat on his grounder to Johnston, the play forcing Collins at second. Stan Jones made a neat stab of Masterson's clout and forced Hickey at second. Then along came a break for the Generals. F. Jones hit hard into left, Smith stopping the ball with his foot to save extra bases. Sweetman came through with a single into left to score Masterson. Heard, who hit hard throughout the series, failed to deliver other than an infield out to end the rally.

After Swanston had grounded out, Ash drove a single through second. Utronki flied out to F. Jones who rifled the ball to Hickey for a double killing on Ash on his way to second.

Lebarr was pegged out by Rose in the fifth. J. Jones hit through short and was on third when Smith got the ball in. Crary struckout and Ash went well back to take Collins' fly.

Generals Get Four.

And then the blow fell. Smith went out on a throw from Heard, Hickey taking a low throw nicely. L. Hollingsworth helped himself to another single and scored when Johnston's one-base clout hopped through Lebarr for a triple. Stan Jones sent his second single between first and second to score Johnston. At the worst possible moment Joe Jones came in and dropped H. Hollingsworth's fly. He came back to take Rose's hoist but the Generals were not through yet. Swanston slipped a single through short to score Jones, and Hollingsworth tallied when Sweetman went far afield and dropped Ash's fly. That was enough for Masterson and Hardill going to the mound retired the side on a grounder from Utronki.

Crescents came along in the sixth with a run. Hickey singled and Hardill got a soft hit when Rose and Jones watched his infield fly drop. F. Jones' grounder forced Hickey at third but Sweetman's single into right scored Hardill.

Generals put over another quartette of counters, Smith leading off with a double when he should have been held at first. Len Hollingsworth got his third single to score Smith. Johnston struckout. Stan Jones' grounder rolled through Sweetman and scored Hollingsworth. H. Hollingsworth struckout and Rose was hit. Swanston singled into left and Jones and Rose followed him in when F. Jones threw wide to the plate. Ash struckout, but had to be thrown out.

Crescents Get Two.

The seventh brought a pair of runs to Crescents, Collins getting a double when Johnston and Ash backed up on the catcher's fly and with Red Hollingsworth looking on allowed the ball to drop. Hickey came through with a single, both runners scoring when Hardill hit through short. Utronki tightened up on F. Jones and Sweetman, and fanned both.

Utronki fouled out to Collins who came out of the cage. Smith singled into left and reached second where he watched L. Hollingsworth strikeout and Johnston ground out.

The eighth held nothing for Crescents who went out in a row. Generals took the same count in their half.

Crary flied out to Smith in the ninth and Collins fanned swinging. Hickey drew a walk and Hardill lined down to Ash to end the game.

Three Swimmers Picked As Favorites To Win In Lake Ontario Marathon on Friday Morning

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 21. — (C.P.)— Early to-day 44 highly trained women will gather at Arena Gardens, scene of many a grim hockey battle in the past, to face the acid test of a medical examination that will either qualify or disqualify them as competitors in the women's section of the Canadian National Exhibition swimming marathon to be held here Friday.

This will be the last preliminary before the big splash. All of the swimmers have ceased heavy training and arose early this morning nervously awaiting the physical examination that the final barrier between them and their effort at winning fame and gold by ploughing through the notoriously cold waters of Lake Ontario.

While the general public is doing considerable speculating as to who will be returned the winner after the 10 long miles have been traversed, close critics believe the major prize of $5,000 rests between the United States' Olympic champion, Ethel McGarry, Buffalo, Ethel Hertle-Gary, Bronx, N. Y., Ruther Tower-Corsan, and Olive Gatterdam, both of Toronto.

Toronto Club Inflicts Double Defeat on Skeeters and Gains on Leaders.

ORIOLES GAINING.

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 21 (C.P.)— Another day or so of the way the Baltimore Orioles have been going and the way the Rochester Redwings haven't and there'll be a new leader in the International League.

Ten days ago the Redwings were out in front setting a merry pace, six full games in front of their nearest rival—the Orioles. To-day, however, these same Orioles are just one game out of first place and travelling at a furious rate. They have won nine of their last eleven games, while the best the Redwings could do was to take five out of thirteen—hardly what one would call championship ball.

Baltimore picked a full game yesterday by taking a doubleheader from the Montreal Royals while the league champions were breaking even with the Newark Bears. The score of the first Baltimore-Montreal contest was 11 to 2, and that of the nightcap 3 to 1.

A five-run attack drove Herb. Thormahlen from the mound in the fourth inning of the opener, but Buckalew and Smith were unable to stem the tide of the Orioles' slugging. Stuart Bolen had the best of John Pomorski in a pitch duel in the second encounter, the former being touched for five hits, and the latter six.

Rochester took the first game with Newark 5 to 4, but the Bears came back to capture the second 3 to 1, in seven innings. The first encounter went ten innings, a wild throw by Brennan on Worthington's bunt, allowing Wilson to romp with the winning run. It was too much Jess Petty for the Redwings in the abbreviated nightcap, the former major league southpaw, letting the champions down with four hits.

Sweep for Leafs

The Toronto Maple Leafs made a clean sweep of to-day's double bill and the series with Jersey City, winning 6 to 0, and 10 to 3. In the first tilt Frank Barnes held the Skeeters to four safeties, but the second was a pitchers' battle between Kyle Graham and George Miner. That is, it was for five innings or until Graham was chased to the showers by the umpires for mixing with Stewart in a fist fight.

In the Leafs' half of the same inning Miner wavered and before Moore could get warmed up and rush to his rescue, eight hits had spelled eight runs. Two more tallied before Moore succeeded in getting the Leafs out, thus accounting for all of Toronto's runs in one frame. Sheedy drove in four runs in the wild inning, two with a triple and a like number with a double on his second time at the plate.

CANDYMEN WIN 9-7 DECISION FROM GROCERS

Heavy Hitting and Good Fielding Are Features of Softball Final.

MONTGOMERY HIT HARD.

Len. Forsythe and G. Dormer Are Star Players for the Winners.

Sugar Bowl are City Softball League champions by virtue of their 9-7 win over Harrison's last night at Central School grounds. The game was a fast, interesting struggle, featured by clever fielding and good hitting.

Sugar Bowl won the game at the outset, scoring nine runs in the first four innings. Harrison's never quit trying and came within two of tieing it up in the seventh when they scored four runs.

The Grocers made a mistake in starting Montgomery. The big fellow, who had pitched Monday and Tuesday, did not have the stuff, and was touched for nine runs and nine hits. Parsons, who relieved him in the fifth, pitched superb ball. The Bowlrites failed to touch his delivery for a hit or run. Only two men reached first base in the five innings he worked, both on walks. It was a good display of pitching.

Len Forsythe twirled his second win in two nigths. Forsythe was touched for eleven hits, but was given good support by his teammates. Eight Harrison men were stranded on the runways.

G. Dormer was the fielding star of the game handling ten chances with one slip. Willshaw was the next best, playing good ball at third.

Mel Dobson, whose hitting during the series has being a big factor in Harrison's play, again gave a fine exhibition with the willow. He collected three hits, which included a homer, a double and a single. In twenty-seven appearances at bat in the series, Dobson has collected fifteen hits, many of them going for extra bases.

Westbrooke hit his second home run of the series, and collected two doubles also.

Sugar Bowl started the game away by getting one run. Maudsley flew out to Playford to start. Westbrooke doubled to right and scored on H. Dormer's sacrifice hit to Smith. Gillespie flied out to Parsons.

The Bowlrites took a commanding lead in their half of the second. Forsythe opened with a double to centre. G. Dormer doubled to right scoring Forsythe. He made third when Parsons threw over Willshaw's head and scored when Willshaw pegged wild to Dobson. Weese singled to centre. Bradshaw flied out to Clarke. Maudsley flied out to Smith. Connors walked. Westbrooke doubled to right, scoring Weese and Connors. H. Dormer doubled to centre, scoring Westbrooke. Gillespie doubled to right, scoring H. Dormer. Gillespie was out on a batted ball from Forsythe.

Harrison's got one back in the third. Dobson singled after Calladine had flied out to Westbrooke. Smith singled, Dobson pulling up at third. Playford hit to Weese, who failed to get Dobson at the plate. The rest were easy.

Sugar Bowl got their last runs of the game in the fourth. Connors started by grounding out to Willshaw. Maudsley singled to right. Westbrooke hit a long homer to right, scoring Maudsley ahead of him. H. Dormer flied out to Playford, and Willshaw tossed out Gillespie.

Parsons went in to pitch in the fifth and turned the Bowlrites back without a hit or a run for the remainder of the game. He struck out six.

Harrison's counted four in the seventh. Calladine grounded out to Bradshaw to start the inning. Dobson hit a long homer to left. Smith flied out to Weese. Playford singled to centre. Clarke walked. Montgomery singled to left, scoring Playford. When Westbrooke lost Parson's fly. Clarke and Montgomery scored. Connors threw Parsons out when he attempted to steal.

Harrison's lost a great chance in the eighth when Vinnette was thrown out at the plate by G. Dormer, when he attempted to come home on the short stop's error of Dobson's hit.

8TH STRAIGHT FOR BOB GROVE

Athletics Give Moundsman Airtight Support as He Cops His 21st Victory.

SENATORS DROP BROWNS.

NEW YORK, Aug. 21 (C.P.)—While the National League pennant race goes merrily on without getting very near to a decision, the Philadelphia fans are about ready to hear the news that the Athletics have clinched the American League title for another year. It may be a good many days before that news arrives, but in the eyes of the A's supporters, it is certain to come, while a good many of their rivals are conceding defeat.

One thing is certain now, that it will require an amazing winning streak on the part of the Washington Senators or the New York Yankees combined with a wholly unexpected slump on the part of the A's to keep the world's champions from capturing another American League flag. After yesterday's 10-6 victory over Detroit, the Athletics had only 31 games left to play and a margin of 8½ games over Washington. If Philadelphia slumps so far as to lose half of its remaining contests, winding up the season with 98 victories and 56 defeats, Washington must win 25 of its remaining 34 games, to tie while the Yankees, now ten games behind, could lose only seven of 33 games.

Senators on the Up

The Senators continued their chase yesterday by trouncing the St. Louis Browns 14 to 4, scoring a ten run burst in the fifth inning which went a long way toward avenging the indignities suffered in St. Louis. But Washington's 18 hit assault brought no gain while the Athletics were giving Bob Grove his usual backing. Grove did some ragged hurling as he won his eighth straight game and his 21st victory of the season, but he was presented with a seven run lead before the Tigers started to score. The other American league clubs had a day of scheduled idleness.

Long Training Grind For Big Four Rugby Campaign Less Than Week Away.

QUARTER BACK PROBLEM.

MONTREAL, Que., Aug. 21.—(C.P.)—Less than a week away looms the start of the long training grind for Montreal's entry in the Big Four Rugby campaign, and to-night a preliminary get together will be held at the M.A.A.A.s grounds to check the material on hand, and discuss the team's outlook for the season. The serious business of practices will begin next Monday evening.

James C. Riddell, past president of the club, President C. T. Ogilvie and Associate Coaches Bill Hughes and Clarry Foran will be present to-night along with practically all of last year's team, plus the new material that is flocking to M.A.A.'s red and blue banner.

Quarter Back Problem.

The chief topic of interest at the meeting will be the quarter-back situation, which became grave with the injury of Benny Haynes' ankle three weeks ago, while he was playing lacrosse. Benny, a brilliant little pivot at the key position, had been expected to carry the brunt of the signal-calling this year, but the fractured ankle will keep him out of early training, and just when he will be ready for action is problematical though it is anticipated he will be fit early in October. A filler-in has to be found.

Earlier this year it looked as though Ike Sutton, clever little quarterback of Queen's fame, would be with the Wheelers, and in that event Montreal would have been able to easily tide over Haynes' convalescence. But with Sutton's non-appearance, there is only left Buster Fletcher, of last year's juniors. Among other newcomers seeking positions on the team this year will be Dickey, from Queen's, to bolster the fleet outside wing brigade of Kenny Grant, Glen Hutton and Henri Garbarino. Dune Smith, line crashing middle wing of the C.N.R. and his team mate, Farmer Halbert, a flying wing, will also be out for a trial, along with Alan Swabey, McGill snap, and McIntyre, from Varsity Orphans. Bubs Britton, fast and effective flying wing with Queens for years, was another of M.A.A.A.'s earlier hopes this season, but it appears as though this hope will not be realized.

BROOKLYN FALLS BEFORE THE REDS

National League Leaders Suffer Setbacks at Hands of Lower Rivals.

CARDS DOWN GIANTS.

NEW YORK, August 21 (C.P.).—The leaders of the National League were joined in grief yesterday as all three succumbed to their rivals of lower rank in the standing. But Brooklyn was the only club which lost ground. The Robins moved into Cincinnati for a double-header with the humble Reds, who had lost seven straight games and 20 out of 25 previous games. But much to their surprise, Cincinnati's pitching proved better than Brooklyn in two close duels, both being decidde by 2 to 1 score.

Young Benny Frey gave Brooklyn just five hits as he bested old Adolfo Luque in the first clash while Ray Kolp was equally successful against Ray Phelps in the second although he allowed twice the number of hits. Red Lucas brought him success by driving in the deciding tally with a pinch double in the ninth.

The last-place Phillies evidently were destined to win their twice-tied game with the champion Chicago Cubs, although it required three days of effort to give them a 10 to 8 decision.

The game, which started in an eleven inning tie in the second half of Saturday's double-header and failed to come to a decision in a 16-inning second clash on Tuesday, finally was played off yesterday and Phillie homers were triumphant F.v. four-baggers played the important part in deciding the dispute although the Phillies gave away four runs in the first inning and were outhit 17-13.

A single homer and a wild pitch by Fred Fitzsimmons were about enough for the St. Louis Cardinals as they downed the New York Giants 5 to 4. Pinch Batsman George Fisher made a four-base clout for three runs while the wild heave by the Giant pitcher allowed the tying run to score. Out of the pennant race, Pittsburgh gained a triumph of its own by shutting out the Boston Braves 5 to 0, and passing the .500 mark for the first time since June 4.

PRO MARATHONERS TAKE PART IN THIRTY MILE RELAY RACE

Latest Form of Endurance Contest to be Held at C. N. E.

MANY STARS COMPETE.

(Special to the Examiner—Copyright 1930)

TORONTO, Aug. 21.— Professional long-distance relay racing, which has set New York, London and Montreal by the ears, will get its introduction in Toronto on Saturday August 22nd, at the Canadian National Exhibition.

The race will be at a distance of thirty miles, and the track at Exhibition Park, over which no less than four Canadian records are held, at sprints and middle distances, will be put in very excellent condition in the expectation that a world's record for the thirty-mile relay will be established. The greatest professional marathon runners from various parts of the world, including South Africa, Finland, the United States, England, Australia, and Sweden, will be competitors.

The relay changes are made immediately in front of the Grand Stand and at frequent intervals so that the excitement is maintained at a high pitch throughout the entire thirty miles and the distance run in an incredibly short time. The names of most of the competitors are more than familiar to the followers of the spiked-shoe pastime. Joie Ray, the famous little half-pint galloper of Chicago, who represented the United States at the Olympic Games on several occasions, will be teamed with Johnny Salo of Finland and the combination will be known as the Finnish-American team. The spectacular Arthur Newton of South Africa has paired with Peter Gavuzzi, an Anglo-Italian of London, England. Newton is the South African farmer who commenced long-distance running at the age of forty years and astounded the world by his prowess before becoming a professional. The Jewish team is composed of Harry Abramovitch and Sammy Richman of New York. Canada's bid for the premier honors in this spectacular contest will be made by two French-Canadian teams, one composed of the well-known Montreal marathoners Edourd Fabre and Ollie Ouellette, and by Fred De Roche and Remi Laflamme. The Irish-Australian, Mike McNamara, has cast his lot with Paul Simpson of Elon College, North Carolina. Another team is composed of Dr. Arne L. Suominen of Chicago and the diminutive Ollie Wanttinen, the smallest of the world famous gallopers. Wanttinen is four feet nine inches in height and weighs 92 pounds, making Percy Wyer, the little Toronto Marathoner, look like a giant in comparison. A Swedish-German combination has been formed by Gunnar Naslund of Sweden and August Fager of Ashtabula, Ohio.

Tom Ellis of Hamilton, one of C. C. Pyle "Bunion Derby" fame is looking for a partner and is likely to be a competitor.

Toronto athletic enthusiasts are looking forward with a great deal of interest to the intrrduction of this novel development in long-distance racing, which has done more than any other one factor to re-establish marathon running n America and Europe after a lapse during the war.

Kingston Ball War Is Still Waging

KINGSTON, Aug. 21.—The baseball war, which waged here all day Tuesday is still on. The Kingston Ponies, defeated in Tuesday's game by Sydenham, protested the game and, as a result, the Kingston District League is without a representative to play off in the next round of the O.B.A.A. The Ponies protested the eligibility of one of the Sydenham players and, as a result, the Sydenham team did not go to Hastings yesterday and the game was called off.

Betty Nuthall Favorite To Win Tennis Honors

FOREST HILLS, N. E., Aug. 21.(CP)—Eight feminine tennis players stood today within striking distance of the National women's singles crown which only one can win.

Betty Nuthall 19-year-old English star, still retained her place as the most logical contender for the title relinquished by Mrs. Helen Wills Moody. As evidence of the kind of tennis she is playing the sturdy English girl displayed a 6-0; 6-3 victory over Edith Cross, America's third ranking woman player achieved in the third round yesterday.

OVER The KITTY By "Newsie"

Daily Happenings on Peterborough Bowling Club's Greens.

Another big day over. Five local rinks journeyed to Cannington yesterday to compete in the town's annual tournament, taking Jack Bacon with them and bringing home the bacon at the end of the day. The rink skipped by Harold Freeman, consisting of Jack Fitzpatrick, Roy Disney and himself took third prize; the rink of Walter Oke, consisting of George Cairns, Alex. Archibald, and Mark Bredin caught second place, and the rink skipped by Reg. Fox, consisting of Jack Sedgewick, Percy Sexsmith and Doc. Long grabbed first place in the two win class. Two other rinks, Vic Tully, Ernie Wall, Nelson Routly and Jack Bacon, skip, and Harold Wood, Herb. Martin and Charlie Seymour, dropped out of the running after a series of close, hard games.

In the evening the local members held a mixed competition on the home greens, resulting in Joe Bennett's rink winning first prize; George Coleman, Jr., second prize and D. Smith third. How badly Bob French and George East have fallen from grace, not being able to grab off even one game between them. Benney Chesler must have had a hard time in Montreal, his evening's struggle only netting him one point. These trips are not the best methods for a young skip.

This is the night. All roads will lead to the Club dance to-night and the House Committee have asked "Newsie" to announce in this column that any member who has not been asked to buy a ticket will be able to obtain one at the booth. We want it distinctly understood that every member is welcome.

If it's Club News you will find it in this column daily.

CRICKET MATCH IS POSTPONED

Prospects at Present Point Australia in Strong Position to Gain Mythical "Ashes."

290 RUNS IN LEAD.

LONDON, Eng., August 21. (C.P.)—Play in the cricket test match between England and Australia could not proceed to-day owing to heavy rain. The match which is for the "Ashes," Anglo-Australan cricket championship symbol, is being played to a finish and will be resumed when weather conditions permit. As the test stands at present Australia would appear to be in a very strong position. They were 290 runs ahead after the first innings were completed yesterday, and England had lost Jack Hobbs' wicket in their second visit to the wickets and had only 24 runs.

The prospects are that England will have to continue on a wet wicket and be at a great disadvantage.

Scores in the match are Austradia, 695, England 405 and 24 runs for one wicket.

Sugar Bowl Plays Trenton on Friday

Sugar Bowl will travel to Trenton on Friday to meet a team from that place in the first game of the semi-finals of the O.B.A. series. The Bowlrites will be at full strength for this game.

On Wednesday night, August 27, Trenton will be back here for the return game. It is not definitely decided as yet where the games will be played, but it is likely they will be held at James Stevenson Park. This is to conform with the Ontario Softball Association's ruling.

The winners of this series will meet the winners of the Kingston-Brockville series in home and home games.

The Sugar Bowl team played great ball all through the final series, not losing a game. They defeated Belmonts two games and repeated the dose on Harrison's. Throughout the season they have displayed fine form, winning the first half honors with only two loses. They eased up in the second half, but came on with a rush in the finals and swept the series.

The team is well fortified for the Ontario series, and possess a good outfield, a fine pitching staff, and an excellent infield. The boys should make a good showing in the Ontario playdowns.

"WEIGHT HEAVERS" DAY

Interest is steadily growing in the British Empire games since the opening. From the coast this year has come a hammer thrower who may go a long way. He is Archie McDiarmid of Vancouver. At the national Canadian track meet he proved himself an athlete of championship calibre. El Hutton the Montreal boy and former Canadian champion is another showing marvellous form in the recent trials, although disqualified, he established a new mark. Should he again repeat this performance he has more than a chance of breaking on top at the Hamilton games. Nova Scotia sends Tim Herman, a weight heaver, who according to reports shou'd provide plenty of interest for the Vancouver boys.

SMALLEST THREE STICKER AFLOAT

Tern Schooner, Plying Bay of Fundy Ports, Only of 30 Tons Register.

CREW OF TWO

HALIFAX, N. S., Aug. 21.—Up and down and across the Bay of Fundy, plying between shore ports on the New Brunswick and Nova Scotia coasts, sails the smallest three-masted schooner in the world. She is the "Souvenir," of 31 tons registry, owned by Lyman Outhouse of Beaver Harbor, New Brunswick, and registered at Digby, N. S.

Master of the Souvenir is Captain Oscar Outhouse, brother of owner, and the entire crew is embodied in the person of nineteen-year-old Linden Morehouse of Grand Manan. It was Captain Outhouse who recently told the story of the Souvenir's transformation from an ordinary two-masted to the smallest known three-sticker afloat.

The little schooner was built in the yards at Meteghan, Nova Scotia, in 1903, being launched in June of that year, and was fitted with the ordinary fore and mainmast rig. It was not until 1919 that the Souvenir was returned to the Meteghan yards, cut in half, lengthened by ten feet, and equipped with a mizzen. The additional spar made it possible for her two-man crew to handle three sets of smaller sails aft of the jibs much more easily than two larger sheets of canvas. The vessel's present dimensions are 67 feet overall, with a 16-foot beam.

Drawing six feet of water when light, the Souvenir has two auxiliary gasoline engines, with a total of 42 horsepower. The wheel is on the open deck, and navigating the craft calls for seamanship in rough water. She plies up and down the Bay, taking any available cargo, such as fish, lumber, salt and provisions from port to port.

The Outhouse brothers, now of Beaver Harbor, are natives of Tiverton, on Digby neck, Nova Scotia. Captain Oscar has sailed the little craft for the past twenty-four years. Linden Morehouse, the entire personnel "before the mast" has served three years on the Souvenir.

CHINESE DEALER'S LOW RATES DRIVE FOREIGNERS TO WALL

Old British Firms Fail While Native Mercahnts Enjoy Prosperity.

HELP IS CHEAPER.

By C. D. Alcott.

(Special to Examiner, Copyright 1930.)

SHANGHAI, Aug. 21.—Chinese merchants who have adopted the white man's methods of marketing, are gradually forcing the foreign retailers in the treaty ports of China out of business.

Within the past year, dozens of retail establishments, some of them founded half a century ago, have closed their doors while their owners have departed from the far east with no intention of returning.

The pressure has become too great for the average foreign merchant to stand and if the present trend is to be accepted as a criterion of the future, the time is not far distant when British and American merchants will be as scarce in China as they are to-day in Japan.

The British have been the hardest hit. Old bulwark of trade in the Orient, pioneers in introducing English-made products in this part of the world, have gone by the boards, one after another. Their stores, landmarks of the early days when life for the foreigners in China was easier than it is to-day, are being torn down and replaced by modern office buildings and Chinese-owned shops and stores.

Many of these concerns had their beginning as early as 1865, when Shanghai and Hongkong were first becoming established as the principal centres of foreign trade and commerce in China.

With foreign goods then a novelty in the far east, these companies prospered, expanded and made fortunes for their owners. Help was cheap and the margin of profit was great. Once educated to the foreign way of living and foreign products, the Chinese became good buyers and with foreigners alone in the field retailing, the native consumer had no other alternative than to buy from them.

Only a few years ago competition from Chinese sources became strong enough to furnish the foreigner with an inkling that the Oriental was making headway against them. Chinese department stores began to make their appearance in various cities of the country and, operating along western lines, foreign importers were only too glad to sell to them.

To-day these same department stores cater to all classes of trade, foreign and Chinese and they have brought under selling into the category of a fine art. Only a Chinese can sell on a five per cent margin of profit and show return on his investment. With him, it is simple. There are no high-salaried executives on his staff and his clerks work for one-tenth of the salaries required by foreigners.

Prices Best Argument.

It is true that the Chinese standards of efficiency are much lower than those of Americans or other foreigners doing business in the Orient and a Chinese clerk is never in quite as much of a hurry to wait on a customer as a white man. His low price, however, is his chief selling point and he needs no other argument.

Like the big stores in other lands, these Chinese firms handle every imaginable kind of goods,ranging from needles to automobiles. And they are always willing to push foreign lines. In fact, it is possible to walk into one of these establishments and find very much the same assortment of products that one would expect to find anywhere else in the world.

Naturally, foreign importers are catering to the Chinese rather than to dealers of their own nationality. They obtain greater turnover for one thing and they are certain that their accounts will be met promptly on the first of the month.

An excellent illustration of the way in which Chinese are able to undersell foreign retailers, is contained in the experience of a retired American naval officer, who recently invested the savings of a lifetime in a retail photo supply and sporting goods concern.

After opening an elaborate establishment on one of the principal thoroughfares, he discovered that he could purchase the same article he was selling over the counter in a Chinese retail store a block away for less than the same article cost him wholesale.

Proves an Exception.

He investigated, and for his pains, obtained the startling information that his wholesaler, an American importing concern, preferred to do business with Chinese dealers rather than with foreign firms just beginning to operate on the grounds that his turnover would probably be so small that he would be forced out of business in a year. Not much encouragement, but it served to arouse the ire of the ex-officer to such an extent that he proved an exception to the rule and placed his company on such a sound footing that to-day it is one of the largest concerns of its kind in the country

The importer failed to realize an American navy man would naturally have a ready made clientele and that sailors would patronize him more than they would Chinese. Just how long this man will be able to continue is a matter of speculation. Less than another five years probably, if the present economic depression in China continues, the overhead will eat him up.

The Chinese retail merchant has learned through watching the foreigner the wisdom of advertising. Shanghai has become a city of billboards and Chinese firms are by far the biggest users of this medium. They are likewise heavy newspaper and magazine advertisers.

If peace should come and it eventually must come, if this country is to survive, then China with its millions of people and billions of dollars worth of undeveloped resources should become one of the most prosperous of nations. Whether the present or even the next generation will witness such a change is another matter.

TARZAN OF THE APES No. 43 (Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.) By Edgar Rice Burroughs

Slowly Tarzan deciphered Jane's letter. It was to her friend in America. In it she narrated their strange experiences. How her father had come into possession of an old Spanish manuscript telling of buried treasure; how they finally found it; how it had brought misfortune to them, and of Tarzan.

Tarzan sat long in a brown study after reading the letter. He couldn't understand much of the new and wonderful things it told of. He wrote beneath Jane's signature, "I am Tarzan of the Apes." Next morning she found her missing letter in the exact spot from which it had disappeared.

A cold, clammy chill ran up her spine as she saw the printed words. But as days passed without mishap, her fears calmed. Unseen by them, Tarzan left offerings of food at the cabin. He told himself that one day he would venture into the camp and talk with them.

A month passed before Tarzan visited the camp by daylight. He found all gone. His golden-haired divinity had vanished! So he printed a message for her....."I WANT YOU ....I AM YOURS....KNOW THAT TARZAN OF THE APES LOVES YOU." Suddenly his keen ears heard a familiar sound.

It was the passing of a great ape through the forest. For an instant he listened intently. Then from the jungle came the agonized scream of a woman, and Tarzan of the Apes, dropping his first love letter upon the ground, shot like a panther into the forest.

FRED IMMING IS BAILED FOR TRIAL

Street Was Blocked

of receiving the fire alarm on July of receiving the vre alarm on July 11th, at 12.37 a.m. The street was blocked, he stated owing to paving operations from the Charlebond Apartments to Parker's Dye Works.

Witness described how access to the building is gained by a stairway which is placed outside on the east end. He said after the fire which was a difficult one to fight, he concluded it had started in the south west corner of the upper floor against the west wall. He found several radios piled on a bench in this corner and nearby stood a box of shavings partly consumed by fire. The floor for a radius of ten feet around the box had been charred about half the thickness of the floor boards. Back of the box, was a boarded portion which had formerly been a window. It was eaten through by fire right up to the ceiling. The fire had also burned through the roof in one section.

Crown Attorney: What about the box containing rubbish?

Witness: I received notification of the rubbish and sent an inspector from the Fire Department to check up. He made a report to me.

Crown Attorney: From the charred spot on the floor what were your conclusions?

Witness: I came to the conclusion that the fire had started in that spot.

In reply to the Crown Attorney as to his opinion of the origin of the fire—a question to which Mr. Park raised ojection, which was, however, over-ruled by the bench—witness replied: "It's a pretty hard question to answer."

He further stated the box contained shavings and sweepings from the floor. He saw no papers or rags.

In reply to further questions from the Crown as to the origin of the fire, witness said: "It's only supposition when you try to arrive at the cause of the fire.

C. H. Argue, representative of the Fire Underwriters' Investigation Bureau, stated in the course of his evidence that although Imming was evasive at times he gave witness his evidence more or less freely.

After hearing the witness Argue the court adjourned.

Sergeant Thomas.

When the hearing was resumed this morning ,Sergeant Arthur G. Thomas of the city police, testified that he was back of Lansfield's cleaning and pressing shop, on the south side of Charlotte street, close to 12.30 o'clock on the morning in question, making customary inspections. He said that Imming drove north on Louis street and turned in back of the corner building, coming to a stop in the open space back of the cleaning and pressing shop. Imming got out and disappeared in the direction of Charlotte street, returning in about five minutes, he said

Thomas stated that when Imming once more got into the car he flashed his light in his face and asked him what he had been doing, getting the explanaton that he had been over to the repair shop. After four or five minutes Imming drove away and a few minutes after that Thomas heard a Chinaman raise alarm for the fire in Imming's shop, according to testimony. The time that elapsed between the moment Imming left the shop and the moment the fire was reported was said to be 10 to 12 minutes by the witness.

He further testified that he had often seen the accused working at nights in his repair shop. There was nothing about his appearance on the night he questioned him to suggest that he had "done anything." The officer when questioned said that the parking space behind the cleaning and pressing shop was the nearest approach by which Imming could have reached his shop due to the fact that Charlotte street was closed for paving.

Fred Timbs of the Border Transport Company, told the court that his company had given Imming some magnetos to be overhauled. The particular magneto which Imming claimed he went back to fix on the night of the fire required re-winding—not repairs to the points—said the witness. The witness said that he saw the accused earlier in the evening of the fire, and that he said he was going out to the country. He said he would look at the magneto as soon as he came back, Timbs related.

The effect of testimony of Edmund Welch, an employee of the Utilities Commission, was that power for lighting had been cut off from Imming's shop some time before the fire on account of delinquency in payment of light bills.

Margaret Ravoir Fights For Lead With E. McGarry

FOURTH PLACE IS HELD BY MRS. EVELYN ARMSTRONG WITH ETHEL HERTLE GARY FIFTH SLOWLY GAINING

Temperature of 66 Degrees Makes Water Ideal For Race and Only Slight Roll Disturbs Surface Outside Breakwater— German and Finnish Entrants Far Back in Line.

LAKE FRONT, Toronto, Ont., August 22 (By W. R. Wheatley, C.P. Staff Writer). — With three miles covered in the Canadian National Exhibition's ten mile swim Marathon for women, the leadership had settled into a fight between Miss Margaret Ravior, of Philadelphia, Miss Ethel McGarry of New York, and Mrs. Ruth Tower Corsan, formerly of Denver, Colo., and now a Toronto resident.

With nearly one-third of the course completed at 2.45 p.m. Miss Ravior held a lead of a few yards over Miss McGarry. Mrs. Corsan was close behind. All three were setting a pace that left the others trailing behind in a long line. Forty yards back of Mrs. Corsan came Mrs. Evelyn Armstrong, from Detroit, swimming strongly, she had slipped back but 20 yards in the second mile.

The champion of 1928, Ethel Hertle Gary, of New York, who did not compete last year, was stroking steadily ahead in fifth place and gaining slightly on Mrs. Armstrong.

Next in order came May Looney, of Warren, Ohio, Leah Riley Keensburg, N.J., Anne Prille Benoit, of Miami, Fla., and Olive Gatterdon of Toronto.

Two Drop Out

When the first lap of two miles had been completed, two entrants had dropped out of the race. They were Blanche Robinson of Burns, Oregon, and Anna C. Pearson, of Worcester, Mass.

The temperature of the water after the start, both inside and outside the breakwater, was 66 degrees. This was considered almost perfect for the swimmers, while the wind, which had died down considerably at the start, made water conditions almost ideal. There was a slight roll outside the breakwater, but inside there were only light ripples.

Madeline Chandler, Western Ontario's only entrant in the big swim, dropped quickly to the rear from the start. The Brantford girl was swimming in 27th position at the end of two miles.

Helen Lundson from Finland was using a breast stroke, far back in sixteenth place. Meta Doster, Germany, overtook the Finnish girl soon after they had entered the breakwater after completing two miles. Vera Jahn, second German entry, was in eighteenth place.

WEST DEBATING ON WHEAT BOARD FOR 1930 CROP

Premier Anderson Asks Brachen and Brownlee to Discuss Proposal.

COMPULSORY POOL.

Rumored Pools Want Bigger Advance Than Banks Will Guarantee.

WINNIPEG, Man., Aug. 22.—(CP)—Today the West is talking of a compulsory pool for all the prairies wheat—a wheat board to handle the 1930 crop. Premier J. T. M. Anderson of Saskatchewan, after calling the Premiers of Manitoba and Alberta to a conference at Regina today, is silent. Manitoba's Premier Bracken is unable to attend the session, and it was not known at Edmonton early today whether Premier J. E. Brownlee had departed for Regina.

The meeting of Premiers—the Premiers who guaranteed the pool's indebtedness to the banks of the 1929 crop—follows a proposal to Premier Anderson that the Saskatchewan grain yield be marketed entirely through a single channel supervised by the Government. The proposal came from one of the Province's farm organizations — presumably the Wheat Pool, whose members now are balloting on the advisability of a 100 per cent. pool by legislation.

Size of Payment Waited

Premier Anderson's proposal comes as the whole country waits for the wheat pool's statement on the size of its initial payment—bound to be smaller this year than ever in the history of the nine-year-old co-operative organization. It is stated that the pools want a larger advance than the banks are willing to guarantee. The banks it is learned authoritatively have not made their final decision known to the pool.

At Winnipeg A. J. McPhail, President of the Canadian Pool could not be reached at his hotel room or his offices. At Calgary, Henry Wise Wood president of the first pool to operate in Canada said "This is the first I have heard about a wheat board."

SESSION WILL BE BOON TO OTTAWA

Expect $500,000 to be Spent as Members Debate on Unemployment.

RENTS GO UP.

OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 22.—(CP)—The special session of Parliament which will open early in September will bring about $500,000 to Ottawa. This sum, which is entirely "found money", for landlords, merchants, men and women on the temporary staff of the Civil Service and even taxi-drivers and restaurant keepers will be spent by the newly-elected Members of Parliament, the Senators, the hundreds of tourists who will visit the city at that time and by the Government itself. Even the telegraph companies will receive their share of the "windfall" because of the thousands of words the newspapermen will send out daily concerning the deliberation of the new Parliament.

Just before the opening of Parliament, rents seem to go higher here in Ottawa for it is a well-known and obvious fact that even Members of Parliament must live somewhere during the time they are here. Apparently landlords look upon them as fair game and step up their rents a few pegs.

The sessional staff of the Parliament buildings will receive their share of the unexpected money. They include special guards, committee secretaries, stenographers, Hansard reports and even scrub women.

Ottawa, at least, will be one city that will derive direct benefit from the session that is called to find ways and means of combating unemployment.

UNIQUE EFFORT FOR LONGEVITY

St. Louis Man to Take Russian Couple on Tour to Find Diet.

WOULD LIVE TO BE 100.

PARIS, France, August 22. — (C.P.)—Park Hammer, retired St. Louis paint manufacturer, expects soon to take a Russian couple to St. Louis for an experiment looking toward a diet for longevity.

After three months in the Missouri City, Mr. Hammer will move his experiment to a different climate for another three months, and thereafter will move at similar intervals.

Yesterday the retired manufacturer placed an advertisement in a Russian daily, offering $200 a month and expenses, plus $2500, should he discharge the couple within a year. He expects numerous replies since about 60,000 hard pressed Russian emigres live in Paris.

Mr. Hammer is 67 years old and expects to work out a system that will enable him to live to 100

IMPORTERS URGE FORBES TO ALTER DECISION ON CARS

Preference Sought For All Cars From Canada Before October 1.

NO PROMISE GIVEN.

New Zealand Premier Hopes Duty Will Be Only Temporary.

WELLINGTON, New Zealand, Aug. 22. — (C. P. Cable via Reuters.) — A deputation of importers of motor vehicles from Canada to-day waited upon the Right Hon. G. W. Forbes, Prime Minister, and asked that cars ordered to be exported from Canada before October 1st, should be allowed to enter New Zealand under the British Preference as hitherto.

The importers' request followed the Prime Minister's announcement in the House of Representatives yesterday that cars coming from Canada would in future be placed under the general tariff and would no longer be accorded the benefits of British preference.

Makes No Promise.

Although he gave no promise, Mr. Forbes said he hoped the duty would be only a temporary matter to be discussed with Canada during the Imperial Conference.

It is benerally believed here that concessions will be made by both New Zealand and Canada, the latter in the matter of revising the increased duty on New Zealand butter. In making the announcement yesterday that Canadian-made or Canadian-assembled cars would be put under the general tariff, Mr. Forbes remarked that Canada's new Government had notified New Zealand that the Australian trade pact could not be extended to include New Zealand beyond October.

The Government action is construed in the light of retaliation and as a means of securing a bargaining lever.

The Prime Minister is expected to discuss the matter personally with the authorities at Ottawa, Canada, while he is on his way to the Imperial Conference via the Dominion.

BENNETT REMAINS SILENT ON NEW ZEALAND ACTION

CALGARY, Alta., Aug. 22 (C. P.) Premier R. B. Bennett last night had no comment to make on the move of the New Zealand Government in terminating the Imperial preference extended to Canadian motor cars. At Medicine Hat yesterday afternoon, Mr. Bennett said: "Rt. Hon. G. W. Forbes, Premier of New Zealand, informed Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King some time ago that he would take precisely this action."

Six Cambridge, England, colleges have just forbidden students from keeping automobiles in Cambridge.

Embarrassing

Pardon me, but are you the elusive Miss Dollar?"

"Sir?"

Are you—eh—the elusive— sir —Miss Dollar?"

"Young fellow, if you get fresh with me, I'll call a cop."

This is typical of conversations between nervous but hopeful young men and fair damsels — conversations reported this morning from the streets and stores of our fair city where the first of the summer's twin Dollar Days is in full swing.

Not the thrifty desire to locate the elusive Miss Dollar, but the desire to seize the opportunity—long dreamed of as a vain and foolish hope—of addressing a few well-chosen words to the aloof maiden long worshipped dumbly from afar, appears to have prompted many of these interviews. Callow youths, though rebuffed, are reported to have gone away satisfied that so much as a mere reply has been elicited from the divine lady.

PASSENGER HURT IN TRAFFIC CRASH

Three Cars Involved in Traffic Accident on Lakefield Road.

In an automobile accident involving seven persons and three vehicles, which occurred on the Lakefield road about a mile north of the Nassau fork at 11.30 last night Joseph Dougherty of Indian River sustained a gash on his cheek, premumably from broken glass. He was admitted ed St. Joseph's Hospital, having been brought into the city by a passing motorist, H. Robinson of Lakefield.

Dougherty was a passenger in a sedan car driven by M. Douglas of Westwood. Douglas was proceeding towards Lakefield and is alleged to have attempted to pass a touring car ahead of him while another sedan car was approaching in the direction of Peterborough. The result of his alleged action was to force the touring car to the ditch, sideswipe the sedan and to end up his own manoeuvring by crashing head-on into the ditch on the west side of the road. The oncoming sedan, driven by Jack Waters, 275 Lake street, Peterborough, although travelling south, was afterwards found with the left front wheel wrenched off and facing north on the east side of the road.

Forced Into Ditch

The touring car driven by Lloyd Hooton of Cavan and containing three passengers was forced into the ditch but only slightly damaged. It was able to drive away under its own power. His passengers were L. Armstrong and the Misses Greig and Downer.

The Douglas car was badly smashed having the front weels and axle hopelessly bent damage to the radiator, broken windshield, right door wrenched off and the rear left fender torn away.

MADRAS, India, August 22 (C.P. Cable via Reuters). — The efforts of Lord and Lady Willingdon to improve the social relations between the different classes of this community as well as Lord Willingdon's work as head of the Madras Administration, will bear their fruit in due season, said the Right Hon. Sir George Stanley, present Governor of the Presidency, when he unveiled a statue of Viscount Willingdon today.

Sir George and other speakers paid warm tribute to the work done here by Lord Willingdon as Governor.

English Cricketers Bow to Defeat By An Inning and 39 Runs.

HOMESTERS' COUNT 656.

Batting of Don Bradman, New South Wales' Youth, Features Tests.

LONDON, Eng., August 22. (C.P.)—Australia to-day won the International cricket championship when they defeated England at the Kennington Oval in the last of a series of five test matches. The series were divided as follows: Australia won two, England won one, drawn two.

Scores in the match which finished to-day were Australia 695, England 405 and 251, aggregate 656. Australia won by an innings and 39 runs.

England had been international cricket champions for four years. They regained the "Ashes," symbol of the cricket championship at the Oval in the last game of the 1926-27 series and held them in the Australian 1928-29 tour. Test matches between English and Australian teams began in Australia in 1877.

The feature of the tests just closed was the batting of Don Bradman, the 21 year old colt from New South Wales. He broke record after record in the series and set up new figures for the largest individual score in international matches, 334. Great work was also done by C. Grimmett, Australia's star bowler, who took the largest number of wickets in any series.

Lunch was taken soon after, and on resumption Duleep cracked Grimmett to the off and leg boundaries on successive balls. Then a tragedy befell England. Sutcliffe, turning to play Hornibrook, seemed to lose sight of the ball which flew off the shoulder of his bat straight into Fairfax's hands in the gully. It was a miserable ending to a plucky effort, during which Sutcliffe had defied all the Australian bowling. He batted for two hours and thirty-five minutes and hit four fours. Duleep seemed un-

Bread Price Probe Not Desirable Now

OTTAWA, Ont. Aug. 22 (C.P.) It is not desirable that action under the Combines Investigation Act in connection with the price of bread, should be necessary at this time, Hon. G. Robertson, Minister of Labor, said to-day at the meeting of the Employment Service Council. He said he trusted the spirit of co-operation the Council was seeking to build up, would extend to those concerned, and lead to a correction of any unfairness without intervention of the Government

BEATTY PREDICTS CANADA SHORTLY BACK TO NORMAL

President of C.P.R. Officially Opens Canadian National Exhibition.

"ALL CANADA YEAR."

Situation Demands Courage and Prudence From Commercial Leaders.

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 22 (C.P.) — "In the light of the eloquent evidence of what we have done and of the history of this country, both immediate and remote, no Canadian should doubt that Canada will shortly emerge from the present temporary depression and prove again its inherent strength and the sanity and reliance of its people," declared Edward W. Beatty, K.C., President of the Canadian Pacific Railway in the address by which "All Canada Year" at the Canadian National Exhibition was officially opened this afternoon.

All Canada Year

"Your directors have called it "All Canada Year," in description of its national character. oN more fitting term could be used because in no year, certainly in no recent year, have the national interests of this Dominion been so impressed upon thinking Canadians. I do not need to remind you that conditions are not exactly normal and that we are

JAPAN IS MAKING RAPID PROGRESS IN HER FACTORIES

Cuthbert Robertson, English Teacher in Japan, Addresses Kiwanis.

PATERNAL SYSTEM.

Government Appears to be Democracy is Really a Bureaucracy.

A famed British statesman's definition of an education was to know everying about something and something about everything. Cuthbert Robertson told the Kiwanis Club at noon to-day, and then proceeded to give the Kiwanians some first-hand information on Japan.

"A man without a country," was the manner in which Mr. Robertson was introduced to the club by his friend, Rev. J. Douglas Paterron. Further, Mr. Robertson had fought with the Princess Pats in France, and since the war has been engaged as teacher of English in a large High School in Japan.

Interest in the Japanese, their customs and ideals were stated by Mr. Robertson to be the chief reasons why he was quite content and happy to live in Japan. "Under their superficialities the Japanese are fundamentally very much like ourselves," the speaker declared earnestly

Paternal System.

Almost overnight Japan is passing from a state of semi-feudalism to one of labor and industry. However, in many of even the large manufacturing concerns the paternal system still exists. By this system, it was explained, the company sets itself up as the father of the workers, who are considered as children. Recently a great strike occurred among the employees of a great woollen plant. It was caused because the living allowance, which had been given in addition to wages during the boom times, had been reduced. The workers were further incensed because the managing director at about the same time had been retired on an honorarium of a million and a half dollars.

"That strike was watched with keen interest by Japanese industrialists," said the speaker, who explained that labor leaders of that country had not yet joined their forces, but that a united Labor Party or Trade Federation might be expected in the not too distant future.

Speaking of Japanese government, it was stated that while it appears on the surface to be democratic it is in reality a bureaucracy, with control in the hands of a few. "However," said the speaker, "with each new undertaking the government will gradually swing to a true democracy."

While in many instances the Japanese have adopted fully the most up-to-date mechanical machinery, they still maintain some of their

UNEMPLOYED IN PETERBOROUGH IS ESTIMATED AT 400 PERSONS

Minister of Labor Has Been Notified That 1,000 Expected in Winter.

ONE OF 84 REPORTED.

That the number of unemployed persons in Peterborough at present is between 300 and 400 and that the unemployment figure will mount to about 1,000 later in the year, has been estimated by Mayor Roland Denne in reply to a request from the Minister of Labor at Ottawa. Peterborough is one of the 84 cities in the Dominion in which employment surveys are being made by the Government in preparation for the employment session in September.

The following letter summing up the situation in Peterborough and giving the unemployment estimates was sent to Hon. G. D. Robertson, Minister of Labor at Ottawa, by Mayor Denne:

Dear Sir:

We have not a complete register of the persons out of employment but taking the number registered at the Unemployment Agency and those that we know out of employment, I would estimate that there are from three to four hundred men out of work in Peterborough. There are a number employed in city work at the present time, a good deal of which work the council has proceeded with for the purpose of giving employment and in addition there are quite a number at present engaged in other work which will close with the advent of cold weather. A conservative estimate of the number that will be unemployed later this year is about one thousand.

Yours truly,

Roland Denne, Mayor.

Possibly in Better Position

Commenting on the estimate this morning, the Mayor opined that there would be no object in concealing the fact that Peterborough is suffering from unemployment as well as other municipalities in Canada. Peterborough, however, is comparatively in a better position than

20 RED LEADERS HELD IN NANKING

Fashionably Dressed Foreign Educated Girl Arrested For Espionage.

EXPLOSIVES FOUND.

NANKING, China, Aug. 22.—(AP)—Government authorities announced today the arrest of twenty Communist leaders within the walls of this capital and the frustration of a plot to overthrow the Nationalist Government, which included the dynamiting of various Government buildings here.

Authorities said among those arrested was a fashionably dressed, foreign educated girl, whom they quoted as saying she was doing Red espionage work among Government officials.

Officials said they confiscated stores of explosives and Communist literature, large quantities of which had been circulated throughout the capital during the last several days.

The Communists planned to create disturbances within the Capital, authorities said, as part of their lawless program.

CALGARY POLICE CLOSE TO QUARRY

Officials Sure Bank Bandit is Holed Up Some Place in City.

HAD ACCOMPLICE.

CALGARY, Alta., Aug. 22.—(CP)—After a 24 hour search of the Calgary district for the armed bandit who held up and robbed the Royal Bank of Canada of $7,000 here yesterday, police officers have come to the following conclusion.

Although the bank robbery was carried out by a lone bandit, a confederate was awaiting a short distance up the street at the wheel of a late model sports roadster, bearing a Michigan license number.

As the bandit emerged from the bank the car drove up the curb on the north side of the bank and then drive off at high speed.

Airplane and motor patrols have established the fact that the bandit or bandits have not tried to leave the city. It is believed that they are in hiding either in some block or private house.

The police search was narrowed down to two or three men well known to the department and every available police officer has been supplied with a description of the wanted men.

Police expect that the arrest of the man will take place within the next 36 hours.

Duchess of York Once Again a Mother

PRINCESS IS BORN WITHIN ANCIENT GLAMIS CASTLE

New Baby is Fourth Heir Presumptive to British Throne.

CELEBRATION TO-NIGHT.

Loyal Scotsmen Urging Child Be Named Margaret.

GLAMIS, Scotland, August 22 (C.P.). — A new heir-presumptive to the British throne rested in her cradle to-day at Glamis Castle, oblivious to the commotion her birth caused through the length and breadth of the Empire.

Both child and mother, the Duchess of York, were said by the Royal physicians, Dr. David Miles and Sir Henry Simson, to be doing nicely.

King's Fourth Grandchild.

The little princess is the fourth grandchild of the King, her own sister, Princess Elizabeth, and Princess Mary's two sons, having preceded her into the world.

British dynasts had hoped the child, who had been expected for days would be a boy, thus ensuring a direct male succession to the throne after the Prince of Wales.

The birth was at 9.22 p.m. during a storm which beat about the old castle in a way remindful of the tempest of Shakespeare's Macbeth, the plot of which was laid in the castle.

The accouchement took place in Duchess' childhood bedroom. Besides Sir Henry Simson, who is a noted obstetrician, and Dr. David Miles, the Duchess was attended by Nurse Beevors, who was with her at the time Princess Elizabeth, now four years old, was born.

Directly after birth of the child, it was taken by Nurse Beevors to John R. Clynes, British Home Secretary who has remained here for several days in order to attest birth of a Royal heir, as required by custom.

Mr. Clynes took the Royal child in his arms, and directly wired the Lord Mayor of London, and the War Office, whose duty it is to arrange firing of an artillery salvo in a first salute to the babe.

Word Sent to King

News of the birth was telegraphed immediately to their Majesties the King and Queen who quickly sent back messages of congratulations to the Duke and Duchess. Early this morning according to an official bulletin from the gray old castle "The Royal mother and the little Princess are making highly satisfactory progress."

Tonight the great beacon of logs piled by the county folk on Hunter's Hill, two miles from Glamis Castle, will be lit to celebrate the event. It is said loyal Scotsmen are pressing that the child be named Margaret, the ancient Scottish royal name.

Lindsay Officials To Curb Epidemic

LINDSAY, August 22 (Special to The Examiner). — With a view to combatting infantile paralysis in this town and district, the local Board of Health has ordered the Sunday Schools closed for an indefinite period. Children are also forbidden to enter the moving picture theatres.

Dr. Blanchard, local Medical Health Officer, reports that there are at present five cases of infantile paralysis in town and one in Ops Township. Serum has been administered, and some of the cases are responding to the treatment.

Princess Elizabeth Is Highly Pleased With Baby Sister

GLAMIS, Scotland, Aug. 22 (A.P.)—Princess Elizabeth was awakened early to-day by Nurse Knight, who informed her of the arrival of a baby sister whom she would be allowed to see later to-day. She has had many surprises in her young life, but this was the greatest thus far, and her delight was unbounded.

Glamis Town was flag-bedecked to-day in honor of the birth of a new heir; the banners fluttering in the calm, cold air, which succeeded last night's wild weather.

A special staff of telephone and telegraph operators reporting for duty were soon busy dealing with a flood of messages of congratulation and inquiry from all parts of the world.

EXHIBITION OPENS GATES FOR 52ND SUCCESSIVE YEAR

Year Designed as "All Canada Year"—Day Given Each Province.

OVER MILLION EXPECTED.

Feature of Day's Program is Women's Ten-mile Swim.

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 22, (C.P.)—Canada to-day drew back the curtain on her most prominent display window. At eight o'clock this morning the gates of the Canadian National Exhibition were opened for the 52nd consecutive year.

During the next two weeks—Aug. 22 to Sept. 6—at least a million people—and well over that number if expectations of officials are realized—will view the wonders of the world's greatest annual fair. Displays from every country in the Empire, United States, a goodly number from Europe and South America, carries the visitor on a tour of enchantment from the tropical seas to scenes in the far Orient.

The year has been designated "All Canada year" and a day given the name of each province. On their respective days the produce and industry of each province will be featured, and as far as humanly possible everything Canadian produced is being used. A feature on the musical programme is the all-Canadian band comprising members of all permanent military forces throughout the Dominion.

The fair was officially opened by E. W. Beatty, President and Chairman of the Canadian Pacific Railway, whose opening speech was followed by those of a number of other prominent in the life of the Dominion.

Dominating to-day's programme was the ten-mile swim for women, and long before "hopping off" time a huge crowd had gathered along the Exhibition seawall to witness the crowning of the world's champion woman distance swimmer.

WHEAT YIELDS ABOVE AVERAGE

PASTURES HIT HARD.

Reports of the agricultural representatives of the Department of Agriculture for the week ending August 16, indicate that the farmers are well advanced with their harvesting operations and that yields of Fall wheat and Spring grains promise to be exceptionally good, according to the weekly crop bulletin.

"Weather conditions have been ideal for the storing of grain and for stook threshing which is becoming very popular. Crops such as potatoes, beans, corn and tobacco will have light yields due to the lack of rainfall, and in some sections growers report that the bean blossoms are falling off. The lack of rain will affect the yields of all fruits, and especially apples and grapes.

"Pastures are severly burned and many dairymen especially in Western Ontario, have had to resort to feeding their cattle grain and ensilage. This expense, in addition to the low price being paid for milk at cheese factories, is causing farmers a good deal of concern. The shortage of pasture is also increasing the shipments of cattle and lambs, with the result that many cattle will be sold at a loss."

The report for Ontario County, reads: "The weather has been excellent for harvesting and threshing is general throughout the county. Yields of Spring grain are invariably good and the quality of the grain is good. Harvesting is very much more advanced than in the average season. Potatoes will be reduced considerably below last year. Local dealers are paying $1 per bag."

In Northumberland: "Live stock condition is being affected considerably by the dry weather, pastures being poor and stock not making proper gains in many instances. Prices also are down from a year ago, which is in part counterbalanced by the low price of feed. Milk supply has gone down appreciably, due to shortage in pastures, hot weather and flies."

Proceedings in a London court were interrupted recently by the noise made by a man peddling socks among the spectators.

FISHERMEN OF LONE SETTLEMENT ON P.E.I. COAST SAIL EIGHT MILES TO SAVE 4 FROM BLAZING CRAFT Rescued Men So Badly Burned Life is Despaired of.

FEW DETAILS.

May Be Other Sailors Trapped in Ruins of Mystery Ship.

Charlottetown, P.E.I., Aug 22 —(C. P.) — The bitter tragedy of fire at sea shot through with a mystery that lies untold on the lips of two men dead and four dying, was enacted late last night off the isolated settlement of Mimminigast on the western tip of Prince Edward Island. Eight miles off that village in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, an unknown vessel burned to the water's edge. Two men still nameless in reports reaching Summerside, were taken dead from the sea, one burned to death, and the other drowned. Four were brought ashore unconscious, their bodies so badly burned that life is despaired of.

May be Others on Vessel.

Whether others were trapped on the flaming ship could not be learned here, nor did the meagre reports of the tragedy and rescue reaching Charlottetown from Summerside at midnight tell whether the fishermen of Mimminigash took the dead and the barely living from the vessel still afloat or from charred and floating wreckage.

Last evening it was learned the burning ship was discerned at Mimminigash, a torch on the horizon, eight miles off shore to the northwest The flames were seen until well after nine o'clock and an effort was made to have the Dominion Government steamer Brant despatched to the assistance of the vessel, but the Brant had gone to Richibuctou, N.B.

Residents of the settlement manned their small gasoline boats and went to the rescue. At eleven o'clock they were still out on the Gulf. At midnight they returned, bearing with them the bodies of two dead and four unconscious forms.

4,000 ARE SLAIN BY NATIONALISTS

Crushing Defeat is Given Red Forces in Chinese Battle.

2,000 RIFLES CAPTURED.

HANKOW, China Aug. 21.—(CP)—The slaughter of 4,000 Communists by provincial troops in western Kiangsi province and the capture of 2,000 red rifles there were reported today in Chinese press dispatches.

This apparently is the first crushing defeat administered to the Red marauders who have been murdering, looting and burning throughout the Yangtse valley for several weeks.

News of the provincial victory followed closely word of the burning of Wuseh, Hupeh province, by Communists who looted the city of 6,000 population and ransacked the countryside. Wusueh is an important Yangtse River port 25 miles above Kiukiang Kiangsi.

Fearing for their lives, inhabitants of Wusueh abandoned their property virtually without protest and fled, many going to Kiukiang, where the foreign gunboats were anchored.

Communist armies late last month sacked and destroyed large sections of Changsha, Hunan Province capital. Later they threatened Hankow, Wuchang, and Hanyang, sister cities 600 miles were frightened away by foreign warships which were rushed to Hankow by American, British, and Japanese Governments.

Since then the Communists have ravaged smaller places, avoiding the cities where the Nationalist Government has concentrated small bodies of troops withdrawn from Honan and Shantung Province fronts, where the Government is seeking to stem the northern alliance rebellion.

VEDAS VIOLATED COASTING LAWS

Cargo of Beer Detained Until Penalty Deposited in Windsor.

EXPORT ACT UNBROKEN.

OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 22. (C.P.) —A brief statement setting forth the facts in the possession of his department, with respect to the steamer Vedas, seized by preventive officers and later released at Windsor, was issued yesterday evening by Hon. E. B. Ryckman, Minister of National Revenue. The statement follows:

"Comments have appeared in the press upon the action of the Department of National Revenue (Customs) in connection with the S. S. Vedas.

"The facts so far as known at present are that this vessel cleared coastwise from Montreal to Port Arthur with a cargo of ale and beer, billed to a consignee in Winnipeg. It was discovered that a part of the cargo had been transferred to other boats in Lake Erie, and officers of the preventive service assuming some offense against coasting regulations had been committed detained the vessel pending the deposit of the penalty provded by law, the vessel meantime having been taken into the port of Windsor. After deposit of the penalty the law provides that the vessel be released.

"The parties charged with the alleged offense will have an opportunity of presenting their case before any decision is made.

"The vessel was detained and penalty imposed for alleged violation of the customs law and not for any infraction of the export act."

GRAIN BOAT SINKS AFTER COLLISION

Donald Stewart Resting in 18 Feet of Water Near Cornwall.

CARGO PARTLY FLOODED.

MONTREAL, Que., Aug. 21 (C.P.) —The grain boat Donald Stewart, of the Canadian Steamships Lines, is resting on bottom, in eighteen feet of water, near the entrance to the Cardinal Canal, following a collision with the steamer Keyvive early today. The Donald Stewart has a hole amidships and part of her cargo of 80,000 bushels of wheat is flooded. The scene of the mishap is near Cornwall, Ont.

The Keyvive was slightly damaged but was able to proceed up stream. According to information received here there is no danger of the Donald Stewart blocking the canal. It is hoped that the work of taking out the undamaged portion of the wheat will be commenced immediately, and the vessel will shortly be refloated.

HOARDERS ARE SHOT

MOSCOW, Russia, Aug. 22. (C.P.) —Nine men charged with hoarding Russian silver coin were shot yesterday. They were sentenced to death for counter-revolutionary activities.

BLAKEBURN MINE HOLDS 22 BODIES

BLAKEBURN, B. C., Aug. 22.—(CP)—Seven more bodies were located today in the Blakeburn mine in which 45 men were killed in a gas explosion more than a week ago. 23 bodies have now been found, and 22 are still missing.

Rescue men, still doggedly fighting their way through cave-ins, found two of the victims in the hoist room of number 15 level and brought them out. Five more were found in another part of the mine and will be taken out when possible.

Funerals of 13 victims will be held at Princeton today, Rev. Father F. Carlyle will conduct mass for nine men of the Catholic faith. In one large grave five men will be laid together, four in another, three in a third. There will be one single burial.

Relief organization was started today and a Province wide appeal will be made for aid for the survivors of the victims. It is estimated close to $40,000 will be needed.

JOE WRIGHT IS NO MATCH FOR "BOB" PEARCE

decided to-night at Hamilton arena—the third full card in as many nights Canada is undefeated in the wrestling matches, four titles having already come to the grapplers wearing the Maple Leaf. But in the boxing as in nearly all lines of Empire competition, Engand holds the lead, suppying the majority of new champions in the classes already settled.

Empire athletics will come to an end on Saturday when the field and track men will stage perhaps their greatest show of any of the three days given over to them. Ten events are down for decision.

Three records fell at yesterday's meet and one was twice broken. As the opening thrill to a program of sensational achievements, Percy Williams, Canada's Olympic hero, shot to the front as heat winner in 100 yards after getting away last in a field of six. In his remarkable race Williams equaled the Canadian record of 9 3/5 seconds.

The record shatterers got in their first lick when J. H. Viljoen, South Africa's great all-round man, defeated Lord David Burghley in a heat trial of the 120 yard high hurdler. Burghley, however, qualifies for the final to-morrow. Viljoen's record time of 14 9-10 seconds went skidding two minutes later and a new Canadian mark was set when H. Q. Davies, his fellow-countryman, hopped the obstacles and finished a winner in 14 7-10 seconds. Davies is recognized as one of the world's best at his specialty.

But it was Viljoen and H. Hart, another South African, who caught popular fancy, for Viljoen after his record achievement in defeating Lord Burghley, came back upon the field and won the running high jump. Hart was the double winner of the day, taking down both titles in the shot put and the discus throw.

As the track program came to an end in the gathering dusk, rowing titles were decided down off Burlington Beach. Bob Pearce, Australia's sensational sculler, took the singles honors as 75,000 people roared a great ovation along the Burlington shore. Jack Beresford, England, Fred Bradley, England, and Joe Wright, Jr., Canada, proved no match for the powerful Australian.

England captured the fours (without coxswain), and New Zealanders scored a popular victory in the fours (with coxswain). Canada placed second in both events.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, August 22.—Receipts of cattle at the Union Stock Yards yesterday were: 54 cattle, 30 calves, 39 hogs, and 106 sheep and lambs. There were 200 head of common cattle in addition to the fresh receipts in the offering at the yards early yesterday. Sales up to 11 o'clock accounted for a few plain to fair quality steers at 3½ to 5½ cents a pound, and some good cows at 5 to 5½ cents. Most of the stale cattle, chiefly stockers, were unsold. Closing prices Wednesday were 25c a cwt. lower for the week on a week's suppiy, about 400 head more than the week previous. Most of the calves of yesterday's supply were off the road. Plain to medium kinds sold from 5 to 8 cents a pound, or steady prices, quality considered. Nothing choice offered.

Lambs closed steady at 9 cents a pound for good ewes and wethers and 7 cents for culls and bucks. Sheep are weak at 1½c to 4½ cents a pound. The hog market is unsettled, with bids 25c a cwt. lower at $9.75 f.o.b. and $10.75 w.o.c. for bacons.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WIINIPEG, August 22.—In a market lacikng any real feature, wheat prices on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange at the close of trading yesterday were ⅛c to ⅜c lower. October closed at 92⅜c, December 92⅞c, and May, which early in the session touched $1.01⅛, finished at $1.00⅜ to $1.00½.

Export demand was very limited and outside interest at a low ebb, with the result that pit operations for the mast part were of a local characer, and light in volume. No spreading of note between Winnipeg and Chicago made its appearance, and there were many inactive spells during the session.

Confirmation of good sales recently of Manitoba's was contained in cables, while Broomhall was inclined to believe that Russia was a less important factor than previously.

Light trading was reported in cash wheat and coarse grains.

MONTREAL PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Aug. 22.—A moderate amount of business was transacted in all lines of cash grain today and millfeed were also in good demand.

The feature of the dairy and produce markets was the easier feeling that developed for butter and values were reduced ½ to ¾ cents per lb. The trade was fair. Receipts were 3,341 boxes.

The inquiry for all grades of eggs was fair and prices ruled steady. Receipts were 692 cases.

Potatoes were unchanged at 85c to 90c per 80-pound bags, of new, locally grown stock.

TORONTO PRODUCE

TORONTO, Aug. 22.—A fair trade prevailed once again on the butter market yesterday, and good-sized sales were made at 29½c to 30c for Ontario No. 1, and 28c to 28½c for No. 2. Dealers reported that some buyers were not following the general advance, though small lots were well-cleaned up. The 31c asked for Western was difficult to secure in many cases, though some dealers stated that they had completed transactions on this basis. The English market was weaker at 132 shillings per cwt. of 112 pounds, which meant a drop of ¼c per pound. With the Toronto market showing signs of continuing strong, some New Zealand butter will be sent on to this city from the next Halifax arrival.

Cream

Cream prices did not change yesterday, but there was a general feeling that today would see a change, which would mean better prices for shippers at the first of the week or on Saturday.

Cheese

The cheese market was dull, with trading at 16¼c for new large, 16½c for twins, and 16¾c for triplets.

Eggs

There was an improved demand on the egg market, and prices for receipts of Ontario eggs went up ½c on extras and firsts. Graded Ontario supplies were quoted at 31½c to 32c for extras, 29½c to 30c for firsts, and 24½c for seconds, in free cases. The demand for seconds was poor, and this this phase of the market did not help sales of Western eggs any too much. Dealers pointed out that Western arrivals contained many cases of seconds, and the requirements was for extras and firsts. Montreal dealers have found this market open during the past few days for good-sized lots of eggs, and, with Ontario production at a low ebb, it is possible that many more shipments will arrive, locally, from this city.

Be Fair to the Motorist

Pedestrians figure in nearly Half the Automobile Accidents

Statistics show that pedestrians are concerned in nearly half the accidents on public thoroughfares. Yet all accidents on the road are referred to as "automobile" accidents!

Those who walk on streets and highways should become "traffic conscious" just as those who drive. For their own safety, they should exercise the same Care, Courtesy and Common Sense which is expected of the motorist.

Too often the pedestrian infringes on the rights of the motorist, and often he insists upon his own rights in the face of certain danger which the motorist cannot avoid.

Pedestrians, be Careful, be Courteous, show Common Sense. You will have little satisfaction if you get hurt in saying that the driver was to blame. Remember, also, that others may be injured when your lack of caution forces a motorist to swerve his car.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 22, 1930

TARIFF WARFARE.

While there may be regret, there can be neither surprise nor complaint here at the action of the New Zealand Government in placing Canadian motor vehicles and accessories on the general tariff list, thus depriving our manufacturers of the benefits hitherto accorded them under the British preference and compelling them to face a 75 per cent. duty—an insurmountable obstacle, according to the heads of the industry.

It would be inconsistent on our part to blame New Zealand for taking a leaf out of Canada's book. Human nature is pretty much the same the world over, and our prohibitory tariff against the southern Dominion's staple product has been met by a barrier raised against a leading Canadian export. Canada acted in similar fashion when faced by a similar threat from the United States against our agricultural and livestock export business.

According to the Canada Year Book for 1929, which is the latest issue as yet available, the Canadian motor car industry in the year ending March 31, 1926, exported nearly three million dollars worth of goods to New Zealand. It is known that the figures for 1929 will show a substantial increase. The lucrative Canadian trade which will thus be killed, unless the two Governments come speedily to terms, will pass to the United States and to a lesser extent to Britain, which will continue to enjoy the preference in the New Zealand market which Canada has forfeited.

Particularly in the Border Cities, whose fortunes ebb and flow with those of the automobile business, will be felt the loss of trade that has given steady employment to some thousands of workers. To all such the higher prices for butter that will follow the cutting off of the supply from New Zealand will appear like a bad joke.

The New Zealand Premier evidently took to heart what Mr. Bennett said about legislating for one's own country. But tariff warfare between countries within the Empire does not appear to be a very convincing prelude to the Imperial Conference from which such high hopes of mutually advantageous commercial interchange has been anticipated. Tariffs are rapidly becoming the equivalent of war among modern Powers.

WHY NOT PETERBOROUGH?

The announcement a short time ago of the organization of a club in Millbrook for the promotion of aquatic sports is a commentary upon the strange lack of interest in such sports that exists in Peterborough.

Millbrook young people, who have to travel over to the Otonabee River to get a chance to participate in water sports, are enthusiastic enough to form a club to carry on paddling and swimming, while this much larger community with the river running through the city has no organization to match the live coterie of athletes of the neighboring village.

This city, the home of the world-famous Peterborough canoe, with every facility for practice in paddling and other water sports, has to let the Canadian canoe championships pass without a single entry.

To paraphrase the familiar verse, "We have the ships, we have the money, too," but apparently the men are missing.

There is no reason why this centre of the canoe-building industry should not have a flourishing aquatic organization, and surely no reason either why it should not be represented in important championship events by a band of expert paddlers.

LET US HELP OURSELVES.

While Peterborough is awaiting the promised relief of unemployment by both the Federal and Provincial Governments, we might perhaps more profitably put forth stronger efforts to help ourselves and initiate whatever work needs doing.

"Hope deferred maketh the heart sick," so why not let us try to do something on our own part to alleviate, as best we can, the industrial ills which need prompt action rather than ponderous promises. Reference has already been made to the City Council's extension of its seasonal work program. By keeping its men employed, and that no doubt by increasing its estimated appropriation for this summer, the Council has done a community and civic service that should not be overlooked. Mayor Denne and his associates could have permitted themselves to have caught the prevalent infection of retrenchment, and with defensible excuse could have cut short their local improvement plans and left their workmen to shift for themselves.

The course the Council has followed would be a decided advantage if it were generally adopted. And in this connection it will be grateful news that the directors of the Y.M.C.A. purpose proceeding in the near future with their plans for enlarging their building.

Another project that suggests itself at this time is the addition to the Nicholls Hospital which has been under consideration for several years. The hospital's need of increased accommodation and facilities is no doubt becoming more acute. It has not been publicly mentioned of late, but the public must realize that the pressing requirements of two years have not diminished.

If Nicholls Hospital is eventually to be enlarged, why not now when the work it would provide for unemployed tradesmen would be so welcome to them and helpful to the community?

Another suggestion of more general application is the assistance many citizens could give by going ahead with improvements, however small the outlay, to their homes and stores and other buildings that may need repairs. This would include the employment of men in all the building trades and also laborers. Work of only a few days or possibly weeks for men now idle would be a substantial help to the community as a whole. And if all such available jobs were started the effect would make an appreciable difference in this period of unemployment.

TIME FOR THOUGHT.

As long as times were booming, pointed out a popular service writer the other day, our current industrial and economic system seemed fairly easy to understand. Life was just one long process of expansion. Some new miracle had made the sky the limit for practically everything. Wages were always going to rise, sales records were always going to go higher, and business generally was always going to be better, each year, than it had been the year before.

It was beautifully simple, and it bred in most of us an optimism that was one of the prodigies of the age.

Now that things aren't doing quite so nicely, this optimism is giving way to a pessimism equally excessive. Sackcloth and ashes are having their day. The industrial system that formerly looked so simple now seems complex beyond human understanding.

A good deal of the trouble, perhaps, grows out of the fact that our mechanical processes went ahead faster than our intellectual activities. We had bothered to try to understand this queer combination of financial and mechanical puzzles which brought prosperity. Now we are being forced to think about them; it is no longer possible simply to take the result for granted.

The upshot probably will be that we shall get back on the highway to prosperity with a much clearer idea of what the whole business is about, and consequently a much better chance of getting there, than was the case before.

For the present, however, the whole thing is perplexing.

The chief trouble in nearly every line of business, from agriculture to the manufacture of automobiles, seems to be over-production. We have brought forth more wheat, more automobiles, more bricks, more suits of clothes than can be sold. The result—idle farm lands, and factories which are working on a part-time basis, if at all.

But what is the remedy? A strict curtailment of production all around? This means that many farm lands and many factories must remain idle permanently. More serious than that, it also means that many laborers must do the same. Is that the only way out? If so, we are indeed in a bad fix.

The optimism that carried us along during the last half dozen years must come to the rescue now and persuade us that there is a better solution. Somewhere there is a way by which we can use to the utmost our amazing facilities for producing things without, at the same time, clogging the channels of trade with a surplus. It is up to us to find this way. If the current business depression compels us to stop and take thought so that we do find it, we shall be amply repaid for the trouble it has caused us.—Chatham News.

THE INDIAN PROBLEM.

Sir John Simon, chairman of the commission entrusted with the task of making a recommendatory report with regard to India, delivered two most enlightening addresses in Toronto with reference to what is now regarded as one of the greatest Empire problems. In a most illuminating manner he accentuated the difficulties which naturally arise in granting self-government to many millions so sharply divided with regard to militant religions, the people illiterate to the extent of over seventy per cent. and their methods of thought and life based upon traditions thousands of years old, while 300 rigid castes range from the Brahmin to the "untouchable," the last named unfortunates precluded from even drawing river water except at specified spots. To even the most casual observer it can thus readily be seen that immediate concessions to the extent of Gandhi's demands would inevitably result in a state of appalling chaos and internecine fighting. The speaker told in detail of the infinite patience which had guided Great Britain in her efforts to gradually bring about a sense of self-reliance and responsibility among the natives, and he made the proud boast that during all the exacting years of British administration there has never been a single charge of exploitation. In every direction and at all times there has been the one desire to improve existing conditions and to cultivate an increasing degree of self-reliance. For the ambition of the Hindoo to obtain national status Sir John stated that he had every sympathy, but he added that any legislative solution "must afford adequate protection for the rights of minorities; it must take due account of all classes, including the unseen and unheard masses of India; it must grapple effectively with the difficulties of law and order, and the essential conditions of Indian defense; then it must be sufficiently elastic to provide suitably for the very different stages of social and political advance which are to be found in different parts of the country."

The whole tone of the observations made the fact very clear that Sir John entered upon his onerous two-year task with characteristic thoroughness and that in every essential he has carried out the mandate given him in a most broadminded and tolerant manner. There is obviously still much to be done to prepare the natives for additional responsibilities and an impartial consideration of the facts must lead to the inevitable conclusion that Great Britain, with her vast previous experience and fine sense of justice, is most fitted for the task. —Brantford Expositor.

Small Boy Seriously Trampled By Horse

LINDSAY, Aug. 22 (Special to Examiner)—Charles Puttsey, a little child who was visiting at the farm of N. Palmer, Sonya, Mariposa Township is in the Port Perry Hospital suffering from severe injuries. The little fellow had accompanied Mr. Palmer to the pasture to look at the stock when a colt without any warning leaped on the boy. The animal trampled him severely, inflecting serious bodily injuries and crushing in a couple of his ribs.

Toronto Painting Hung at "Ex"

This spendid portrait study of Mrs. Harry Sifton, famous Canadian horsewoman, and her son, Clifford, has just been completed by Kenneth K. Forbes, Toronto artist, and will be on view at the all-Canadian art show at the Canadian National Exhibition, which opens on Friday. A silvery harmony, in keeping with the color scheme of the central group, has been achieved by the artist without the use of sunlight effects, and the psychological significance of this horse-loving family is indicated in the anxiety of the dogs to be off, the inclined posture of the horse, the mounted rider and the figure of Mrs. Sifton as she waits for her horse to be brought to her. Clifford is on his own pony, Cameron. The wire-haired terrier at the left is Neb and the Airedale at the right is Stevo, two of Mrs. Sifton's favorites. The canvas is one of the largest paintings on exhibit this year. Kenneth K. Forbes was educated in Scotland and England, was twice wounded during overseas service and received the military cross. Two other large paintings, "Sanctuary Wood" and "Howitzer in Action" were painted by the same artist.

TEMPLE TOWER

By CAPTAIN DRUMMOND

"Mes amis," he said gently, "it is for the last time. My ladder is nearly finished; soon, very soon the moment will come. It matters not to me what these two Englishmen suspect maybe it is just idle curiosity on their part. It is no offence against your laws to flash a red light and then a blue across the Marsh. There is nothing here which all the world may not see. But those lights—they are seen by him. And he knows what they mean. And his soul is sick with terror because he knows that death is near. Moreover he knows"—and now the voice grew, if anything, more gentle and sweet)— "that that death will not be quick. Not for him the swift bullet that shatters the brain. But a death of lingering agony—a death which makes him welcome death as a lover welcomes his mistress. My arms will be about him, and when I have torn him limb from limb my hands will squeeze the last fleeting breath from his body. Ah! yes—he knows. Once more shall he see the lights, to remind him that I am still here. And then we will go to bed."

"You talk too much," grumbled Spragge. "And don't you forget, Mister, what you promised us after it was all over."

"I shall not forget," said the other contemptuously. "Now turn out the light."

Came a sudden darkness, and we crouched there enthralled. Had it been said blusteringly, had the voice been what one would have expected from such a being, half the effect would have been lost. But those soft melodious, gentle words carried with them an icy thrill, impossible to set down on paper. And whatever might have been Granger's crime in the past, I felt sorry for him if this man ever got hold of him.

Suddenly there came a sharp hissing noise, and a bright red light shone out. And then things happened quickly. I had a brief glimpse of a man silhouetted in the light not twenty yards away of the beast-faced ladder maker staring out above our heads, and then the light went out. He too had seen the man, and with a grunting cry he hurled himself through the open window and crashed past us so close that we could almost have touched him. For a while we heard him blundering round in the darkness, searching for the other watcher. The instant he had jumped past us Hugh, fearing that Spragge might join in the search, had risen and led the ray round the house in the direction away from the front door. Which was just what did happen, and for some ten minutes, hidden behind a small tool shed we listened to the two men as they searched. But it was useless—the mysterious unknown had disappeared completely—and at length they gave it up and returned to the house.

"Couldn't find an elephant on a night like this, let alone a man," came Spragge's growling voice. "It's your damned fault anyway, playing with those fool lights."

"My friend," said the other, "the man was there anyway. The light merely discovered him."

"Probably that swine who was here this afternoon," said Spragge, and then voices died away as they got round the corner of the house.

The front door shut with a bang, and still we stayed on. Was anything further going to occur? Would the ladder maker still insist on flashing his signal across the Marsh, or would he follow Spragge's advice and give it up? Apparently it was to be the latter, for shortly afer a light appeared in one of the upper window Then that, too, went out, and the house was in darkness. The charming trio had retired for the night.

"Come on," said Hugh. "I think we've seen all we are likely to to-night."

We skirted along by the footpath until we reached the dyke, and though it seemed to me that the need for precaution had gone, I noticed that Hugh still moved with the utmost caution. And it wasn't until we had put a good half mile between us and the farm that he relaxed his vigilance.

"There is an air of efficiency about this bunch," he remarked, "that behoves us to be careful. Spragge and his spouse are negligible even the handsome bloke making ladders seems to have his intentions cut and dried. But it is the others."

"Do you think there were more than one there to-night?" I said.

"Ask me another," he answered. "There may have been half a dozen for all I know. On the other hand, the man who showed up in the light, and the man who crossed the outhouse door may be one and the same person. But one thing is cleared up anyway he and that horrible brute are not working in collusion."

"It is possible," said Freckles, "that he is a detective who is after the other swine."

"As you say, young fellow, it is possible," agreed Hugh. "The trouble is that there are the hell of a lot of things that seem to me to be possible. But one thing is quite definitely certain. We've got to get that girl of yours out of Temple Tower in the near future. She's not in any danger to-night—so there is no need to worry at the moment. But in view of the prospective caller, I think she will have to have a telegram recalling her to London."

"I've never thought of such a specimen," said Freckles. "He made one positively sick to look at."

"You noticed his slight accent, Peter," said Hugh. "And the way he started; Mes amis. The whole darned bunch are foreigners."

'What I principally noticed was his voice," I said. "A voice like that from such a man is the most astounding thing I've ever known."

We walked on briskly. Now that the thing was over for the night the thought of bed was becoming increasingly attractive, especially as our long spell without movement at the farm had made us all a bit chilly. The motor-boat loomed up as a welcome halfway landmark, and shortly after we left the dyke and struck off right-handed.

"Sometime," said Hugh, "when we've got a spare moment, we might follow that dyke down to the sea. Though it seems pretty obvious that it must be clear. Also we might make a few discreet inquiries concerning the boat itself."

At last the car hove in sight, and with a sigh of relief young Freckles fell into the back seat.

"Thank the Lord no one has pinched that," he remarked sleepily. "Every garment I possess is full of sand, and—Good Lord! won't she start?"

Most emphatically she wouldn't start moreover the engine, when Hugh pressed the self-starter, was making the most peculiar noise.

"What the devil has happened?" he said grimly. "Has she been tampered with?"

He got down and opened the bonnet then he gave a low whistle. He had flashed an electric torch on to the engine, and by its light, propped up inside, I saw a piece of paper.

"This is no business of yours, Captain Drummond," he read out slowly. "There are quite enough people engaged in it already without you butting in. This is only a small warning and punishment for what you have done up to date next time, if you should be so ill-advised as to let there be a next time, you will be hurt."

"Is that so?" said Hugh softly, and then he began to laugh. "Stung, you fellows, stung good and proper. We're either here for the night or we've got to walk."

"What's happened?" demanded Freckles.

"Our friendly correspondent, my lad," said Hugh, "in addition to embarking on a literary career has amused himself by removing all the sparking plugs. And cars have grave difficulty in running without sparking plugs."

"Haven't you got any spare ones?" I asked.

EMBARRASSING MOMENTS

A Thought

RELIGION AND SCIENCE

Science is tested knowledge, while religion is in the realm of faith, a valuing attitude. The relation of philosophy to religion is closer; but philosophy is a series of intellectual judgments and does not concern itself with the control of the notions and the moods of men. The dependence of science and philosophy upon religion, on the other hand, is often overlooked. Both science and philosophy are searches for truth; but if the love of truth has not been inculcated by religion and morals, it is doubtful whether truth will be accepted when found, or even be taught, when it is opposed to the self-interest of groups or individuals. The scientific spirit is, then, a part of religion; and when ethical religion loses its hold upon men we can scarcely expect that the devotion to truth will remain.—A. Elwood in Man's Social Destiny.

What To-day Means To You.

If August 22nd is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8 a.m. to 9:30 a.m., from 2:30 p.m. to 4 p.m. and 11 p.m. to midnight. The danger periods are from noon to 1:40 p.m. and 6:30 p.m. to 8 p.m.

This date is a blank anniversary so far as astrological influences go. There will probably be a tendency to slack, and opportunities may be missed. It is the "Every Days" that count. They must be made to tell or the years have failed. A quiet time.

The child born on this August 22nd will enter this world with the gift of laughter. It will have a happy, sweet disposition, and will make friends, always. It will be vivacious, fun-loving, sympathetic, and romantic. It will make only a fair student; as it will be too indifferent to ever gain scholastic honors.

You are a dreamer, and not a doer. You indulge in the phantasmagoria of picture thoughts, both of the past and the future—many times when you should fix your mind only on the duty and occupation actually existing. You are building castles in the air when you should be laying more material foundations. You hate to buckle into the harness and to put your energies and thoughts into the hum-drum duties of everyday living. You believe yourself capable of playing an important part in life, and so you are, but you do not work hard enough for it. You are not concentrating on your talents, you are not finely focusing your mind. Your self-confidence almost swells to self-obsession. You invite every Brutus to unsheathe his knife by boasting.

You do not have a patient temperament, and you often lose out by not letting things develop in their normal way. You rush through things too fast for expediency or efficiency. You would enjoy any occupation connected with public life—social work, amusements, lecturing. You have a pleasant manner with people, when you forget self. Crowds, noise and confusion do not worry you. It would be advisable for you to mate with an Aries or Sagitarius person. Your birthstone is the sardonyx, and your flower is the poppy. Your beneficial colors are red and orange. Women are your enemies.

MINE MARKET REMAINS FIRM

Small Gains Registered in Many Issues—Oil Stocks Outstanding.

NICKEL STEADY.

TORONTO, August 22. (C.P.) — Though turnover was light the mining market during the early period to-day was relatively strong, small gains following any trading attention in almost every instance. The oil group again supplied the only outstanding issues.

Ajax Oil, opening at $2.04 and touching a high of $2.15, was six above last night at 52.09 at noon. Nordon, as a result of renewed interest believed due to the interesting stage reached by the company's well, in the Button Willow field in California, continued to rise, standing at midday at $1.06 for a net gain of 8. Home Oil recovered 10 to $2.15 but Dalhousie was off 5 to 60. Nickel rights were well taken at 9c, unchanged from yesterday's close and the stock held steady at $22. Noranda moved up a quarter to $21; Waite Ackerman 9 to $3.09 and Amulet regained 3 to 50. Lindsley's lightly traded. Sudury Basin up 5, showing the only change in the group at noon.

Golds remained firm but were in discard as far as trading went; Oriole saw some activity but was merely holding at 69. Howey softened, dropping 5 to 40 under some evident liquidation.

CANADA IS READY TO MEET FORBES

New Zealand Premier Expected in Dominion Middle of September.

PACT ENDS OCT. 12.

OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 22.—(CP)—The Dominion Government is ready to discuss with Premier G. W. Forbes of New Zealand, on his arrival in Canada, the question of a direct trade agreement between the two countries. While Premier R. B. Bennett is now in Western Canada, this intimation came from official circles here today.

The Prime Minister of New Zealand, who yesterday announced that Canadian motor vehicles and accessories had been taken off the preference list and placed under the general tariff of his country, is expected to reach the Capital about the middle of September on his way to the Imperial conference. As present trade arrangements between Canada and New Zealand terminate on October 12, trade matters will be under discussion during his stay in the Capital.

Official notification is understood to have been given already by the Dominion to New Zealand that it could not extend the provisions of the Australian Trade Treaty, extended to New Zealand by order-in-council in 1925, beyond the beginning of October. But the attitude of the Government is that it is willing to negotiate a direct trade agreement.

This attitude on the part of the Conservative Administration was indicated in the House of Commons back in March last.

Sound films are to be made in Prague, Czechoslovakia.

CAPTAIN MISSING AFTER EXPLOSION

Tiny Oil-laden Craft Becomes Blazing Inferno.

ENGINEER SAVES FOUR.

CHARLOTTETOWN, P. E. I., Aug. 22.—(C.P.)—One man, skipper of the Saint John, N.B., fifteen foot motorboat Amerob, was missin and two of the crew in a critical state to-day from burns received when the little craft, laden with oil, was set afire by an explosion eight miles off Miminigash, P.E.I., last night. The name of the missing captain could not be learned and details of the tragedy were difficult to obtain to-day.

The Amerob sailed from Richibucto, N.B., yesterday afternoon for a destination that could not be learned from the survivors. She was laden with oil and carried a crew of five men, including the skipper. At six o'clock an explosion occurred over the stern, blowing the dory off the deck into the water. The craft was at once ablaze from stem to stern.

Robert Long, Richibucto, engineer of the Amerob, jumped overboard and swam to the dory which he righted and rowed back to the flaming vessel. He picked up three men, L. Doyle of Buctouche, N.B., Charles Michaud of Richibucto and a man whose name could not be obtained, hailing from Quebec.

No trace could be discovered of the craft, laen with oil, was set afire by captain.

NOVA SCOTIA IS ABSENT AT MEET

Provincial Session Detains Representatives From Dominion Employment Gathering.

SEND INFORMATION.

OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 22. (C.P.)—Nova Scotia will not be represented at the meeting of the Employment Service Council of Canada now in progress. Word was received to-day from the Provincial Government that owing to the fact that a Provincial conference on unemployment had been called for the same time, the Government would not send a representative. It will however, supply information on Provincial conditions. All other provinces are represented.

A suggestion that women who have independent means should not be given work when women in need were out of work was made by Mlle. R. Chamberland of Montreal. She thought an inquiry should be made among women and girls employed to find out whether they really needed work. She also suggested steps to return to the land people who had drifted into the city. Arrangements could be made for establishing families on deserted farms under supervision similar to that of the soldier settlement scheme.

OIL SECTION IS UNCHANGED

Consolidated Smelters Registered Substantial Gain, Advancing Three to 173.

MASSEY HARRIS UP.

TORONTO, August 22. (C.P.) — The market on the Toronto Stock Exchange firmed considerable towards noon after displaying weakness during the first hour. The volume was below that of the previous session but was well up with the average of the past couple of months.

The Oils were all unchanged with but one exception, International Pete; it sold off 1-8 to 7 7-8. British American went at 15 5-8 while Imperial sold at 19¼.

Consolidated Smelters had a substantial gain, advancing 3 to sell at 1.73. The other issues on the higher priced section were all unchanged.

TWO SWIMMERS FIGHT FOR LEAD

(By W. R. Wheatley, C. P. Staff Writer.)

TORONTO, Ont., August 22. — Thirty-two women swimmers seeking the Marathon championship of the world, plunged into Lake Ontario at 1.02 p.m., to-day. They will cover a ten mile rectangular course laid out by the Canadian National Exhibition, sponsors of the swim, on the opening day of the great Fair.

As Jack Guest, diamond sculls champion, pulled the rope that fired the starting cannon, the 32 went overboard with one great splash.

Thousands of persons lined the water front and swarmed out on the lake in boats. The course was kept clear by officials of all except the accompanying boats and the official craft.

The swimmers are not struggling merely for an empty title.

The winner will receive $5000 in cash and an opportunity to enter the men's swim later, where prizes total $15,000; second place is worth $2500, and third $1000. Other prizes together with the privilege of entering the men's swim, are $750, $500 and $250.

A hundred yards from the start the line of flashing arms was straightening out in a wide sweep across the water inside the concrete wall. For seven-eights of a mile they kept inside the wall, then swung for a short leg out into the lake; back again parallel with the shore, and inside the breakwater again.

Eighteen or twenty of the swimmers were stroking swiftly ahead in the front line 200 yards from the start.

Swimmers were so disguished with their coats of grease that even their own attendants could not distinguish them. Ethel Hertle Gary and Ethel McGary, both of New York, were reported to be among the four who were fighting for first place as they passed the Women's Building.

Three swimmers in jet-black grease took the lead within 200 yards of the start. The first, wearing a red cap, churning her way ahead by about two yards, was reported to be Ethel McGary of New York, national amateur champion of the United States. Passing the Old Fort, she was followed closely by six others.

Others were spread out behind almost all the way back to the starting point.

In front of the grandstand an unknown girl in white cap was out in front by a few inches, her rival in the red cap just behind her and the two jet-black greased swimmers trailing them.

Ethel Hertle Gary Leading

Passing the judges' stand Ethel Hertle Gary had increased her lead by a few yards. The second, third and fourth swimmers were bunched together trying hard to keep up the pace set by the champion of 1928.

The temperature of the water at starting time was approximately 65 degrees, an east wind brought the surface water diagonally towards the breakwater and was expected to keep the water temperature around that figure.

A hundred yards past the judges' stand it was announced that Mrs. Evelyn Armstrong of Detroit had taken second place, a few inches ahead of Mrs. Ruth Tower Corsan. Reaching the Gap, where the swimmers turned south into the lake, Ethel Hertle Gary maintained her lead of fifteen yards.

Ethel McGarry Takes Lead

Ethel McGary of New York, had led the marathon from the beginning it was announced by judges, three quarters of an hour after the start. Forging her way out into the lake, the white capped swimmer was at first supposed to be Ethel Hertle Gary champion of 1928, but she was picked up by boat No. 111. Ten yards behind her came Ruth Tower Corsan, with Margaret Ravior of Philadelphia and Mrs. Evelyn Armstrong of Detroit, struggling side by side for third place.

Nearing the end of the first lap Ethel McGarry, national amateur champion of the United States was maintaining a terrific pace, while her rivals fought to gain a few inches on her. The lead appeared to be weakening a little, near the breakwater she strayed off the course a little to lose two yards.

Margaret Ravoir moved into second place, with Mrs. Corsan trailing her closely. Miss McGarry's fast time had left all but seven or eight leaders far behind. At 2 o'clock she was seen to be threshing slightly while Margaret Ravoir overhauled her with a fast, clean stroke.

A few places behind, Ethel Hertle Gary of New York, who was at first reported to be the leader, now began to increase her speed, quickly passing May Looney of Warren, Ohio. Both Mrs. Gary and Mrs. Corsan were making a strong bid for the lead, where Miss McGarry held her record breaking speed. She appeared to be setting an unusually fast pace, forcing six of the swimmers to lower last year's time for the straight away stretch—from the starting boom to the turn at the western gap.

Margaret Ravior to Front

Margaret Ravior of Philadelphia forged into the lead at 2.05 p.m. with Mrs. Ruth Corsan taking second place and Ethel McGary dropping back to third place. The first two were struggling for the lead as they began the second lap, while fifty yards behind, Ethel Hertle Gary of Bronx, N.Y., was gaining fast in fifth place. Mrs. Evelyn Armstrong of Detroit kept her fourth place.

The time for the first lap was 1 hour, 17 minutes and 2-5 second.

Mrs. Corsan could not maintain her pace beside Miss Ravior, who pulled ahead four yards, while Ethel McGary, the original leader, now in third place, began to advance again.

Miss Ravior appeared to be holding the leadership with ease. At the same time Ruth Tower Corsan and Ethel McGarry were swimming side by side.

Thousands of people massed along the sea wall watched the swimmers fighting for supremacy in the second lap, while sea-fleas and power boats roared up and down course outside the breakwater. The steamer Dalhousie City paused near a first-aid ship, while passengers gathered along the rails to pick out their favorites with binoculars; lifeguard boats pulled along easily with apparently no work to do.

Blanche Robinson First Out

Blanche Robinson of Burns, Oregon, was the first of the swimmers to be taken from the water. She had not completed the first lap and was far behind the leaders. When her accompanying boats signalled for one of the course boats to take her from the water, she was thirteenth in a line-up of thirty-two.

Ethel McGarry Second

At 2.20 p.m. while crowds gathered around the bandstand in the centre of Exhibition Park to hear E. W. Beatty, K.C., President of the Canadian Pacific Railway, conduct the opening ceremonies of the exhibition the swimmers were passing the judges' stand. Margaret Ravior lead with a smooth, powerful stroke; five yards behind her Ethel McGarry in her white bathing cap and was gaining slowly, while Mrs. Corsan had dropped back about twenty yards. Mrs. Evelyn Armstrong held fourth place, with Ethel Hertle Gary challenging her. The others were falling far in the rear.

The second taken out was Anna C. Pearson of Worcester, Mass.; she was lifted out a few minutes after Miss Robinson.

TOBACCO STOCKS ADVANCE TO NEW HIGHS AT NEW YORK

Old American Class "B" Shares Register Six Point Advantage.

PIVOTAL STOCKS FIRM.

NEW YORK, Aug. 22 (C.P.)—The latest "bear" drive against stocks petered out in to-day's market, as it found itself up against a stone-wall of speculative apathy.

Bull forces resumed operations in the tobacco and merchandising shares on the basis of favorable cigarette consumption according to statistics for July. During the morning, however, bears depressed some of the coppers, rails and specialties to new low levels. Pivotal industrials were generally firm.

The new American Tobacco shares reached new highs, and the old Class "B" stock sold up more than 6 points, while other tobaccos gained 1 to more than 2. International Business Machines mounted more than 3 in response to announcement of a large back-log of orders, and the safety issues rallied on report of continued merger negotiations. Woolworth, Macy, and National Department Stores gained a point or more. Such stocks as U. S. Steel, American Telephone and General Electric gained slightly. Kennecott, Anaconda, Warner Bros., Illinois Central and Baltimore and Ohio sagged 1 to 2 to new lows, and Allied Chemical sold off more than 3.

Collingwood Terminals Declare 1¾ Dividend

At a meeting of the directors of The Collingwood Terminals Limited, the quarterly dividend of 1¾ per cent was declared, payable on the 1st day of September, to shareholders of record June 30th, 1930.

Recent favorable developments in the grain trade in Canada, point to most profitable operations in the next twelve months. At the end of last months, there was an exportable wheat surplus well over 50,000,000 bushels, compared with 7,500,000 bushels last year. The incoming crop will amount to nearly 400,000,000 bushels against 270,000,000 bushels in 1929.

These two factors together give grounds for believing that there will be even greater congestion in the terminal elevators than there was last year and the grain elevators throughout Canada will be taxed to the limit of their capacity to accommodate the incoming crop.

FINANCIAL BRIEFS

Directors of Famous Players Canadian Corporation have declared the regular quarterly dividend and Canadian stockholders who did not accept the offer to exchange their shares for those of Paramount public will receive the regular quarterly disbursement of 50 cents a share on September 27 next. The bulk of the outstanding shares of Famous Players were exchanged for Paramount Public shares and are now in the treasury of the company but there are still a few yet remaining in the hands of the public. Since May last there have been but few transactions in Famous Players on the Canadian exchanges indicating that most of the shares have been exchanged for Paramount. Famous Players Canadian Corporation will end its fiscal year with the current month and earnings are understood have been ahead of the previous period.

City Dairy Distributions

Distribution of $135 a share to the preferred stockholders of the City Dairy Company, Limited, will place close to a million dollars in hands of Canadians for reinvestment. Ownership of the preferred of this company is vested in the hands of a large number of people across the Dominion and with this capital being returned a lump sum investors will have to seek another channel for the reinvestment of their funds. The capital return is being made at a time when there is an active demand for bonds and at a time when the dividend return for well seasoned Canadian stocks is more liberal and for years past City Dairy preferred has been held for years by holders that will find it rather difficult to secure as satisfactory an investment there is a greater diversification of securities to choose from.

FAVORABLE REPORTS FROM NORDON CORP.

(Special to The Examiner)

TORONTO, Aug. 22.—Strength in Nordon Corp. shares is attributed on the street partly to a renewal of interest by those backing the issue and partly to reports that drilling operations by the company in the Button Willow field, California are reaching a most interesting stage. Latest word is that the management expects to strike oil at 5,000 feet instead of at 5,200 feet as originally anticipated.

The Amulet annual meeting has been called for Sept. 22 in Montreal, at that time information regarding results of treatment of ore from "P" ore body should be available, and the higher copper content of this material is expected to have an important effect on profits.

Most of the heavy buying of nickel rights which has sent the price a few cents to around 9 cents early to-day is reported to be coming from New York. With the expiration date only a week or so away the inference seems to be that some one looks for higher prices for the stock by the time the new shares are issues. The rights have a nominal value of approximately 12 cents each.

(Special to The Examiner)

WINNIPEG, Man. Aug. 22.—After opening lower based on the weakness in Liverpool local wheat prices advanced until they were 7-8 to 1-2 over the close Wednesday night. However, there was little of feature going on beyond the fact that offerings were extremely light, sentiment a little more friendly than it has been and in the later trade Chicago, which had displayed little or no pep from the start, weakened, and Winnipeg followed in sympathy, declining about 2 cents from the earlier high mark. Trade was largely local with considerable spreading between the different months, but mostly selling October against purchases of December. Export sales Wednesday afternoon and Thursday morning were placed at 625,000 bushels Manitobas and mostly worked by the Pool, very little being reflected in the local market. Liverpool closed 3-8c lower to 1-8 higher, when due 5-8 to 1¼ higher, and Russia was reported offering wheat freely at the equivalent of 2 1-2 cents under U. S. price levels.

AIMEE DECLINES TO SEE MOTHER

Controversy Over Temple Affairs Continues With Mrs. Kennedy.

COMMITTEE IS FOILED.

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Aug. 22 (C.P.)—The controversy which has raged between Aimee Semple McPherson, evangelist, and her mother, Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, involving officials of Angelus Temple, continued to-day, with Mrs. Kennedy announcing through a nurse at her sanitarium that she was not connected in any official capacity with Temple affairs.

Plans of a "Committee of Four" from the Temple to confer with Mrs. Kennedy and present her an ultimatum to cease discussing Temple affairs publicly, met with failure when a nurse refused the committee entrance.

The nurse informed the committee she had been instructed to say Mrs. Kennedy, "is not in any way connected with the Temple. She is not a member of the board; she is not an official, and is not even a member of the congregation."

Mrs. Kennedy also sent word she would see no one "but the head of the Temple," her daughter.

Out at Malibu Beach, Mrs. McPherson remained at her beach refuge, permitting only a brief visit by newspapermen. She has disclaimed any desire to see her mother.

perturbed and greeted Wally Hammond the next English batsman, by driving Grimmett again to the leg boundary. Duleep nearly put the ball into McCabe's hands at silly point from Grimmett on a single. Then Hammond got Grimmett away for a boundary past cover. Duleep passed out of the picture tamely, cocking up a turner from Hornibrook to A. F. Kippax at short leg. He hit four fours in his 46, and left when the English score was 135 for four.

Greatest Hit of Day.

Leyland started out merrily, pulled Hornibrook to the boundary. The Australian had his revenge, however, and scattered the Yorkshireman's wicket when he was 33. Hammond got the greatest hit of the day when he straight drove Grimmett for six into the stands, sending up the 200. Wyatt did not last long, being bowled off his pads when Hornibrook sent down a faster ball than usual Six wickets were down for 207 M. Tate tried a short run and Kippax, with only one stump to aim at, hit it and he was run out.

Hammond, who had been playing a brilliant game, was missed by Grimmett on a flashing head high shot past cover. Hammond, seeing the game was gone, threw caution to the winds and went after his century; he boundaried off Grimmett and Hornibrook.

FOUR CONTESTING SEAT IN BROMLEY

Entrance of U. E. Party Man Makes Conservative Win Uncertain.

LIBERALS BID HARD.

LONDON, England, August 22 (C. P. Cable). — All doubt that the United Empire Party would nominate a candidate to contest the Bromley by-election disappeared to-day when V. C. Redwood, former member of the Queensland, Australia, Legislature was among the four whose names were placed in formal nomination.

The by-election was caused by the death of Lieut-Col the Hon. Cuthbert James, second son of Lord Northbourne, who had represented Bromley since 1919 in the Conservative interest. Polling takes place on September 2.

The Conservatives to-day nominated E. T. Campbell to carry their standard. The Liberals chose W. G. Fordham, who ran at the general election, and Labor named A. E. Ashworth, who was also in the field in Bromley last year.

Given the usual three-party contest for this seat the Conservatives would be almost assured of victory beforehand, but the introduction of a United Empire Party man backed by the Rothermere newspapers, tends to cloud the issue. In 1923, the year of the Labor victory, the Conservatives held Bromley by a majority of 883. In 1924, when the turn of the Conservatives came, they piled up a crushing plurality having more votes than both the other parties in Bromley. The vote was: Conservative 20,272, Liberal 11,580, Labor 5,876.

More voters turned out in 1929 Col. James polled 25,449 votes, Mr. Fordham, the Liberal, 18,372, and Mr. Ashworth, Labor, 10,405.

Most commentators believe the Conservatives will again win despite the fourth candidate. Mr. Redwood, while supported by Lord Rothermere, is not being backed by the energetic and spectacular Lord Beaverbrook. Many expect him to foot the poll.

ENGLAND FIRST ON THE GREENS

Crimson Rose Carries Off Honors in the Singles Competition.

AT EMPIRE GAMES.

HAMILTON, Ont., Aug. 22 (By Elmer Dulmage, Canadian Press Writer).—The crimson rose of England was carried to victory in the singles championship of the British Empire Lawn Bowling Tourney at Gage Part to-day, when Robert Colquhoun trimphed over W. Fielding New Zealand, 21—19.

It was the third straight victory for the Englishman and the third for his country; the rink and doubles having cinched titles on Thursday.

The match to-day was productive of the best bowling of the week and Colquhoun met his strongest foe in fielding. Three times during the game the score was tied and when the New Zealander scored on the twentieth end to go one up, it looked bad for the rose.

On the final end Colquhoun laid his first two bowls against the kitty and his third only inches away; Fielding was short with his first and realizing his defeat in sight unless successful with his final bowl, deliberated for some time. He figured a draw shot the best, and it was well laid but the bowl stopped inches away from the "cat" and just behind the Englishman's third bowl.

The gallery broke into a roar as the final score was announced, for all through the play the crowd sat motionless watching the lead change from one to another.

strange and wasteful methods because, as they say, they have always done things that way.

Young bees are considered a great delicacy in Japan, and Mr. Robertson admitted that he had eaten them with some relish upon occasion He revoked, however, on another native dish, grasshoppers. While Japanese customs appear strange to us, stated the speaker, it is necessary to remember that some of our customs are as strange to them. One of his students had in a moment of frankness admitted that when he entered a foreigner's home he was nauseated by the smell of butter and meat that existed about the place.

"There is a great field for Canadian business in Japan," Mr. Robertson said in pointing out the manner in which Japan was busy building roads.

"The Japanese students asked me to carry a message of goodwill to Canada," he said. "They explained that they have no illegitimate ambitions and desire peace with other countries."

A delightful musical interlude was Miss Jessie Pattison, soloist, accompanied by Martin B. Chenhall, A.R.C.O.

Power Rate Reduction Is Given Smith's Falls

KINGSTON, Aug. 22.—(Special to The Examiner).—Smith's Falls has been given a twelve percent reduction in its domestic, commercial and power electric rates to become effective in its September billing. In addition a rebate of $14,000 is given in the form of credits on the 1930 accounts. This rebate amounts to one-sixth of the revenue of 1929. The reductions approximated five dollars per horsepower.

Smith's Falls consumers have long felt the high power cost as an obstacle to industrial expansion. The new rates will allow for wider use and industrial extension.

Empire's Best Athletes Take Part At Hamilton

ALL PRELIMINARY ARRANGEMENTS ARE COMPLETED FOR EXHIBITION

Peterborough Exhibition Board Has Best Fair in History Planned.

WELL ADVERTISED

The stage is set. All preliminary arrangements have been satisfactorily completed. Such in effect was the report from each of the committee chairmen, received by His Worship Mayor Denne, president of Peterborough Industrial Board, at the meeting held in the Council Rooms of the local Chamber of Commerce last evening.

Apparently no stone has been left unturned to make this year's Industrial Exhibition, to be held from September 8-13, one of the best yet. All manner of suggestions were advanced and discussed by the Board of Directors at the meeting, with one idea in view—that of making the event a complete success from all points of view.

R. M. Glover spoke of certain unique proposals for opening day adding there is going to be lots of action in front of the grand stand. He spoke of the fact that music of a high-class order is assured by the engagement of the 57th Regimental Band and Gliddon's Band, and mooted the possibility of having a third band. It is proposed to erect amplifying equipment at the George Street entrance to relay the band music from the grand stand.

Charles Cooke, advertising and publicity committee chairman, reported that twenty-five posters advertising the Exhibition are on display at various C.N.R. stations and a similar number at C.P.R stations throughout the district. Furthermore 100 large poster sheets are conspicuously posted in country districts. He mentioned the banner which spans George Street in the vicinity of Charlotte Street and the full page advertisement carried in The Examiner as further evidence of the Board's efforts to inform the public of the best exhibition in Ontario, outside of Toronto.

It was decided on the motion of Frank Kitney, seconded by Mr. Glover, that the Board accept the Dominion Government' offer of their exhibit, which has proved quite an attraction in previous years.

Provision was also made for a strong entry of heavy horses from Toronto, and Mr. Eaton will be invited to enter his fine string of heavy horses.

It was moved by William Knox, and seconded by W. Steinkraus, that the various school boards be requested to grant the school children a holiday on Wednesday, September 10, in order that they may have ample opportunity to attend the Exhibition.

The Kiwanis weekly dinner, it was stated, will be held on Friday, September 12, at noon in a tent on the Exhibition Grounds. The Kiwanians having arranged for a special speaker for the occasion.

The next meeting of the Board will be held on the opening night of the Exhibition at the Fair Grounds or should important business come up in the interval, an emergent meeting will be called by the president.

MEDICINE HAT, Alta., Aug. 21. — (C.P.) — "Rt. Hon. G. W. Forbes, Prime Minister of New Zealand, informed Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King some time ago that he would take precisely this action," stated Prime Minister R. B. Bennett when shown a despatch stating that New Zealand had decided to place Canadian motor vehicles and accessories on the general tariff list.

Beyond referring to Mr. Forbes' notification to Mr. King, the Prime Minister had no further comment to make.

Mr. Bennett, accompanied by his sister, Miss Mildred, is en route to Calgary. During a brief stop here, the Prime Minister was met by prominent members of the local Conservative Association.

RECORD NUMBER OF STORES ENTER TWO DOLLAR DAYS

Dollar Day Morning Dawned Bright and Clear in Peterborough.

STREETS CROWDED.

91 Stores in All Are Taking Part in Special Event.

Dollar Day morning dawned bright and clear, with ideal weather conditions, and as early as 8.30 the street was a busy scene, with many groups of shoppers waiting at unopened doors to be first to partake of the special bargains shown so attractively in the windows. As usual, the main attraction of last evening in Peterborough, was the store windows and a most interested crowd passed slowly up and down making up their minds which store they would visit first, and which articles they intended to buy on the morrow. Certainly, the presentations of the different stores, 91 in all, were well worth careful study, for never before have greater Dollar Day values been offered. Incidentally, 91 is a record number of Dollar Day stores, surpassing last January mark by three. It is surely Peterborough's greatest Dollar Day event; and being for two days with the bargain prices ruling, from opening time this, Friday, morning, to the closing hour to-morrow night, everyone is given an opportunity to profit by the savings that are available.

Peterborough's premier event, and only community effort made by the merchants, Dollar Day is no new thing to the residents of City and District, having been a semi-annual arrangement for sixteen years.

On each occasion the merchants have contributed a fund that is an added inducement to shoppers, outside of the splendid bargains. $150.00 is offered in cash bonuses as prizes in the big Community Estimating Contest. $50 is the big plum, and the nearest estimate of the number of tickets dropped in the box in front of The Examiner Office by 10 o'clock on Saturday night, wins the half-hundred represented by the crisp new bank note, shown with the other cash prizes in Grafton's window.

Increased interest is given to the two big shopping days by the several individual features presented by some of the business houses in the Dollar Day group. Chief among these is the Mysterious Miss Dollar, sent out on a shopping trip by The Examiner, and a prize of $10.00 offered to the one who captures her. The rules of capture are that she must be located in one of the $ Day stores, not on the street, and, the person finding her must have in their hand the story about her, clipped from The Examiner. The greeting must be: "You are the Mysterious Miss Dollar, and here's the story about you."

Other features are The Examiner Bean Estimating Contest, with $35.00 in cash prizes; Robert Fair's prizes of $15.00 if big Dollar Day prizes are won with tickets obtained at his store. Similar prizes are offered by McBride & Franks; the Up-town Silk Shoppe, and others.

Judging by the crowds of early morning, and the steady hum of business up to time of going to press, the August, 1930, Twin Dollar Days will top the record.

GAS ON STOMACH IS DANGEROUS

TELLS HOW TO STOP IT

Gas, Pain, Bloating and a feeling of fullness after eating are almost certain evidence of excessive hydrochloric acid in the stomach.

Too much acid irritates the delicate stomach lining, frequently causing chronic Gastritis and dangerous Ulcers. Food ferments and sours, forming a gas that distends the stomach and often seriously affects the Heart.

It is genuine folly to neglect such a condition or to treat with artificial digestive aids that cannot neutralize the stomach acid. A better way is to get from any reliable drug store some Bisurated Magnesia (powder or tablets) and take a little in water after each meal. Bisurated Magnesia will stop the worst gas attack quickly, and without embarrassment. Taken right after eating, it prevents formation of gas and acids so there is no sourness, bloating or pain. Pleasant and perfectly harmless to use—Bisurated Magnesia does give wonderful relief in nine out of ten cases. Ask your Doctor or Druggist. Try it today.

PROVINCE WOULD SELL OWN CROP

Saskatchewan Wheat Pool Suggests That it Handle Marketing.

PROPOSAL TO GOV'T.

REGINA, Sask., Aug. 22.—(CP)—A request that the Saskatchewan Government make provision for the entire 1930 Saskatchewan wheat crop to be marketed through the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool was made to the Government early this week by the directors of the pool, it was announced last night.

The proposal is a result of the discussion of the Board of Directors who are sitting all this week in Regina. The decision of the board was crystallized in the form of a resolution which has been presented to the Government.

Following the receipt of the request Premier J. T. M. Anderson has written all members of the Legislature asking them to indicate by wire whether they are in favor of a Provincial Wheat Board being set up in Saskatchewan.

The resolution of the board asking for this action refers to existing economic conditions and the state of the export market as potent reasons for making provision for handling the entire crop through a single channel.

SPARROW LAKE ASSOCIATION APPRECIATES T. W. A. ACTION

Resolution of Appreciation Forwarded to Local Body for Interest in Severn Division.

DEFINITE ACTION TAKEN

A resolution of appreciation and gratitude to the Trent Waterway-Iroquois Trail Association for their interest in the Sparrow Lake and Severn end of the waterway and the pressure which has been brought to bear from time to time towards having the necessary improvements made to the waterway in that district, was passed at a meeting of the Sparrow Lake Association, held recently.

Further word was received this morning by the T.W.A. from the Orillia Board of Trade, intimating that they had forwarded a resolution to the Dominion Government petitioning them to proceed with the completion of the Severn Division in order to take up some of the unemployment. Their resolution, a copy of which was received in Peterborough, follows:—

"The Council of Orillia Board of Trade at special meeting, passed the following resolution:

"That this Orillia Board of Trade would respectfully suggest to the Dominion Government, that in dealing with the unemployment situation, they should make an immediate start at the completion of the locks on the Severn River section of the Trent Canal. Since the war, no progress has been spent and which is altogether work, upon the construction of which upwards of twenty million dollars has been spet, and which is altogether valueless from a commercial standpoint, and of comparatively little use from a tourist standpoint as long as the northern outlet remains closed to all large craft. There remains only the two locks at the Swift Rapids and the Big Chute to complete the waterway from the Georgian Bay to Lake Ontario.

"This would seem a favorable juncture to proceed with the work which various governments of both parties have pledged themselves to carry out, as the construction of these locks would involve chiefly labor, and would give employment to a large number of men, thus materially relieving unemployment in this district.

"The news that the Government has decided to resume operations on the Canal, for which we understand plans are already in existence, would have a most inspiring effect over a wide territory.

Fusion of existing shipping companies in Chile is proposed by the Chilean Government.

NO BODIES FOUND IN YACHT WRECK

Reports That Women Were Aboard Islander Are Denied.

SIX MEN MISSING.

FOWEY, Eng., Aug. 22.—(AP)— A mass of shattered wood and metal which was the yacht Islander was still tossed about in a violent sea in Lantivet Bay today. Although the wreckage of the boat was continually being cast ashore none of the five bodies of those who lost their lives aboard her have been recovered.

It was felt certain that at least six men died when the ship crashed on the rocks Wednesday night. These were Commodore Henry Douglas King M. P., and former Aide-de-Camp to King George, Commander Earle of Berwick on Weed, Surgeon Captain A. R. Brailey, Dunmow, Essex, Captain Glazebrook of Bishop Stortford, Harry Lucas, Captain of the yacht and his 17-year-old boy, Walter.

There were constantly recurring reports that there were some women aboard the boat also. Mrs. King informed of the catastrophe, said that as far as she knew this was not the case. It was suggested that the statement that two women were seen struggling in the sea was due to onlookers mistaking the oilskin coats worn by the men for skirts.

OPEN CLASSES FOR CITIZENS

Horticultural Society Has Three Open Classes in Which Anyone May Enter.

ENTRIES CLOSE MONDAY.

Three competitions in which entries are eligible from all householders who take a pride in the appearance of their homes and surroundings —and who is not in this category in Peterborough?—are being staged this summer by the Peterborough Horticultural Society.

Entries, which close on Monday, August 25th, are to be sent to the secretary, John Edgar, 577 Sherbrooke street.

The directors look for a large number of entries this year. The competition, which has been held formerly, has been successful, but compared to the number of fine homes and gardens in this city, people have been a trifle slow in competing. There is no entry fee, it is pointed out, and it is hoped that this year will see an increased interest in this novel means of stimulating attention to the home surroundings.

Class 1.—Window boxes or porch boxes (amateurs): 1st, $3; 2nd, $2; 3rd, membership for 1931.

Class 2.—Open class where professional help is employed, for best home and surroundings: 1st, $3; 2nd, $2; 3rd, membership for 1931.

Class 3.—Amateurs only, for best home and surroundings: 1st, cup, presented by Mrs. Bell (not to be won outright), and membership for 1931; 2nd, $2! 3rd, membership for 1931.

NEW PRIDE IN THINGS BRITISH AFTER VISIT TO EMPIRE GAMES

Games Are Marvellous Show of the British Empire's Strength.

SPLENDID YOUNG MANHOOD.

(By Staff Reporter.)

Hamilton, Ont., August 22. —A new pride in things British cannot help but be gained by attendance at the British Empire games. Here the very cream of the splendid young manhood of Britain's far-flung dominions are striving for athletic supremacy, while thousands of enthusiastic Canadians unreservedly cheer their every effort.

Show of Empire Strength.

The games are a marvellous show of the Empire's strength and gives the lie to those who state that her power is crumbling. Eleven of the component parts of the Empire have sent teams. From Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, British Guinea, and Newfoundland, have they come. England has sent the largest contingent, numbering over a hundred.

That the games are a success is the unreserved opinion of more than a hundred newspapermen gathered, like the athletes, from the four corners of the globe. These men are expert judges of what makes for success and failure, and their opinion is to be valued above all others. Over telegraph and wireless they have flashed their daily chronicles of the records broken.

Already tentative plans for the next British Empire games are being made and it only remains to select the place. Australia and South Africa want them and before the teams separate from Hamilton at the end of the week the choice between these two will be made. It is likely that the games will be held every four years —at the midway mark between the Olympic games.

Feeling of Good Will.

Newspapermen who attended the Olympics at Amsterdam in 1928 and in Paris in 1924, cannot help but compare the feeling existing among the competitors here and at those games. "At those games there was

CAMPAIGN ON CANADIAN PRODUCTS TO BE HELD

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 22 (C.P.)—Announcement was made by Premier Ferguson last night that an extensive educational campaign to encourage the buying and eating of Canadian products in Ontario will be launched by his Government in the very near future. Radio, lecture staffs, and the newspapers are all to figure in the program.

"We are determined," said the Prime Minister, "to show to the people the real qualities of our products —to demonstrate the value of our own markets—to prove to them the advantages of buying at home. In short, we want to establish a greater measure of co-operation between consumer and producer."

ITALIAN BANKER TAKEN BY DEATH

"Boss" Scatend Rose From Immigrant Boy to Head of Great Institution.

STARTED ON FARM.

SAUSALITO, Calif., Aug. 22. (C.P.) "Boss" Scatena, who rose from an Italian immigrant, to become the head of the Bank of Italy, fifth largest in the United States, died yesterday, he was 80 years old.

A. P. Giannini, a stepson and former President of the bank, who was speeding by air to the bedside lost his race with death by 8 hours. He had left Paris a week ago.

Lorenzo Scatena came from Italy when 18 years old in 1868. He worked on a farm near here until he established a trucking business in San Francisco. This grew into a commission firm that became one of the largest in the west.

In 1905 Giannini started the Bank of Italy and seven months later his stepfather was made President. The bank grew and in 1909 it started the first of its many branches. He died as chairman of the Board of Directors.

DESCENDANTS HAD FAMILY RE-UNION

Gathering of Over Seventy Meets at Home of Allan B. Mann.

Over seventy people, including descendants of James Mann, pioneer settler of Bridgenorth, and their consorts and children, met at the home of Allan B. Mann on Monday evening for the Mann family reunion. Supper was served on the lawn, and a pleasant evening was spent in reminiscence and greeting. Mr. Mann's new home, replacing one destroyed by fire a few years ago, and lighted with electricity, occupies the site of the original homestead of James Mann. The large new barn, also built since the fire and equipped with electric light, was inspected by the company, along with an innovation in local agriculture, the first threshing machine to be driven by electricity in Smith Township—doubtless the forerunner of many others in the near future.

James Mann, a United Empire Loyalist, who left his all in New England and journeyed to Ontario through peril, toil, and suffering rather than surrender his British citizenship, settled on the homestead 115 years ago. Fifteen years ago, there was a record gathering of his descendants in celebration of the hundredth anniversary of the event. Those present at this year's gathering were: Mr. W. Mann, Mrs. T. R. Mann, Mr. and Mrs. T. Milburn Mr and Mrs. Elmer Milburn and family, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Lewis and son Jack, Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Mann, Mr. and Mrs. A. McGregor, Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Mann, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Moore, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Mann Mr. and Mrs. E. Cockburn and baby, Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Cockburn and family, Mrs. Garbutt, Mr. and Mrs. Bert Manning, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Mann, Mr. and Mrs. Bob Adams, Mrs. T. H. D. Kelly, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Edminson and family, Mr. Edgar, Mrs. Hammond, Mr. and Mrs. Ross Harrison, Mr. and Mrs. Smith Kelly of Whitby, Mrs Webster of Lindsay, Mrs. Jacques, Misses Mary Garbutt, Ethel Garbutt, Mildred Harrison, Eunice Hammond Margaret Mann, Lillian McGregor, Phyllis Moore, Blanche Mann of Adirondack Mountains, and Mildred Mann of Toronto, Jean Mann, Dorothy Mann; Messrs. Just Between Us Women

ALL of us wish to be successful in life, but we find that in order to become successful we must convey the impression of success.

• • • • • • •

We must look as though life was good to us. It may be through wearing handsome clothes, but it is unfortunate that so many persons believe this to be the only way of conveying the idea of prosperity!

• • • • • • •

Unless the bearing is an equal in style or quality to the clothes, the latter may merely suggest extravagance. Or they may seem ill-suited to the wearers true status, which may be one of utter despondency.

• • • • • • •

It takes more than clothes to carry conviction of good fortune!

• • • • • • •

This is not intended to disparage the idea of being well groomed, and of dressing the very best, in quality of goods and in style, that can be comfortably afforded. This is of actual importance.

• • • • • • •

It makes a person good to look at, when becomingness and style are combined. This is one of the ways of making a good impression. It predisposes the mind of the on-looker to believe in the success of the wearer of such garments. This is one favorable point.

• • • • • • •

It is possible, however, to so wear garments that a person wishes were better, that they become insignificant, and the spirit of the wearer dominates and over-shadows them.

• • • • • • •

When one is inclined to feel the clothes that she must wear do not suggest the successful attitude she must carry herself as one above them.

• • • • • • •

You have heard of the men who during the time they were forging their way to success were obliged to wear shoes with the soles worn through?

• • • • • • •

They were so absolutely sure that he had something worthwhile to offer the people whom he saw, that they talked in terms of high finance. They impressed the ideas of success, and of their own powers until success in a monetary way was theirs.

• • • • • • •

If they had approached men in a low-spirited way they would never have been crowned with success. They carried the atmosphere of success with them.

• • • • • • •

A fine bodily carriage is essential to conveying a successful impression. Mothers themselves should be well poised, and should teach their children to stand erect and in their early days to suggest that they are successful.

• • • • • • •

Encourage them to talk of their good fortune and to minimize their failures, to stress the successful efforts, and to trip lightly over troubles. No one every really succeeded by 'talking poor.'

• • • • • • •

Sometimes a person does work because of the pity he draws towards himself, but since the work is not given because of any idea of its fine quality, it does not encourage further aid. It is when a person can inspire confidence because he knows he can do a thing well, and carries conviction in his poise and attitude that he wins permanently. Such a person knows his powers and carries himself so that all who see may know also.

LITTLE BRIGHT EYES AT THE WINDOW

(Contributed by Beatrice)

Little bright eyes at the window,
Every evening wait for me,
And my dainty, dimpled darling
Greets me with a merry glee;
Long before I reach the crossing,
He wil spy me 'mong the rest,
And his lisping tongue will chatter,
Till I take him to my breast.

Little bright eyes at the window,
Every evening wait for me,
Yes, my dainty dimpled darling,
Greets me with a merry glee.

Little bright eyes at the window,

But are always watching for me,
Waiting till I shut the gate;
And when I have cross'd the threshold,
They will beam with rays of joy,
And the rogue will try to tell me
That he is my darling boy.

Little bright eyes at the window,
Waiting for a father's smile,
Little do you know the feeling,
Or the hearts you may beguile;
In the future dim before you,
Care and trouble may be thine,
And the tears of woe may glisten
Where contentment used to shine.

COLLIER IS ABANDONED AS COMPLETE WRECK

MONTREAL, Que., Aug. 22.—(C.P.)—Word has been received here that the S. S. Hochelaga is a total loss and has been abandoned by her owners, the Dominion Steel and Coal Corpoartion of Sydney, N.S., to her fate. The collier, of 2,601 tons net, was proceeding from North Sydney to Montreal, with a load of coal and ran aground on Coffin Island, one of the Magdalen Islands group.

Efforts to take out the cargo and free the vessel were unsuccessful. She is now in the hands of the underwriters who will decide what attempts at salvage are possible.

Elaine And Her Ideas From Paris

That Body of Yours

By James W. Barton, M.D.

DANGER OF SAGGING ABDOMEN

In these days when there is such a fad for reducing weight, and reducing it quickly, it is not to be wondered at that physicians everywhere are finding patients with a 'dropped' stomach, 'dropped' intestine, and 'dropped' kidney.

The symptoms are a draggy, tired out feeling, lack of appetite, sometimes pain in abdomen and small of back, and constipation.

What these individuals forget is that the surplus weight, of which they are trying to rid themselves, did not come in a few days, a few weeks, or even a few months, and yet they will try to rid themselves of the entire excess within a period of eighteen days to two or three months.

Now what happens is that with the disappearance of the fat lying in and around the abdominal organs, and also in front of abdomen itself, the abdominal wall weakened by this excess upon it, remains in a 'sagged' condition, and the internal organs simply drop downward and forward.

In former days it was not unusual to have a certain amount of surgical work done to 'tack' up these organs into their right places.

In these days, however, in the majority of cases, a wide abdominal belt is used which lifts abdomen upward and backward, thus getting the organs into their proper position. This enables the organs to do their work better, and relieves some of the indigestion, constipation, abdominal and small of back pains, with which the patients were afflicted.

However, if the patient is not old or sick, he or she is instructed to do abdominal exercises to tighten up the abdominal muscles, so that they will have an abdominal belt made up of their own muscles.

The simplest and most effective exercise is lying on the back and raising the legs, with knees straight, to a right angle with the body, keeping hips on floor. If this is too difficult at first, one leg at a time is raised.

This should be done twice a day, and the number of times should be about six, gradually increasing it up to about twelve times, with both legs raised together.

Also sitting tall and standing tall at all times will help to strengthen the abdominal muscles.

This drawing back or drawing in of the adbomen gives the proper poise to the whole body, as the chest goes out, and the shoulder back.

Stand sideways to your mirror and see what a difference to your carriage you can make by drawing abdomen in.

Remember the exercise above if persisted in will so develop the abdomenal muscles that they will be able to hold the abdomen in always.

Mann on Monday evening for the Mann family reunion. Supper was served on the lawn, and a pleasant evening was spent in reminiscence and greeting. Mr. Mann's new home, replacing one destroyed by fire a few years ago, and lighted with electricity, occupies the site of the original homestead of James Mann. The large new barn, also built since the fire and equipped with electric light, was inspected by the company, along with an innovation in local agriculture, the first threshing machine to be driven by electricity in Smith Township—doubtless the forerunner of many others in the near future.

James Mann, a United Empire Loyalist, who left his all in New England and journeyed to Ontario through peril, toil, and suffering rather than surrender his British citizenship, settled on the homestead 115 years ago. Fifteen years ago, there was a record gathering of his descendants in celebration of the hundredth anniversary of the event. Those present at this year's gathering were: Mr. W. Mann, Mrs. T. R. Mann, Mr. and Mrs. T. Millburn, Mr and Mrs. Elmer Millburn and family, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Lewis and son Jack, Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Mann, Mr. and Mrs. A. McGregor, Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Scots Eliminate Canadian General In Peck Cup Play

SCOTS TROUNCE ELECTRIC TEAM BY TWO GOALS

An Excellent Exhibition of the Scientifc Code by Two Well-balanced Elevens.

GOAL TENDERS GOOD.

Cook's Two Goals Were of the Spectacular Kind—Scots Outplayed Opponents.

For the second time this season, the Caledonians have trounced the Canadian General in a splendid exhibition of the scientific code, by the score of two goals to nil, before a good attendance of spectators, last evening in semi-final Peck Cup, on King Edward Park.

The winners now meet the successful contestants of the C. P. C. versus Brinton match in the final of the Peck Cup.

Daynes, the C.G.E. goal-keeper gave a wonderful display of goal tending against the very keen sharp-shooters of the Scots. Cook being the most brilliant with his two goals and his anticipational play in the tackles on mid-field.

First Half

Fifteen minutes late, Chambers kicked off for the C. G. E. to go into the Scots territory to find the opposition all upset through many of them not being acquainted with their new positions. The C. G. E. had them at their mercy, but lacked pep around the goal to push the issue to the limit. Darling, at outside left, was the first to come up to the usual standard of play and broke away time and again to give his team-mates splendid openings. Pottie nipping them at the critical point to save his team's citadel. At last, Chambers got possession of the ball from one of his centres. Dribbling his way toward goal he met a timely leg to prevent him having a shot at goal. Fowler running out to kick up-field. Craig trapped the ball from the air as Robb was a minute too late to offset his tactics. Cook travelled along with him until the defense closed in on them in front of the goal. Daynes, handling everything ranged at him for a short period. Exchanges were on an even basis with the halves distributing the play with accuracy to the attacking forces advantage. A foul taken by Mitchell from twenty yard range tested Fowler in goal. The Scots again had to fall back on the defensive again to help their halves who were harassed in no small measure by the C. G. E. forwards. Their marksmanship being wide of the mark at close range. Whenever, they did get a chance at goal, Fowler was the barrier to them. A foul came to the aid of the Scots to relieve the pressure and Cook missed the cross-bar with a rising shot. Both elevens indulged in the finer points of the game that brought out the excellent qualities of the players. On a tackle outside of the penalty area, Cunningham, C. G. E. back, conceded a foul. Ward was trusted with the kick. He sent a low grounder toward goal where it hit a player in transit. This opening suited Cook, who tipped the ball over from one foot to the other until he got it at the elevation he wanted to put a cork-screw touch on it, to find the inside of the net, three minutes before the interval. Caledonians 1. Canadian General 0.

Half Time

The second moiety opened up at the same pace as it ended at the interval. All within a minute, Craig had the Canadian General goal-keeper doing his stuff with outstretched arms to prevent a counter that was placed nicely below the cross-bar. His work in goal was marvelous while the barrage of shots rained upon him from all angles. Eventually he had to admit defeat on a scrimmage in front of goal. Ward sending back a clearance from the goal-keeper in amongst a sea of legs. Cook tipped the sphere quickly with his left foot and finished his clever play with a side lobb into the side of the net, for the second tally, away out of the reach of the custodian. With their backs to the wall, the Canadian General took up the offensive to hammer the Scots inside the goal area area but the only reward they obtained was a few flag-kicks that brought nothing tangible. The brother McMasters introduced every conceivable move to find an opening but the Scots halves forced them to shoot at a safe distance that permitted Fowler a clear view to accept shot after shot. From a flag-kick, Ward punted up field. Craig swinging the ball out to his wing man who went right through. He slipped it back to Cook and with a peculiar shot the fans were astonished to witness the ball hit the outside of the post after it had rolled along the goal line. For the next ten minutes, the C. G. E. were more agressive in an endeavor to pull the game out of the blank column, but a stalwart defense, aided by the forwards that had dropped back to assist the full backs, finished with the Scots players presence in front of goal thereby being the obstacle to the onslaught. Fowler the custodian gave a good display in goal for the Scots. But he had not the same amount of work to do as his pal in the other goal. Daynes receiving repeated applause for spectacular saves whenever a goal loomed in the horizon. With fifteen minutes to go, the tussle settled down to a real old time battle between two well matched teams. In the final dash, the players gave all they had. The Scots holding on keenly to their hard earned goals. No matter what the C. G. E. tried they met a opposition too good for them on the nights play and the score finished with the Scots holding to the two-goal advantage until the end. Caledonians 2. Canadian General 0.

Aquatic Stars in Big Marathon

FEATURE IN 10-MILE WOMEN'S SWIM CLASSIC

In the Canadian National Exhibition swim to-day, surprises were the order of the day. At race-time, Olive Gatterdam, now a Canadian citizen, (1) and Ethel Hertle, former winner of Wrigley Marathon (6), were favorites to win. (2) Ethel McGarry, U. S. Olympic star and long distance title-holder, who withheld her entry until the last moment. (3) Ruth Towers Carson, who made a strong finish in last year's race. (4) Joan Foord, an English entry, who put up a great battle. () Evelyn Armstrong, another favorite, who finished in prize money last year. The men's swim, which has attracted some 225 entries, takes place on Tuesday over a 15 mile course.

FIFTY MERMAIDS SWATHED IN OIL SWIM FOR $15,000 PRIZE

European Entrants Stage Last-Minute Rush to Plunge for World Honors.

RUBBER SUITS BANNED

By JAMES A. COWAN
(Special to The Examiner, Copyright 1930)

TORONTO, Aug. 22—Friday night, there will be a new women's world titleholder in marathon swim circles.

At noon, fifty picked mermaids, in training for months back, take off in a 10-mile grind for the championship and the first six split $10,000, with $5,000 and the title going to the winner.

The race is being staged as the opening sport feature of All Canada Year at the Canadian National Exhibition. The Exhibition gives the purse and handles the event. On the Wednesday following, comes the greatest of freshwater classics when 250 male natators are eligible to start in a 15-mile open crawl for the world's distance title and an additional $15,000 in prizes.

Zero hour for the mermaids will be just after the noon whistle. They should go the distance in five to six hours, bringing the aquatic aces to the finishing floats at the end of the afternoon. The lake temperature must be 58 degrees at 8 a.m. on Friday to permit the race to start and weather forecasts indicate that it will be. The course is quadrilateral, in full view of the mile and a half of waterfront park where the mobs will gather to see the battle.

Au Naturel?

Each starter will be accompanied by a boat and an official who will see she sticks to the rules and regulations. Rubber and cork suits are banned. So are webbed gloves and other trick ideas. Grease and oils of all sorts are allowable. Controversies of previous seasons on the subject of whether mermaids might swim au naturel and minus costumes have not raged in 1930. Goggles may be worn by contestants; opera glasses field glasses and telescopes by short-sighted spectators.

Ruth Tower-Corsan, formerly of Denver but now a Canadian and Ethel Hertle-Gary, Bronx flash and world titleholder in 1928, should stage a great battle. Ranking with these two aces, there are prospects of a surprise entry just before the race.

Other Canadian and American entries include the Hudson River record holder, Leahy Riley; the New England speed star who has just broken the Around-Manhattan time for women, Ann Benoit; the graceful and fast-moving Helen Gatterdam of Toronto, the former U. S. Olympic star and middle states champion, Margaret Ravoir of Philadelphia and her team-mate, Violet Page, a powerful young New York state starter, 19-year old Mary Carter of Cohoes; Jewel Cheatwood, fiancee of George Young; Mrs. Evelyn Armstrong, money-winner n the 1929 crawl and Detroit's entry; the Looney sisters of Ohio, May and Mona and the claimant to the Canadian distance championship for women, Daisy King Shaw of Shawinigan Falls, Quebec, as well as Lily May Dibble and Doris Beresford, two young Toronto marathoners.

England has a husky possibility in a young artist. Joan Foord who started without training last season and did 8½ miles with the leaders. Then theer is Violette Scott of London. Then there is Violette Scott of London conqueror, is in Canada and has been training for months but is reported as likely to abandon her attempt. She says she lacks financing.

Beautiful Brunette, Too.

There has been a rush of Scandinavians and Europeans in the closing stages of preparations. Germany has a beautiful brunette endurance star in Emmi Busse who can stand 24 hours of continuous going as well as Meta Doster of Heilbronn. Finnish entrants include Lyyne Nykanen and Helen Lyyli Lundson and the Danes, Agnes Nielson and Anna Due Jensen.

All are expectant. All are ambitious. Half of them are vegetarians. The youngest starter is 16 years old and the lightest, 123 pounds. The average age is 20 even and the average mermaid weight, 137 pounds. Every entrant lists some other occupation besides swimming. There are teachers, artists, dancers, housewives, lady doctors and a feminine manufacturer's agent.

WINGS RETAIN LEAGUE LEAD

Rochester and Baltimore Waging Bitter Battle For International Honors.

ROYALS LOSE OUT 4-3.

TORONTO, Aug. 22. (C.P.)—Those bitter International League rivals, Rochester and Baltimore, both needed eight inning rallies yesterday to avoid costly defeats.

Rochester, leading the Orioles by the narrow margin of one game, beat out Newark 9-8, while Baltimore was nosing out Montreal 4-3.

Rochester had to score seven runs in the eighth inning to whip the Bears while Baltimore scored four runs in the same inning to beat Montreal.

Myles Thomas had the Redwings badly beaten at the end of seven and one-half innings at Rochester. He had held the league leaders to a pair of runs while his teammates were collecting eight off Grant and Carleton. Thus the Redwings trailed by six runs going into the last half of the eighth but before the frame closed, Thomas had been driven from the box and the Redwings had counted seven runs. Rip Collins hit a homer with the bases filled in this frame and Wilson got two hits in the same inning.

Give Orioles Victory

Up at Montreal, Gowell Classet blanked the Orioles for seven innings but was battered for four runs in the eighth, enough to give the Orioles a much-needed victory. Luther Roy hurled good ball for the Orioles, granting only seven hits but he gave five bases on balls that put in several jams.

Keys Beat Bisons

Reading Gave Buffalo a sound trouncing in a night game at Buffalo 13-3. The Keys pounded Wilson for four runs in the first two innings and drove him out of the box in the midst of a two run spurt in the third. Not content with a 6-0 lead the Pennsylvanians pecked away at Mills and Welland for seven more runs. All told the Keys collected 18 hits, Scots getting four doubles. Meanwhile Warneke held the Bisons to eight hits and never was in serious trouble.

TOM THUMB GOLF FOR MILL TOWN

Campbellford Keeps Up With Times By Construction of Miniature Links—Dr. H. T. Scott's Venture.

(By Examiner Staff Correspondent.)

CAMPBELLFORD, August 22. — Campbellford always keeps up with the times. This fact is evident with the building in town of a Tom Thumb golf course.

Dr. H. T. Scott, the local chiropractic, evolved the idea, and put it into practice by utilizing his lot for this purpose. This lot is 145 feet by 60 feet, and has been fenced in. An eighteen hole course is being constructed with an average drive of thirty two feet on all teas. The thirteenth tee has a drive of fifty feet.

Many hazards are being introduced. One double circle will give the players something to think about, and there will be one incline drive that will prove a very difficult shot, the player being allowed five shots to hole the ball. There will also be three water hazards, one log hazard, and one bridge. There will also be two difficult corners to navigate, one being boarded and one greened. The course has in all six inclines.

The work is being done by J. Blue, local contractor, who expects to have the job completed in a few days. Electric lightning will then be arranged, with proper seating accommodation. Dr. Scott drew up the plans for the course himself, and will have when complete, one of the nicest miniature links in this part of the country.

GIANTS DEFEAT CUBS IN FIRST OF THE SERIES

Chicago Trounces 1930 Champions 13-9 For Chance to Cop League Honors.

GAMES POSTPONED.

Cardinals Slap Phillies 16-6 in Only Other National League Battle.

NEW YORK, August 22. (C.P.) — The New York Giants who have been assuming a threatening attitude toward all National League rivals for some time have served official notice that they intend to win the pennant.

That notice was given in a most convincing manner for the Giants opened the series with the Chicago Cubs, which brings them a chance to take first place by trouncing the 1929 champions and 1930 leaders by a 13-6 score to put themselves only two games behind first place.

The Giants not only have played better baseball in general than the Cubs have for the past month, but they were considerably better in every respect as they met their rivals yesterday. They started hitting in the first inning and at the same time the Cubs began to make errors and the result was that New York got off to the almost unbeatable lead of six runs.

The game started with two errors and a walk, then an infield out, and a single gave the Giants two runs. Another walk paved the way for the ruin of the Cub hopes, for Wally Roettger clouted a home run with two on to make it six runs for the Giants. Blake settled down after this bad start and held his own against Walker until the eighth, when six more of New York's 15 hits combined with some poor fielding on the part of the Cubs, gave the Giants five more runs.

The victory brought New York's record up to 22 victories in the 30 games of the past month while in the same time the Cubs have won 19 games and lost 11. Still trailing by two games, the Giants must win all of the remaining three contests of the series or leave Chicago at the head of the league. Two victories would give them the lead by a single point, and the third would be needed to hold the place, but that is not beyond the realm of possibility, for the Giants have beaten the Cubs ten times in their 16 games so far this year.

Robins Gaining.

While this clash was going on the third place Robins were gaining on Chicago and losing to New York, as rain kept them idle in Cincinnati.

The Boston-Pittsburg game was also postponed, while the St. Louis Cardinals proceeded to show up the Cubs by slapping a 16 to 6 defeat on the Phillies, who gave Chicago a tough battle recently.

The Cards pounded out 19 hits in big bunches and made the Phillies look very bad by making five double plays to halt their attempts to score.

MACKS MOVE NEARER TITLE

A's Break Loose on Hit Rampage in Last Three Frames to Defeat Tigers 8-7.

SENATORS KEEP PACE.

NEW YORK, August 22 (C.P.).— The Philadelphia Athletics moved a step nearer the certainty of victory in the American League pennant race by coming from far behind to defeat the Detroit Tigers 8 to 7. Held to one hit in six innings by George Uhle, the A's broke loose in the last three frames to score all their runs. They put over four tallies in the ninth, the last two coming on Al Simmons' 30th home run of the year.

Washington kept pace with the leaders by taking a quick 5-2 decision over the St. Louis Browns as "Sad Sam" Jones allowed only six hits in a duel with Collins. But the New York Yankees lost one more of their faint hopes as the Cleveland Indians pulled a 6-5 triumph out of a twelve-inning struggle. A Yankee error with two out in the ninth paved the way for the defeat and a home run by Dick Porter settled the overtime dispute.

The humble Boston Red Sox staged a three-run uprising in the eighth inning of a mound duel between Al Thomas and Hod Lisenbee to defeat Chicago 4-2, and keep the White Sox from breaking their sixth place tie with St. Louis. Five Boston errors kept Lisenbee trailing for the first even frames although he gave Chicago only four hits.

Brockville Team Victors Over Kingston Nine 10-8

BROCKVILLE, August 22. — In the first game of the district play-down in the Ontario Amateur Softball Association Intermediate series, Brockville Agnew-Surpass team defeated the Kingston Red Indians 10-3 here last evening. The return game will be played in the Richardson Stadium at Kingston on Monday night, and judging by the play here last evening, there is little to choose between either team, and an interesting series should result.

EUROPEAN STAR MAY BE WINNER OF STRUGGLE

Emmi Busse of Germany Looked Upon With Favor to Win World's Swimming Honors.

GUEST AS STARTER.

Crowds of Spectators Begin to Course Layout Early This Morning.

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 22. (By the Canadian Press).—Thirty-seven women plunged into the chilly waters of Lake Ontario shortly after noon today in an attempt to win the Canadian National Exhibition 10-mile marathon and the championship of the world.

Coming from as far west as the Pacific coast and as far east as Finland, the swimmers faced the starting-line to-day after long weeks and months of strenuous training. Only five of them will finish in the money.

This year's entry list is the smallest and yet the most impressive on record. More experienced professional swimmers than ever before have appeared to try for the women's crown of long-distance swimming.

The last-minute talk of the race is Ethel McGarry, amateur champion of the United States, who becomes a professional when she hits the water to-day. As Olympic and short-distance champion she has a remarkable record, but her ability over the 10-mile course is unknown. She is one of five or six who puzzle all the prophets. Her powers are recognized by all, but some doubt her resistance to the icy torture of five hours in the lake. She has less fat to protect her than most swimmers.

Leading the favorites are Ruth Tower Corsan, twice already a prize-winner, Ethel Hertle Gary, winner in 1928, who has never failed to place in the money, and Leah Riley of Keansville, N.J. Miss Riley has added two inches to her height and 10 pounds to her weight since last year, and this is considered a real advantage. Mrs. Corsan and Mrs. Gary are veteran swimmers and seem to have the edge in strength. Leah Riley may threaten them with her flashy speed.

Evelyn Armstrong, 22 year old mother of Detroit has an injured shoulder bound with adhesive tape. She came close to winning last year and it is admitted her courage may take her far to-day. Anna Bennit, who figured among the prize-winners of 1928, is also conceded a chance. Olive Gatterdam, Seattle school girl, who surprised the world by fighting her way to second place two years ago, but was forced to leave the water in her last attempt, is numbered among the uncertainties.

Not only are these Canadian and American stars recognized on the merits of their past performance, but it is reported that several of the newcomers from Europe must be considered. They cannot be judged on their records across the Atlantic, and here they are almost unknown. Every year a dark horse emerges to win fame. This year it may be Emmi Busse of Germany, who has stayed in the water 24 hours and was trained to swim in fresh water.

Guest as Starter.

Jack Guest of Toronto, holder of the Diamond Sculls, handles the gun as official starter. Thousands of people were crowding into the Exhibition grounds as soon as the gates opened this morning, and interest soon centred on the water-front where the race begins. Broadcasting from amplifiers scattered over the grounds will keep the crowd in touch with the progress of the swimmers. The lake is dotted with boats, large and small, which will follow the race, carrying judges, trainers, pressmen, and moving picture and talkiemen. Others are filled with spectators, but a detail of police will keep them out of the swimmers' course.

Five laps over a two-mile course make the full distance of 10 miles. Last year Martha Norelius, now Mrs. Joe Wright, churned her way to victory in five hours and 24 minutes. With the weather man predicting fair weather for the day and the water rising in temperature, it is expected that the record may be broken.

More than 100,000 people attended the Royal Agricultural Show at Manchester, England, this year.

ON THE UP-AND-UP

Alfie Phillips of Canada stands supreme among the divers of the British Empire, following his double victory in the games at Hamilton. Alfie, who represented the Dominion at the last Olympics, will more than likely be a star attraction at the 1932 Olympiad. But where Alfie was going up at Hamilton. Jimmy Ball, the crack Winnipeg short distance flier, was taking a fall. Ball tripped a few feet from the tape in one of his opening heats, falling across the line. Miss Celia Wolstenholme gave the Canadian officials some corresponding to do with the moguls of international sport, following her time of two minutes 54 3-5 seconds in the 200-yard breast stroke event for women swimmers. This is 12-5 seconds better than the present world record.

AMERICAN YACHT TESTS CALLED OFF ON ACCOUNT OF HEAVY SEAS

Yankee and Enterprise Hold Two Straight Races to Their Credit.

SELECT BOAT TO-DAY.

NEWPORT, R.I., Aug. 22 (C.P.) — The third day's official racing trials of the four America's Cup candidates off this port which had been scheduled for a start at 11.40 o'clock this morning were put off for several hours because of rough water kicked up by a stiff northeaster. Commodore Astor of the New York Yacht Club made the decision.

Honors Split Even

Yankee and Enterprise went out to the starting line to-day with two straight races to their credit in the official elimination races for the selection of the defender of the America's Cup, blue ribbon of all yachting trophies.

Yankee whipped Whirlwind yesterday in a fresh wind that reached a maximum of 25 miles an hour and Enterprise romped home ahead of Weetamoe.

Shamrock V., Sir Thomas Lipton's fifth challenger, arrived in port shortly after Yankee and Enterprise had broken all previous records for a yacht race over a thirty mile triangular course. Yankee, sailed by Charles Francis Adams, Secretary of the Navy and the only non-New York candidate, as a result of yesterday's race, now holds the yachting record for a thirty-mile triangular course. She came home yesterday in better time than did Columbia, the successful defender in 1901, and she did it after losing her jib, which parted under the freshening breeze.

The standing to date places the house of Vanderbilt, as represented by Enterprise, ahead of the house of Morgan, Weetamoe, and Boston's candidate, Yankee, leading Whirlwind, the Hammond-Thorne candidate.

Enterprise skippered by Harold S. Vanderbilt, has whipped Weetamoe, sailed by George Nichols, son-in-law of J. P. Morgan, in light air and in heavy air, the past two days, and whatever the official observers feel, the unofficial spectators have already decided that Enterprise is a better all-round boat than Weetamoe.

Select Boat To-day

The committee selecting the defender to-day, again reserved the privilege of waiting until the start before announcing the pairing in the match races, or the course.

The arrival of Shamrock V, Sir Thomas Lipton's fifth challenger for the America's Cup, was impressive in more ways than one. She glided into a mooring in Brenton's cove, amidst the four American defender candidates with guns booming and whistles shrilling, but an hour after Yankee and Enterprise had broken all records for a yacht race. Probably one of the victors of yesterday's races will meet her in the international yacht classic, September 13, but be that what it may, the crews of the four candidates lined the rails and gave Sir Thomas's challenger a hearty cheer.

Dominion Yachtsmen Hold 4 Point Lead

SEASIDE PARK, N. J., Aug. 22 —(CP)—The International sloop races between Canada and the United States were to be resumed today with the Dominion's yachtmen holding a four point lead.

Two races today and two tomorrow will conclude the series begun at Montreal, Aug. 2 and 3. The Canadians scored 22 points to 18 for the United States in the four races sailed in Canada and their skipper, George Hamilton and Sonny Hanna, hoped to maintain that advantage in the second half of the series. Canada has won the series for three consecutive years.

OVER The KITTY By "Newsie"

Daily Happenings on Peterborough Bowling Club's Greens.

(By Newsie.)

Well, it's all over, but what a night it was! Our first dance was a real success, and everybody went home well satisfied, promising to return for the next dance, two weeks' hence.

Looking over those present, "Newsie" saw the Misses D. Foster, A. Picard, M. Rene, H. Smithson, F. Hatley, M. Denne, O. Wright, E. Robinson, L. Wright, F. Hill, H. Johnson, D. Pogue, M Sedgewick, A Bagnall, H Herron, M. Nixon, C. Fitzpatrick, M. Fitzpatrick, G. Hewitt, D. Gray, B. Foster, I. Oke; Messrs. D. Grant, H. Sisson, C. Richmond, C. Wickland, J. Hall, F. Stanwood, J. Minicola, J. F. Kirkcaldy, H. Northrop, L. H. Bearne, A. Rene, P. Sexsmith, V. McCabe, J. A. Mackenzie, H. E. Barnett, J. Skinner, F. Doig, J. Lesurf, R. E. Sturgeon, H. Coleman, H. R. Sills, H. A. Wilson, F. E. Craseter, F. Mansbridge, A. Dickison, A. H. DuChene; Mr. and Mrs. C. Brewer, Mayor Denne, Mr. and Mrs. Bredin, Mr. and Mrs. McLeish, Captain and Mrs. H. J. Devey, Dr. and Mrs. H. Young, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Fitzpatrick, W. N. Gray and a host of others.

During an intermission the Mayor made a few remarks as to the merits of the bowling club, and its value to the city, urging those present to continue their support, and on all sides praise was handed to those responsible for the dance, encouraging them to repeat regularly

The floor was voted to be the best in the city; music was provided bountifully by the Paragon Revellers under the leadership of George Coleman, Jr., and even your "Newsie" is lost for words to describe everything. It might be added here that this is the first time "Newsie" has found himself in that predicament.

In a more humorous strain (without mentioning any names). One of our outstanding skips, initialed G. C., was approached to attend the dance. He frankly admitted that he was crippled with a Methodist foot, and an Anglican disposition. Rather a serious complaint we would say.

Prior to the dance last night, Johnny Howden handed Doc. Allan one beautiful trimming, but in view of the support Reg. Dyer was giving him one can but sympathise with the doctor.

It is now in the wee small hours of the morning, and in the rush to retire it was almost forgotten to be mentioned that the spot-dance prize was won by Miss Dorothy Foster and H.. McCullogh, while a lucky ticket prize, which was drawn by the Mayor, was won by Miss A. Picard and J. Lesurf.
